Frankly, while we are running on Madokaverse core, the overall sum of anime we have taken pieces from is probably over a dozen now (RailDex, Im@s, BRS, NGE, Black Lagoon, Rival Schools...)

You follow Madoka cautiously as she sets off towards the building, keeping in pace with her. It's quite hard not to - the surrounding wreckage that is Mitakihara's ruins seems to move on its own accord wherever she steps, the floodwaters and flotsam parting and leaving a clean, impeccable surface for her to walk on. You try to keep within this sphere of convenient influence, and for the briefest of moments you're almost tempted to hold her hand. ...You know, to better keep pace with her and all. That's all.

...Ugh. Are you serious? Are you seriously getting attracted to this walking, black-eyed monstrosity cheerfully bending the rules of physics over with every step she takes? Not counting the fact that she's doing it in someone else's Barrier - to whom, by all rights, the laws of physics should very well belong to. No. Your sempai's enough to hold a candle for.

But you had to admit, Madoka was...charming in her own right. If you look at her from behind, where her eyes aren't all that visible, and the teeth aren't as prominent. She's even humming a tune while she's walking! A-and she's almost skipping! That's...that's what they call moe now, right? You've never believed in such a definition yourself, considering it a tawdry character template...b-but those ribbons, and the skirt--

"It's rude to stare, you know, Midori-chan," Madoka chimes, and you nearly trip facefirst into a puddle that hadn't quite eradicated itself in the pink-haired girl's presence. "I mean, if you're going to gawk, ask permission first! I don't mind so long as you do~"

N-no. Well, um. You'll keep it in mind, but you'd rather talk about...about her and your sempai, yes.

If she doesn't mind, what kind of past did the both of them share? How did they first meet?

"Hnn. Well, those are very good questions, actually!" Madoka turns to look at you, black eyes shining, a toothy smile on her lips. "I don't mind answering them if you're willing to listen! Let's see...um, no, you probably wouldn't want to know that, that's boring...no, not that, too--ah! Right! That's the perfect place to begin!"

It's then that she tells you about two girls - Madoka and Homura. Homura-chan was a shy girl, a delicate girl, someone who couldn't hurt a fly even if her life depended on it. Madoka, on the other hand, was brave, kind, and was the picture perfect example of a Magical Girl. It was supposed to be a secret, but Homura accidentally found out when Madoka had to rescue her. They became best friends after that, with Homura swearing to keep Madoka's secret with her.

But then something happened. Something bad. Something that tore the two friends apart, forever. One of them lost to the world, never to be seen again, and the other sacrificing her very soul to try and do the impossible. Even going so far as to destroy the entire world just so she could have what she wanted.

"Hmm, I don't really know what happened to either of the two girls, but I guess you could say that our situation is sort of like theirs! Or...or maybe it's really the same...or...hnn..." Madoka's lively voice trails off into an absent, distracted murmur. "I...it's not really clear sometimes..."

[]Ask about the event. What drove the two girls apart?
[]This Homura in her story...how did she destroy the world?

"H-how?" Madoka stops in her tracks to look up at you, her sunless eyes wide and staring, as if having just woken up from a deep sleep. "How Homura-chan destroyed the world...?"

You nod. Yes, how did Homura do that? Maybe...if you found out, you could--

"She...she didn't listen to Madoka," She murmurs, thick crimson blood welling up in the corners of her eyes. "Madoka told her that everything will be alright, that she won't forget her...b-but Homura didn't listen! She didn't listen to Madoka and wanted to change everything!"

It's here that the blood starts to drip - but unlike tears, the crimson drops took their time etching tracks on the girl's pale cheeks, as if creating furrows with a tattoo's permanence onto her faceas they flowed. Her gloved hands reaching up to claw at her own chest, at the Soul Gem sparking at her throat. "She DIDN'T LISTEN! ALL SHE THOUGHT ABOUT WAS BEING SELFISH! ALL SHE THOUGHT ABOUT WAS WHAT SHE WANTED, INSTEAD OF WHAT EVERYONE NEEDED!"

She is shouting now, and the skies of the barrier seem to darken at every shouted syllable. Even the shape hovering above the both of you changes as well, twisting its shape into something more terrifying, something more evil. The filthy puddles and floodwater start to crimson, bubbling, as if toxic, noxious fumes have just started to blossom underneath, along with the bloated bodies of the drowned bursting like boils.

Sempai, what the hell have you done? What can't you remember? What did you do to this girl?

[]Try to comfort her before the barrier is twisted further. Tell her that it was all Homura's fault.

For the second time in your life, you frantically pull someone about to go completely berserk into a hug.

Trying your best to ignore the ground shaking underneath your feet, or the ear-shattering crashes of thunder above you, or the stench floating up from the rotting biological slurry around you.

Bracing yourself for the inevitable hot stab of pain from when the shrieking girl in your arms finally snaps despite your best efforts, and try to tear you apart in her frenzied attempt to pull herself free.

Doing your best to simply hold on and provide the physical contact that you know is sorely needed right that very moment, with everything precariously teetering on the precipice.

You feel her stiffen the moment you wrap your arms around her, and over the din of the barrier twisting around you, you apologize. You didn't mean to bring up any painful memories, you whisper to her. She doesn't need to remember anything else. You just wanted to know more about her and Homura, that's all.

But she shouldn't say bad things about Homura, you remind her. Even with what she did - i-if she did do them in the first place - they're still friends, right? Madoka still cares for Homura, that's why she's doing this, right?

That's why the both of you will save her! Together!

The tremors, at this point, are no longer just tremors - it's a full-blown earthquake, and the explosions that nearly rupture your eardrums are the very earth splitting open in jagged fissures. The wind blowing isn't just the wind anymore - it's a thousand voices, screaming all at once, an unholy chorus. The stench is enough to make you physically ill, and another breath would be poison.

Ok guys. It's abit late but I've got a theory why Chiaki is witching out.

Remember the first witch we encountered? The mark on her forehead? Well that mark is relevant. There are these things in Kazumi Magica called Evil Nuts which are fake grief seeds. They can turn humans into pseudo-witches and magical girls into witches. In order for them to turn the victim they have to to applied DIRECTLY TO THE FOREHEAD!

So. I think that instead of Mirai turning to a witch because of her incubator, perhaps Jubey somehow 'used Mirai up' so he could teleport an evil nut into Chiaki's forehead and the her into a witch.

Ok next part of the theory. Barriers are supposed to the a representation of a magical girls psyche right? So because of the procedure, we are witnessing a slow motion witch transformation, where Homura's psyche is slowly being spread out.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/09/12(Sun)07:15 No.21960657

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just woken up in a puddle of your own vomit.

Not the best start for a rescue mission.

The first thing to greet you is the most hellish landscape imaginable: the ruined, flooded remnants of the city that you've lived in most of your life.

The second thing to greet you is worse than that.

It's the pink-haired girl that's haunted your nightmares ever since you met her that one night. The demonic pink-haired girl with the black eyes that belonged more on a bloodthirsty shark than anywhere else.

And to add to that, she'd just confirmed that this barrier - the barrier that you've willingly allowed yourself to be teleported into - belongs to the stupid, unreliable, amnesiac sempai that you're supposed to be rescuing.

You're not sure if you could deal with this.

You're not sure if you could deal with this at all.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/09/12(Sun)07:17 No.21960672

It took you a few seconds to figure it out. She used a strange name for your sempai, who you're familiar with as Chiaki Matsuda. The pink-haired terror had called her Homura-chan - the same name she'd called your sempai when you encountered her in your own illusion, moments before she shattered it.

Homura-chan. It's...it's a pretty name, certainly. Cooler-sounding than Chiaki. Maybe you could use it for a side story, or something. It has potential.

You just hope you get the chance to. What with your being inside a Witch Barrier and needing to rescue Chiaki on top of everything else.

Forcing the stab of fear and panic down - as well as the all-too-powerful impulse to run as fast as you can in the opposite direction - it's then that you pull yourself up to your feet, before turning slowly to face the only other occupant in the barrier. Willing yourself to look into her tar-black eyes, so black that you could easily see yourself reflected in both of them.

You manage to ask her, after a few false starts and her tilting her head to the side questioningly - like a cat - questions that you've been meaning to ask.

Where is Chiaki? Where is your sempai?

What's happened to her?

And why is she doing this to her?

It takes her a few moments to respond, her quizzical expression twisting into a disappointed pout. Her eyebrows furrowing delicately. Looking as if you've just asked her a barrage of distasteful questions about her dress sense, which, honestly, is really pushing the pink color scheme a bit too far. Well, the black ribbons are a bit of a nice offset--

"...Are you mental? Stop calling Homura-chan that stupid, silly nickname! It doesn't even fit! Chi-ya-kee...no! It's not as cool as Homura! I don't want to hear it ever again!" She stomps the ground with a black mary-janed foot, and you nearly stumble as the entire world seems to rock with the impact. "Homura-chan is Homura-chan, and I won't have you calling her strange names!"

The tremors stop after a while, with the pink-haired monstrosity looking quite cross with you. F-fine, fine, Homura. Whatever. You just want to find out where she is--

"She's here, of course! Where else do you think she'd be, if we're both inside her barrier?!" The girl throws her gloved hands up into the air in frustration. "Those stupid alien cats seriously need to pick their contractees better, they'll just pick any riffraff off the street just to get their quotas met! Any magical girl worth their Soul Gem knows that the Witch is always at the center of the Barrier, which is in that direction--"

She makes to raise a gloved hand to wrathfully gesticulate at the falling standards of Magical Girls today, when she suddenly stops - and narrows her sunless gaze at you, the scowl on her face deepening.

You involuntarily step back at this, and you make the mistake of blinking.

In that brief moment where you closed your eyes and opened them in the same heartbeat, she'd disappeared from her spot five feet away from you.

And reappeared right in your face.

"Why are you asking?" The girl all but growls, the unclean edge of long-lost sanity tainting her words. The scent of something...chokingly sweet and sugary in her breath, permeating her entire presence. "Why are you trying to find her? ARE YOU AFTER HOMURA-CHAN TOO?!"

You...you can't help but feel that you should be careful how you reply here.

How do you respond?

"Oh, is that it?" Just like that, the pink-haired girl's mood seems to turn a complete a hundred and eighty degrees - the rather oppressive mood lifted so quickly that it's almost like a switch was flipped somewhere. It's then that she hops back a step, twintails and skirt bouncing at the motion, before she clasps both hands in front of her and beams. "If you're just trying to help her than steal her away from me, then we don't have a problem! In fact, we can go look for her together if you want!" She spreads her arms wide. "There's a lot of ground to cover, after all, and even with everything I've got, I doubt I can find her as fast as I'd like to!"

A moment, and it's then that she pouts. "Well, no, I can just tear this barrier apart and find her that way, but...if I do it wrong, then I'd be killing her too, which is BAD. We don't want THAT to happen."

As if to emphasize her point, the monstrous cackle of the hovering nightmare above you echoes throughout the entire barrier, making a few of the ruined buildings collapse at the sheer volume of the unnatural laughter.

"U-uu, forget about that! We can go find her together!" It's then that you feel her gloved hands suddenly snatch one of yours up, clasping it between hers - and you force the reflex of pulling your hand away at the sensation of claws pressing against your skin. Her hands were warm and soft enough, yes, but her touch carried with it a sickening sense of revulsion. "It'll be just like an RPG! You can join my party, and we'll find the missing princess together!" She pauses at this, only to suddenly flush crimson. "W-well, for me, Homura-chan's been more of a prince than anything..."

You...well, there's no other way to say it, but you do have a bad feeling about this.

It's one thing to have yourself thrown into a Barrier to save your sempai, but...to join up with something like her? It makes for a good twist, sure, and you probably could use it in a future volume, but...this person, whoever and whatever she was, had been tormenting your sempai ever since you've met her. The reason why your sempai had always looked so haunted, so miserable, so...defeated.

You are teaming up with the one thing that turned your sempai into the self-loathing wreck that she was. To rescue her from the barrier she'd trapped herself in.

Desperate times call for desperate measures.

Your response had barely left your lips when the girl seems to almost bounce in manic glee, clasping your hand to her chest. Your fingertips brushing against the bright crimson Soul Gem sitting at the bottom of her throat. "R-Really?! You'll join me in trying to find Homura-chan? This...this is perfect! This is great! I can't believe it, someone's joined my party for once! YAY!"

You're...you're glad that she's pleased about it, but you don't think the party setting fits at all, here. It's not as if this is a game or anything...

"Oh, silly broccolihead! Of course I know that!" The girl pouts, before smiling again. "It's just easier to think about things like this! Homura-chan's always been about taking things seriously to the point that she'd be brooding and quiet a whole lot." She narrows her sharklike eyes and forces her lips into a disgruntled pout. "Like this, all the time, see? Always frowning, looking like the world owes her something. It doesn't help get anything done! Ah, but with the both of us, we'll find Homura-chan in no time flat!"

In any case, you should probably get going, right?

"Well, that's the plan, but first, um..." She turns towards you, a guilty look on her face. "You probably don't like being called broccolihead, right? I'm sorry, I don't really know who you are. M-maybe I did, but I don't remember anymore. I just saw how green your head is and went with it." A moment. "I guess...I guess you can call me Madoka. Madoka-chan, if you want." She manages a small smile. "What should I call you?"

Madoka. That's...you guess that's a cute name.

You were expecting something a bit more...Satanic, or something.

You give her your first name. Midori. She giggles at this.

"Green! Hahaha! Well, I guess that sounds better than a vegetable!" She looks you up and down, as if truly looking at you for the first time. "Hnn...well, you don't look half bad. Chest is way bigger than mine, though, but that's okay, Homura-chan's not into large boobies!"

That stung more than you thought it would.

"Anyway, yes! We should probably start, but..." It's then that she frowns. "I...I know I said something about her being in the center, but...that's the thing. I'm getting at least...four places where she could be, or where the center is. Maybe all of them are, or maybe just one of them." Madoka rubs her temples, as if trying to ease a migraine. "There's a fifth one pulsing out to me, too, but it feels different than Homura...that's probably your friend, if I'm not mistaken."

...Four locations? And Mirai? This...this is going to be more difficult than you thought, isn't it?

You glance at your bulky watch, and then at 'Madoka' - before getting her attention and asking her if it would be okay for you to take the call. Normally you'd probably just answer it, but...it's better to play it safe, right now, than find out the hard way that you've screwed up. She doesn't seem to be bothered much by it though, waving you off and grumbling something about timelines converging. You thank her, and you turn away from her to try and see how in the world could you operate this thing. Without accidentally calling Tiny Pete in.

Thankfully, you remember which button to push when you desperately need the huge robot to come to your rescue - and it's the button you avoid as you try poking a bit at the other ones. A beep, and a voice rendered scratchy by heavy static comes on the tinny speaker. It's...not very loud, but not loud enough for anyone else to overhear.

"Mido--Midori-chan?" It's Misaka's voice. "Midori-chan, can you hear Misaka? Midori-chan, report!"

You hastily reply to the affirmative. Yes, you can hear her, but barely. You're still alive, and where you're supposed to be...you think. What is she calling for?

"A-ah! Was calling to report about Tiny Pete, he is ready for deployment!" A moment. "A-and something else! We know Murderface still has Teleport Beacon, so we tried to track its signal at least!"

...That's great. That's great news!

"It's...but it's strange! We are detecting four signals! It is like there are four beacons instead of one, not counting Midori-chan's!"

And that doesn't help at all. ...Maybe it does to confirm Madoka's guesswork, but are they sure?

"Positive! Tiny Pete cannot lie!"

Well, that's just dandy--

"Midori, hey, Midori!" You feel an impossibly-sharp series of ice-cold claws scritch at the small of your back, through your clothes - and you very nearly have a small accident at the sudden, knee-shaking surprise of it. You turn slowly, and Madoka is there, seemingly eager to get things going. "Quit stalling and let's go already! The nearest Homura-chan's up north! If we're lucky, we can get there before she stops screaming!"

Screaming...? But you don't hear anything...

"Are you deaf? She's practically calling us! Come on!"

"Midori-chan?" The Teleport Beacon's tinny speaker comes alive again. "Midori-chan, useless brother is saying that he is detecting really strong Witch signature near you! Please be careful--"

The connection goes dead before Misaka could finish her sentence, or you to frame a response. You lower the bulky watch, and turn towards the pink-haired girl standing by your side, looking more and more impatient by the second.

"Are you done?" Madoka snaps at you. "Kh, if you weren't sent here to pick up after Homura-chan, I'd leave you to rot and find her myself! Now, let's go! We don't have a moment to lose!"

She points a gloved hand ahead, into the horizon. As soon as she does so, it's then that the barrier seems to subtly shift - and you see a tall, rather modern-looking building rise up from the ground. You've seen it before, and you've always wanted to step into its hallowed halls, just to see what it was like to get the best education money could buy.

Mitakihara Middle School. With the plexiglass walls and automatic seating and everything.

On another note, I want to say that hold off on asking about Mirai depending on how she takes the questions about Chiaki. If she opens up and is friendly, then we can sneak the questions about Mirai in. If she keeps up with the peevish and impatient attitude, skip the questions about Mirai or she might take offense at being distracted from "Homura-chan"

Do we have some kind of weapon or device like, Kyoko's spears, Sayaka's swords or Homura's shield? I don;t know if it's something every magical girl gets, but if we have something it may be worth getting it ready, or anything else we need to perform our abilities as we're in a witch's barrier

You follow Madoka cautiously as she sets off towards the building, keeping in pace with her. It's quite hard not to - the surrounding wreckage that is Mitakihara's ruins seems to move on its own accord wherever she steps, the floodwaters and flotsam parting and leaving a clean, impeccable surface for her to walk on. You try to keep within this sphere of convenient influence, and for the briefest of moments you're almost tempted to hold her hand. ...You know, to better keep pace with her and all. That's all.

...Ugh. Are you serious? Are you seriously getting attracted to this walking, black-eyed monstrosity cheerfully bending the rules of physics over with every step she takes? Not counting the fact that she's doing it in someone else's Barrier - to whom, by all rights, the laws of physics should very well belong to. No. Your sempai's enough to hold a candle for.

But you had to admit, Madoka was...charming in her own right. If you look at her from behind, where her eyes aren't all that visible, and the teeth aren't as prominent. She's even humming a tune while she's walking! A-and she's almost skipping! That's...that's what they call moe now, right? You've never believed in such a definition yourself, considering it a tawdry character template...b-but those ribbons, and the skirt--

"It's rude to stare, you know, Midori-chan," Madoka chimes, and you nearly trip facefirst into a puddle that hadn't quite eradicated itself in the pink-haired girl's presence. "I mean, if you're going to gawk, ask permission first! I don't mind so long as you do~"

N-no. Well, um. You'll keep it in mind, but you'd rather talk about...about her and your sempai, yes.

If she doesn't mind, what kind of past did the both of them share? How did they first meet?

"Hnn. Well, those are very good questions, actually!" Madoka turns to look at you, black eyes shining, a toothy smile on her lips. "I don't mind answering them if you're willing to listen! Let's see...um, no, you probably wouldn't want to know that, that's boring...no, not that, too--ah! Right! That's the perfect place to begin!"

It's then that she tells you about two girls - Madoka and Homura. Homura-chan was a shy girl, a delicate girl, someone who couldn't hurt a fly even if her life depended on it. Madoka, on the other hand, was brave, kind, and was the picture perfect example of a Magical Girl. It was supposed to be a secret, but Homura accidentally found out when Madoka had to rescue her. They became best friends after that, with Homura swearing to keep Madoka's secret with her.

But then something happened. Something bad. Something that tore the two friends apart, forever. One of them lost to the world, never to be seen again, and the other sacrificing her very soul to try and do the impossible. Even going so far as to destroy the entire world just so she could have what she wanted.

"Hmm, I don't really know what happened to either of the two girls, but I guess you could say that our situation is sort of like theirs! Or...or maybe it's really the same...or...hnn..." Madoka's lively voice trails off into an absent, distracted murmur. "I...it's not really clear sometimes..."

[]Ask about the event. What drove the two girls apart?

"H-how?" Madoka stops in her tracks to look up at you, her sunless eyes wide and staring, as if having just woken up from a deep sleep. "How Homura-chan destroyed the world...?"

You nod. Yes, how did Homura do that? Maybe...if you found out, you could--

"She...she didn't listen to Madoka," She murmurs, thick crimson blood welling up in the corners of her eyes. "Madoka told her that everything will be alright, that she won't forget her...b-but Homura didn't listen! She didn't listen to Madoka and wanted to change everything!"

It's here that the blood starts to drip - but unlike tears, the crimson drops took their time etching tracks on the girl's pale cheeks, as if creating furrows with a tattoo's permanence onto her faceas they flowed. Her gloved hands reaching up to claw at her own chest, at the Soul Gem sparking at her throat. "She DIDN'T LISTEN! ALL SHE THOUGHT ABOUT WAS BEING SELFISH! ALL SHE THOUGHT ABOUT WAS WHAT SHE WANTED, INSTEAD OF WHAT EVERYONE NEEDED!"

She is shouting now, and the skies of the barrier seem to darken at every shouted syllable. Even the shape hovering above the both of you changes as well, twisting its shape into something more terrifying, something more evil. The filthy puddles and floodwater start to crimson, bubbling, as if toxic, noxious fumes have just started to blossom underneath, along with the bloated bodies of the drowned bursting like boils.

Sempai, what the hell have you done? What can't you remember? What did you do to this girl?

[]Try to comfort her before the barrier is twisted further. Tell her that it was all Homura's fault.

For the second time in your life, you frantically pull someone about to go completely berserk into a hug.

Trying your best to ignore the ground shaking underneath your feet, or the ear-shattering crashes of thunder above you, or the stench floating up from the rotting biological slurry around you.

Bracing yourself for the inevitable hot stab of pain from when the shrieking girl in your arms finally snaps despite your best efforts, and try to tear you apart in her frenzied attempt to pull herself free.

Doing your best to simply hold on and provide the physical contact that you know is sorely needed right that very moment, with everything precariously teetering on the precipice.

You feel her stiffen the moment you wrap your arms around her, and over the din of the barrier twisting around you, you apologize. You didn't mean to bring up any painful memories, you whisper to her. She doesn't need to remember anything else. You just wanted to know more about her and Homura, that's all.

But she shouldn't say bad things about Homura, you remind her. Even with what she did - i-if she did do them in the first place - they're still friends, right? Madoka still cares for Homura, that's why she's doing this, right?

That's why the both of you will save her! Together!

The tremors, at this point, are no longer just tremors - it's a full-blown earthquake, and the explosions that nearly rupture your eardrums are the very earth splitting open in jagged fissures. The wind blowing isn't just the wind anymore - it's a thousand voices, screaming all at once, an unholy chorus. The stench is enough to make you physically ill, and another breath would be poison.

Ok guys. It's abit late but I've got a theory why Chiaki is witching out.

Remember the first witch we encountered? The mark on her forehead? Well that mark is relevant. There are these things in Kazumi Magica called Evil Nuts which are fake grief seeds. They can turn humans into pseudo-witches and magical girls into witches. In order for them to turn the victim they have to to applied DIRECTLY TO THE FOREHEAD!

So. I think that instead of Mirai turning to a witch because of her incubator, perhaps Jubey somehow 'used Mirai up' so he could teleport an evil nut into Chiaki's forehead and the her into a witch.

Ok next part of the theory. Barriers are supposed to the a representation of a magical girls psyche right? So because of the procedure, we are witnessing a slow motion witch transformation, where Homura's psyche is slowly being spread out.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/12/12(Wed)06:12 No.22007320

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just stopped a god from going completely insane.

Well, more insane than she is at the moment, it must be said.

But yes, you managed to prevent her from tearing apart the Witch Barrier that you've willingly had yourself zapped into. The Witch Barrier that, according to said insane god, belongs to the sempai that you're supposed to rescue. You stopped her from erasing everything from existence just by hugging her as tightly as you could and never letting go.

Saving the world with a hug. You'd have laughed at the thought if you weren't so terrified.

If only all your problems could be solved by doing something so simple.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/12/12(Wed)06:14 No.22007330

Your name is Midori Hanegawa, Callidus, and you are currently in Chiaki Matsuda's Barrier. At least, Madoka - the pink-haired girl in your arms crying tears of blood into your jacket - says so. In front of you is a giant building that you recognize as the ultra-modern Mitakihara Middle School - a school where only those who could afford homes in the Upper District may send their children to be educated in.

You weren't expecting to find it here of all places. Witch Barriers - in your limited experience of them - tended to be twisted visions of places that somehow relate to the Magical Girl the Witch once was. This was...a fairly accurate, if not a spot-on replica of the school. It even had the inherent air of smugness about it, like the building was trying to hint that it was better than all the other buildings. As if the students weren't smug enough, even the building had to be, too.

According to Madoka, your sempai - or one of her, anyway - is hiding deep inside the building. You're not too sure what you'd do when you found her, but you are definitely decided on the fact that you'd find her no matter what.

Even if...even if the unthinkable had happened. Even if you found her to be something that she wasn't.

You promised Misaka, after all.

It's the least you can do.

"I'm...I'm sorry," Madoka murmurs after a moment, stepping back from you. Sniffing demurely, she wipes at her bloody eyes with her own gloved hands, grotesquely staining the white silk crimson. Making her clawed hands look like she'd just ripped someone's heart out with them. "You...you weren't supposed to see that. I wasn't supposed to cry, not right then. D-dear me, I must look dreadful..."

Madoka giggles weakly, her voice fragile and vulnerable, just like how a child sounds when they're quite near to tears but trying valiantly not to do so.

"...Thank you." She suddenly says, out of the blue. A shy smile on her face. "No one's ever done that for me, before..."

How do you respond?

-[X] But, if it's not too forward, you think she shouldn't hold it against her friend. Everyone has their own quirks and everyone will be a little selfish at times. Friends are friends because they help each other out and stick together through thick and thin despite, or sometimes even because of, all the little things that annoy each other, aren't they?

Madoka nods, beaming. "Yes, I do feel better. In fact, I...I don't feel as lonely, now. I don't feel as angry as I usually do." She seems to consider this for a moment, as if puzzled by the entire thing. Her bloodstreaked fingers coming lightly upon her chest, brushing against the completely black Soul Gem at the base of her throat. "M-my heart's pounding...I'm...I'm not sure what I'm feeling, now..."

A moment more, and it's then that she looks back up at you, tilting her head slightly to the side. "I...I suppose that makes sense. Homura-chan was stupid to do that, but...friends are friends, right? You stick with them no matter how stupid they get, or how angry they make you. You don't rip out their hearts or throw them into a Witch Barrier to be eaten just because of something like that..."

Her voice trails off, deep in thought. "Maybe I owe Homura-chan an apology, huh...I might have been too harsh, there, but then again, I wasn't really myself at the time..."

...Well whatever she feels like saying to your sempai, she can say when the both of you have rescued her, right? You say as you gesture towards the building ahead. Of course, if she's feeling well enough to do so.

Madoka nods, her black-tied ponytails bouncing. "Oh, please don't worry about me! I'll be fine! And yes, we should start looking for Homura-chan - at least, the one hiding inside that place!" It's then that she grins. "A-and just because you were nice, I'll make it easier on the both of us! Instead of us running around that place and getting lost every so often, I'll just warp us around!"

Huh. Well. There's a thing. Being nice to insane gods does have its perks, you suppose.

Mado-Scanning...?

"Hnn, right! I can see three areas that aren't filled with flesh-eating familiars!" Madoka chirps. "The clinic, one classroom, and...and the rooftop! Yeah!" A moment. "There's also one place that feels like it's important somehow...I, I'm not sure where it is, but it has a really strong presence inside it, a scary one! I can warp you there too, though, if you want!"

She twirls again in place, stopping to face you, and grins.

What about telling her Mirai is to us what Homura is to her, and after rescuing the Homus we'll need her help to find Mirai as she needs our help to find the Homus?

You swallow with a dry throat as you consider your options, as presented to you by the smiling, black-eyed girl with the bloody hands and even bloodier smile. The tracks of dried blood on her cheeks making her look all the more frightening despite her cheerful, eager grin.

Flesh-eating familiars, she said. A presence that even an insane, eldritchian nightmare in a cute dress is wary of. You were expecting your sempai's Barrier to be bad, but not this bad. Not...horrifying in this kind of degree.

You finally decide, and pick the rooftop as your first choice. You're not sure how it figures out to your sempai's past - hell, you're not sure how this school figures out in Chiaki's history, besides the possibility that she may have studied here before taking up a contract - but it sounds like a good place to start looking, if any. You'll just work your way down the other places.

...Wait. If she studied here, then...she'd have worn that really cute uniform at some point, right? The one with the cream blouse, and the green skirt...?

"Oh, she did!" Madoka nods, smiling - and nearly making you jump at her sudden confirmation. You must have been thinking aloud, then. "She wore it all the time when she wasn't in her Magical Girl costume - and she looked really cute in it! She was really shy back then, too...!"

Your sempai? Shy...? It...it doesn't compute, you think to yourself, feeling your cheeks heat up at the thought. N-no, it doesn't compute at all!

"Well, the rooftop, then?" The pink-haired girl chimes in. "Ah, come on, Midori-chan, focus! We have to save Homura-chan, here! Stop daydreaming!" She waves a blood-clawed hand at your face, and you catch a whiff at how...sweet her blood smells. "Snap out of it! Focus, focus!"

Y-yes. Of course. You're focused. You're ready.

Rooftop. yes. You want to go to the rooftop.

"Right! Rooftop it is!" She holds out her hand, just as a sick pink shade of light seems to drip off of her, tendrils of corrupting energy curling and twisting off of her own malevolent aura. "I'll get you there in no time flat!"

Before sanity could rob you of muscle control, before common sense and instinct could force rationality into your limbs, you take her hand.

You are momentarily blinded by a million shades of black flooding your vision, and the cold, unnerving sensation of suddenly ceasing to exist.

You open your eyes to see...the rooftop of Mitakihara Middle School.

It's...not the rooftop you were expecting. Sure, there's the usual railings you can look over, the chain mesh to prevent anyone from falling over, but...it looks more like the rooftop of a palace, than anything. If palaces had rooftops like these, you're not sure. But it's really rich-looking, really grand, really expansive. You'd have to pay an attendant huge money to draw something like this in a scene. At the very farthest end, you see a doorway, most probably leading into the school proper.

There's no one here.

Not even Madoka. It's just you--

Wait.

No, there's....someone there. At the corner. A gray figure. A young woman, wearing the uniform of the school. Her long black hair falling down her back, sweeping down and flaring slightly at the ends.

Her features are indistinct, but you have the strangest feeling that you'd recognize her if you walk closer.

What do you do?

[]Try calling out to Madoka. Where is she?
[]Call out to the girl.

While you're...somewhat relieved that Madoka isn't around, it's just as unnerving to be left alone in a Barrier. Sure, the pink-haired girl seemed just as unhinged as she looked, but she seemed genuinely eager to help out and keep you company. As twisted as it was, you were getting into the whole RPG party deal, as a way to cope with how disturbing it already was to walk around the twisted nightmare of your sempai.

You're tempted to call out to her, see if she'd reply or pop up again, but that could probably wait, you decide.

Instead, you make your way towards the only other occupant of the roof. The person in gray, just near one of the chain-mesh railings. Cautiously, you make your approach, slightly disturbed at the fact that your footsteps have absolutely no sound to them.

As you move closer - you realize two things: the first being that the girl isn't wearing a gray version of the Mitakihara Middle School uniform at all. Much more disturbing than that, she's actually in grayscale - as if some lazy artist had forgotten to color her in along with the background. Almost like some sort of spectre, or shadow.

The second thing you notice that she is, in fact, your sempai.

Murderface. Chiaki Matsuda. Homura.

You stop a cautious five paces away from her, bracing yourself to react at a moment's notice should something untoward happen. Swallowing painfully, you call out to her.

You've barely uttered your sempai's name when she looks down at her hands. A silver band on her ring finger glinting as she does so.

This is it. This is exactly it.

Underneath Pinky's cheerful blood and black eyes and stench of death and all that stuff, there is something who loves Homura purely and deeply and is willing to pull out her heart.

An angry, scared girl who just wants to make things better, even though she knows it's far past the time and even her ability to do that.

You manage to work up a sheepish smile as you turn slowly to face her, and you hold up the mysterious envelope as you do so. You tell her that you found it right there, where what you thought was an apparition of Chiaki--er, Homura-chan was. She seemed to look different from her usual self, though - this apparition had long black hair, instead of the short hairstyle that you've grown accustomed to seeing your sempai in.

"Oh, an envelope! That...that looks like a love letter!" Madoka's eyes widen at the sight of the small envelope, the pure-black orbs seemingly focusing on the pink sticker. "A-at least, I think it looks like one! I...I kind of remember getting some, in the past, but it's been a really long while since..."

A love letter, huh? You turn the envelope over in your hands. Well, it does sort of resemble something like that. Not that you ever got any when you were still studying - rather, you've drawn Miracle Midori having her shoe locker being filled with the things on a regular basis, especially during Volume 3. Murder Mayumi would always make off with the whole lot, however, burning them at the school rooftop in a barely-concealed fit of jealousy.

...When you think about it, you're kind of pathetic, aren't you?

"A-ah! And yes, I remember! Homura-chan wore her hair long back then, too!" The pink-haired horror bounces on her feet energetically, snapping you out of your reveries. "It was really stylish and cool! And she'd do this cool flipping thing with one hand--" She reaches up and flips one of her ponytails back, while slightly craning her neck in the other direction, in a gesture that's both aloof and yet...indeed, totally stylish and very cool. "--whenever she did or said something awesome!"

You'd have to take note of that. It won't translate well on manga, but animated...

"Well, what are you waiting for, Midori-chan? Open it already! I wanna see what's inside!" She needles, and you quickly acquiesce, carefully tearing the envelope open. You reach in with a hand and take out what appears to be a carefully folded-up note. You unfold the paper with an equal amount of care, and hold it so that Madoka could read alongside you.

The handwriting was strangely familiar, all pretty curves.

>I haven't forgotten. I've never forgotten.
>I just couldn't live with the fact that you're gone.
>Or the fact that no one remembers you. Not even your own mother.

>I am prepared to be hated, to be reviled.
>I do not entertain the possibility of ever being forgiven.
>But I cannot live in a world without you in it.
>I cannot accept that I have to exist in a universe where you can't.

The note ends there, without a signature or a postscript.

"...That's...um..." Madoka frowns, stepping back. "I don't...I don't understand. I told her that we'd be together no matter what happened. I promised her that I wouldn't forget her, and that I'd be there waiting for her when she..." She shakes her head, seemingly confused at the same time frightened. "I...M-Midori-chan, throw that note away. It's meaningless. A-and let's go somewhere else, please!"

You feel something hard, small and circular inside the envelope. It feels like some sort of ring. Madoka doesn't seem to have noticed it yet.

How do you react?

Willing yourself to stay calm - as she should too, and not panic or go maudlin over a simple, harmless letter - it's then that you make a slow show of tapping the small envelope on your upturned palm. You tell her that yes, you'll throw the letter away, but there's something else inside the envelope that she might want to see. You may be wrong, but the letter itself may be from her friend, Homura-chan - and whatever it was left inside the small paper container was meant for her, too.

"E-eh? Something for me...?" Madoka squeaks, cautiously moving forward again - and just as she does so, a small, rather dented ring falls out of the envelope and onto your palm. It's quite in a sad state, with scratches and gouges over what should be supple, polished silver. The inset where the gem should be is empty, scorched, with some speckles of purple amethyst melted into the metal.

"That's..." The pink-haired girl makes a mournful sound as she reaches for it. "...Homura-chan's ring. Her...her Soul Gem, right before I...I..." She shakes her head, and looks up at you, eyes wide. "C-can I...?"

Her words catch at her throat as you nod, allowing her to take the ring from you. You hear her very nearly sob as she does -and it's then that you remark, quietly, that the letter didn't seem to be meaningless at all. Homura-chan, despite the mistakes she'd made, no matter how horrible they were...it seems that she really loved Madoka that much. Finding living without her so unbearable that she was willing to sacrifice everything, to be hated and reviled. just for a chance to be with Madoka again.

...You don't know all the details, of course, but that's what you gleaned from what you've seen so far.

Madoka seems silent at your words, and you see the ring disappear in a brief plume of pink flame, just as her fingers close over it.

What do we actually know about Midori's character, anyway? She's infatuated with Murderface, she's got a wild imagination, she's willing to go along with rape of innocent girls, she does get angry and upset when pushed into hard questions.

Would she be willing to try saving a god by risking angering her? Why would she?

Would she actually be wanting to try that to help out her beloved to be happy with this crazy witch thing? She might do, but it's an uncertain thing from what I'm reading into it.

Pinky's not being terrifying at the very moment, so there's a point in actually helping her, admittedly.

Quickly thinking back on the choices she gave you earlier, you decide upon classroom. Madoka merely nods at this, and holds her hand out to you once more - her sunless eyes now narrowed, spiteful, suspicious. You make to reach for her hand, when you suddenly realize that you may not see her for a while after this, just like what happened with your first warp.

She doesn't seem to be in the mood, but you believe that it's better to ask now than catch her unaware later, which could potentially cause more trouble than the sort you may get right now. So, just before your fingers touch Madoka's gloved, bloodstained ones - you ask her about the strange place. What was so scary about it? What was it that made her want to leave it immediately?

"...The person I hate was in that place," She all but spat, her words dripping thick with petulant hate and venom. "Crying. Helpless. Defenseless. I couldn't stand to see her like that, looking so useless. So worthless."

Before you could ask who it was, she'd already reached for your hand - and the world disappears once more.

It reappears as soon as you remember that you have eyes to open.

You are in the middle of a classroom. Transparent plexiglass walls, scrolling whiteboard, automatic chairs that unfold from the floor. Once, in a simpler and much more colorful time of your life, you'd have given anything to be here, to study where the elite of Mitakihara could.

How times change.

The room is empty, again, but in a strange twist, all the tables and chairs are unfolded, seemingly waiting for the students to come in. A few moments more of waiting - and it's then that you see yet another grey shape, sitting in one of the tables at the back row.

You call out to the apparition of your sempai. It's a bit disturbing how your voice doesn't seem to echo in this enclosed space, but at least you can hear it. It doesn't seem to catch the attention of the girl, though, and you try it again. And again. And again.

The fifth time, she turns towards you, looking completely irritated. You freeze for a moment - and you nearly, very nearly, laugh in surprise as you see for one brief second, your sempai looking like her old, ill-mannered, easily-irritable self. It's here then that you suddenly realize just...well, just how much you miss her. How the sempai that woke up after the procedure seemed like a complete stranger, someone you couldn't even look straight in the eye. Sure - she treated you with less suspicion and she was a bit more...considerate than the original, but it just wasn't the same. she didn't feel the same.

You reach up to wipe at the tears pricking at your eyes, and it's then that the long-haired ghost of Chiaki Matsuda vanishes, just like the first had. Leaving behind another envelope on the seat of the chair.

Another one. It's strange, it does kind of fit Madoka's idea of an RPG, doesn't it? Ghosts leaving behind messages. Warping through rooms to avoid encounters - a mysterious location with a seemingly powerful boss. You wonder, idly, if she's manipulating Chiaki's barrier to her own tastes? To provide herself with entertainment?

It's not as properly made as the first one. In fact, it's two pieces of notepaper, torn from a notebook, the first hastily folded into an envelope and the other folded and crammed inside. You make to open it when you feel someone come up from behind you once more. It's Madoka, of course, and her mood seems to be just as black as when she warped you here.

"Whining and crying all the time! Ugh, how did Homura-chan stand being around that crybaby?!" The pink-haired abomination snarls. It's then that her voice warps, into a cruel approximation of a simpering waif. "Boo hoo, being a magical girl is suffering! Sayaka-chan, please don't fight Kyoko-chan anymore, you're supposed to be friends! Kyuubey, please turn Sayaka-chan back from being the stupid monster that she is I HATE HER SO MUCH I WISH

WE WERE DEAD!"

The room shakes, and for one brief, dreadful moment, you fear the worst - but as soon as the tremors start, they stop, and you feel Madoka suddenly hugging you from behind. Burying her face into your back, her arms clasped around your stomach.

You try your best not to make any quick or sudden movements, while keeping a hold on the envelope.

"...Midori-chan, have you ever hated yourself for doing something...embarrassing...in the past?" Her voice is surprisingly calm, muffled against your jacket. She seems to be taking deep, slow breaths too, clearly trying to calm herself down. "Something you never want to be reminded of ever again, but you always get reminded somehow?"

How do you react?

How the sempai that woke up after the procedure seemed like a complete stranger, someone you couldn't even look straight in the eye. As with all story-based games (or interactive stories as in MGNQ's case), this is always something to consider. Yes it is probably possible to do everything right, but screwups and failures will create a more interesting and emotionally engaging story. Happy endings aren't always the best endings in a story.

I disagree with that sentiment.
The possibility of failure is the important component in creating an interesting and engaging story, not the failure itself.
Failure just for drama's sake is a piss-poor grab at the players' attention.

Bit late replying to this because I left to do something, but what the hey

You're correct in that the anticipation of failure creates good tension, but I take issue with your point that actual failure is a cheap emotional cash-in. The results of the protagonists failing in their goal can easily be an engaging story element and create interesting situations, whether or not you choose to label it as 'just for drama's sake'.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/12/12(Wed)15:29 No.22011553

Failure is a frustration and obstacle to a desired goal, or even having that goal become impossible to achieve.
Failure for failure's sake, or just because of a belief that it would make for interesting drama, only results in fury and anger for those whose goals have just been rendered impossible to attain.
A mistake resulting in a failure is one thing, but what you advocate is intentionally sabotaging success to acquire failure and frustration in order to create what you deem to be interesting situations, but which other players see as situations they want to avoid because it is not the outcome they want.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/12/12(Wed)06:12 No.22007320

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just stopped a god from going completely insane.

Well, more insane than she is at the moment, it must be said.

But yes, you managed to prevent her from tearing apart the Witch Barrier that you've willingly had yourself zapped into. The Witch Barrier that, according to said insane god, belongs to the sempai that you're supposed to rescue. You stopped her from erasing everything from existence just by hugging her as tightly as you could and never letting go.

Saving the world with a hug. You'd have laughed at the thought if you weren't so terrified.

If only all your problems could be solved by doing something so simple.

Your name is Midori Hanegawa, Callidus, and you are currently in Chiaki Matsuda's Barrier. At least, Madoka - the pink-haired girl in your arms crying tears of blood into your jacket - says so. In front of you is a giant building that you recognize as the ultra-modern Mitakihara Middle School - a school where only those who could afford homes in the Upper District may send their children to be educated in.

You weren't expecting to find it here of all places. Witch Barriers - in your limited experience of them - tended to be twisted visions of places that somehow relate to the Magical Girl the Witch once was. This was...a fairly accurate, if not a spot-on replica of the school. It even had the inherent air of smugness about it, like the building was trying to hint that it was better than all the other buildings. As if the students weren't smug enough, even the building had to be, too.

According to Madoka, your sempai - or one of her, anyway - is hiding deep inside the building. You're not too sure what you'd do when you found her, but you are definitely decided on the fact that you'd find her no matter what.

Even if...even if the unthinkable had happened. Even if you found her to be something that she wasn't.

You promised Misaka, after all.

It's the least you can do.

"I'm...I'm sorry," Madoka murmurs after a moment, stepping back from you. Sniffing demurely, she wipes at her bloody eyes with her own gloved hands, grotesquely staining the white silk crimson. Making her clawed hands look like she'd just ripped someone's heart out with them. "You...you weren't supposed to see that. I wasn't supposed to cry, not right then. D-dear me, I must look dreadful..."

Things that happened:
>We forfeited the match because lethal force in a sparring match with a friend is not kosher.
>Mirai went apeshit during interrogation because she was shoved into a computer terminal, complete with total sensory deprivation save for the words we were typing.
>Juubey ASSUMED DIRECT CONTROL of the terminal to cajole us into handing back Midori.
>We called him a dickbutt.
>Multiple times.
>He threatened to remotely blow up Mirai's Soul Gem.
>We called him a dickbutt.
>Multiple times.
>Attempted to grab the Gem while teleporting out.
>Chiaki was blocked from leaving by... something...
>Witch Barrier appeared.
>Here comes Magical Midori to save the day.
>Pete on standby for backup.
>OH SHIT IT'S FAUST.
>She's surprisingly chill.
>But a little hung up on Homura.
>And GUESS WHOSE WITCH BARRIER THIS IS.
>Hint: it's not Mirai, and Faust doesn't have one.
And that just about brings us back to the present.

Madoka nods, beaming. "Yes, I do feel better. In fact, I...I don't feel as lonely, now. I don't feel as angry as I usually do." She seems to consider this for a moment, as if puzzled by the entire thing. Her bloodstreaked fingers coming lightly upon her chest, brushing against the completely black Soul Gem at the base of her throat. "M-my heart's pounding...I'm...I'm not sure what I'm feeling, now..."

A moment more, and it's then that she looks back up at you, tilting her head slightly to the side. "I...I suppose that makes sense. Homura-chan was stupid to do that, but...friends are friends, right? You stick with them no matter how stupid they get, or how angry they make you. You don't rip out their hearts or throw them into a Witch Barrier to be eaten just because of something like that..."

Her voice trails off, deep in thought. "Maybe I owe Homura-chan an apology, huh...I might have been too harsh, there, but then again, I wasn't really myself at the time..."

...Well whatever she feels like saying to your sempai, she can say when the both of you have rescued her, right? You say as you gesture towards the building ahead. Of course, if she's feeling well enough to do so.

Madoka nods, her black-tied ponytails bouncing. "Oh, please don't worry about me! I'll be fine! And yes, we should start looking for Homura-chan - at least, the one hiding inside that place!" It's then that she grins. "A-and just because you were nice, I'll make it easier on the both of us! Instead of us running around that place and getting lost every so often, I'll just warp us around!"

Huh. Well. There's a thing. Being nice to insane gods does have its perks, you suppose.

"Okay okay!" Madoka twirls in place, stopping to face the building in front of you - and peeks through an index and middle finger splayed in front of her right eye, her hand held in a sideways Victory sign. "Mado-Scanning Go!"

Mado-Scanning...?

"Hnn, right! I can see three areas that aren't filled with flesh-eating familiars!" Madoka chirps. "The clinic, one classroom, and...and the rooftop! Yeah!" A moment. "There's also one place that feels like it's important somehow...I, I'm not sure where it is, but it has a really strong presence inside it, a scary one! I can warp you there too, though, if you want!"

She twirls again in place, stopping to face you, and grins.

You swallow with a dry throat as you consider your options, as presented to you by the smiling, black-eyed girl with the bloody hands and even bloodier smile. The tracks of dried blood on her cheeks making her look all the more frightening despite her cheerful, eager grin.

Flesh-eating familiars, she said. A presence that even an insane, eldritchian nightmare in a cute dress is wary of. You were expecting your sempai's Barrier to be bad, but not this bad. Not...horrifying in this kind of degree.

You finally decide, and pick the rooftop as your first choice. You're not sure how it figures out to your sempai's past - hell, you're not sure how this school figures out in Chiaki's history, besides the possibility that she may have studied here before taking up a contract - but it sounds like a good place to start looking, if any. You'll just work your way down the other places.

...Wait. If she studied here, then...she'd have worn that really cute uniform at some point, right? The one with the cream blouse, and the green skirt...?

"Oh, she did!" Madoka nods, smiling - and nearly making you jump at her sudden confirmation. You must have been thinking aloud, then. "She wore it all the time when she wasn't in her Magical Girl costume - and she looked really cute in it! She was really shy back then, too...!"

Your sempai? Shy...? It...it doesn't compute, you think to yourself, feeling your cheeks heat up at the thought. N-no, it doesn't compute at all!

"Well, the rooftop, then?" The pink-haired girl chimes in. "Ah, come on, Midori-chan, focus! We have to save Homura-chan, here! Stop daydreaming!" She waves a blood-clawed hand at your face, and you catch a whiff at how...sweet her blood smells. "Snap out of it! Focus, focus!"

Y-yes. Of course. You're focused. You're ready.

Rooftop. yes. You want to go to the rooftop.

"Right! Rooftop it is!" She holds out her hand, just as a sick pink shade of light seems to drip off of her, tendrils of corrupting energy curling and twisting off of her own malevolent aura. "I'll get you there in no time flat!"

Before sanity could rob you of muscle control, before common sense and instinct could force rationality into your limbs, you take her hand.

You are momentarily blinded by a million shades of black flooding your vision, and the cold, unnerving sensation of suddenly ceasing to exist.

You open your eyes to see...the rooftop of Mitakihara Middle School.

It's...not the rooftop you were expecting. Sure, there's the usual railings you can look over, the chain mesh to prevent anyone from falling over, but...it looks more like the rooftop of a palace, than anything. If palaces had rooftops like these, you're not sure. But it's really rich-looking, really grand, really expansive. You'd have to pay an attendant huge money to draw something like this in a scene. At the very farthest end, you see a doorway, most probably leading into the school proper.

There's no one here.

Not even Madoka. It's just you--

Wait.

No, there's....someone there. At the corner. A gray figure. A young woman, wearing the uniform of the school. Her long black hair falling down her back, sweeping down and flaring slightly at the ends.

Her features are indistinct, but you have the strangest feeling that you'd recognize her if you walk closer.

What do you do?

[]Try calling out to Madoka. Where is she?
[]Call out to the girl.

They are the same pinky. This is exactly why she's so dangerous.

She's not a split personality. She's just very, very unstable (i.e. batshit insane, from any perspective but hers).

The thing is, she's seen Homura's world be destroyed again and again and lived through a hundred thousand lives as well as again from the beginning of time (possibly?) and frankly, nothing actually does matter but Homura and herself. At all.

They guys, there is something we haven't done in a while.

Remember the numbers on the golden weapons, we had one hypothesis that the numbering follows the Major Arcana.

So.... what do you think numbers on the chain axes are going to be?

Personally I think its going to be:
XV: The devil.

Because Kharn does have a self centered world view and is quite impulsive.

A rasping of gears, a harsh metallic click, and the world freezes around you in a dull steel-cast gray.

And it's then that you hear it.

Crying.

Laughing.

Sobbing.

Giggling.

Two voices at once, behind you. The smell of blood mixed with perfume filling your nostrils like a stench.

The lights of the elevator flickering, uncertain in their slowness.

It's with a cold sweat that you realize that this...whoever it is in the elevator with you now - it's not Pinky at all. No cheerful pixie with the disturbing eyes and wide smile. Something she'd always been, but you'd never took the time to look properly.

Faust.

While you're...somewhat relieved that Madoka isn't around, it's just as unnerving to be left alone in a Barrier. Sure, the pink-haired girl seemed just as unhinged as she looked, but she seemed genuinely eager to help out and keep you company. As twisted as it was, you were getting into the whole RPG party deal, as a way to cope with how disturbing it already was to walk around the twisted nightmare of your sempai.

You're tempted to call out to her, see if she'd reply or pop up again, but that could probably wait, you decide.

Instead, you make your way towards the only other occupant of the roof. The person in gray, just near one of the chain-mesh railings. Cautiously, you make your approach, slightly disturbed at the fact that your footsteps have absolutely no sound to them.

As you move closer - you realize two things: the first being that the girl isn't wearing a gray version of the Mitakihara Middle School uniform at all. Much more disturbing than that, she's actually in grayscale - as if some lazy artist had forgotten to color her in along with the background. Almost like some sort of spectre, or shadow.

The second thing you notice that she is, in fact, your sempai.

Murderface. Chiaki Matsuda. Homura.

You stop a cautious five paces away from her, bracing yourself to react at a moment's notice should something untoward happen. Swallowing painfully, you call out to her.

You've barely uttered your sempai's name when she looks down at her hands. A silver band on her ring finger glinting as she does so.

You blink at this, leaning down to pick it up.

As soon as you do, the scent of corruption tickles your nostrils, and you feel a hand tug at your ribbon.

"Guh, sorry about that, Midori-chan! Something happened when I gave you a warp, I found myself in that strange place!" Madoka's voice chimes in your ear. "I almost tripped trying to get out of there, it was really scary!" She makes a disgusted sound. "Hey, what do you have there?"

You manage to work up a sheepish smile as you turn slowly to face her, and you hold up the mysterious envelope as you do so. You tell her that you found it right there, where what you thought was an apparition of Chiaki--er, Homura-chan was. She seemed to look different from her usual self, though - this apparition had long black hair, instead of the short hairstyle that you've grown accustomed to seeing your sempai in.

"Oh, an envelope! That...that looks like a love letter!" Madoka's eyes widen at the sight of the small envelope, the pure-black orbs seemingly focusing on the pink sticker. "A-at least, I think it looks like one! I...I kind of remember getting some, in the past, but it's been a really long while since..."

A love letter, huh? You turn the envelope over in your hands. Well, it does sort of resemble something like that. Not that you ever got any when you were still studying - rather, you've drawn Miracle Midori having her shoe locker being filled with the things on a regular basis, especially during Volume 3. Murder Mayumi would always make off with the whole lot, however, burning them at the school rooftop in a barely-concealed fit of jealousy.

...When you think about it, you're kind of pathetic, aren't you?

"A-ah! And yes, I remember! Homura-chan wore her hair long back then, too!" The pink-haired horror bounces on her feet energetically, snapping you out of your reveries. "It was really stylish and cool! And she'd do this cool flipping thing with one hand--" She reaches up and flips one of her ponytails back, while slightly craning her neck in the other direction, in a gesture that's both aloof and yet...indeed, totally stylish and very cool. "--whenever she did or said something awesome!"

You'd have to take note of that. It won't translate well on manga, but animated...

"Well, what are you waiting for, Midori-chan? Open it already! I wanna see what's inside!" She needles, and you quickly acquiesce, carefully tearing the envelope open. You reach in with a hand and take out what appears to be a carefully folded-up note. You unfold the paper with an equal amount of care, and hold it so that Madoka could read alongside you.

The handwriting was strangely familiar, all pretty curves.

>I haven't forgotten. I've never forgotten.
>I just couldn't live with the fact that you're gone.
>Or the fact that no one remembers you. Not even your own mother.

>I am prepared to be hated, to be reviled.
>I do not entertain the possibility of ever being forgiven.
>But I cannot live in a world without you in it.
>I cannot accept that I have to exist in a universe where you can't.

The note ends there, without a signature or a postscript.

"...That's...um..." Madoka frowns, stepping back. "I don't...I don't understand. I told her that we'd be together no matter what happened. I promised her that I wouldn't forget her, and that I'd be there waiting for her when she..." She shakes her head, seemingly confused at the same time frightened. "I...M-Midori-chan, throw that note away. It's meaningless. A-and let's go somewhere else, please!"

You feel something hard, small and circular inside the envelope. It feels like some sort of ring. Madoka doesn't seem to have noticed it yet.

How do you react?

Keep the ring, it might be part of Homura's soul or part of her memories that she might need

Ask Madoka if she wants to keep the letter and what the weird place was, tell her that Homura must have cared for her a lot if she was willing to go to such lengths to bring her back

Willing yourself to stay calm - as she should too, and not panic or go maudlin over a simple, harmless letter - it's then that you make a slow show of tapping the small envelope on your upturned palm. You tell her that yes, you'll throw the letter away, but there's something else inside the envelope that she might want to see. You may be wrong, but the letter itself may be from her friend, Homura-chan - and whatever it was left inside the small paper container was meant for her, too.

"E-eh? Something for me...?" Madoka squeaks, cautiously moving forward again - and just as she does so, a small, rather dented ring falls out of the envelope and onto your palm. It's quite in a sad state, with scratches and gouges over what should be supple, polished silver. The inset where the gem should be is empty, scorched, with some speckles of purple amethyst melted into the metal.

"That's..." The pink-haired girl makes a mournful sound as she reaches for it. "...Homura-chan's ring. Her...her Soul Gem, right before I...I..." She shakes her head, and looks up at you, eyes wide. "C-can I...?"

Her words catch at her throat as you nod, allowing her to take the ring from you. You hear her very nearly sob as she does -and it's then that you remark, quietly, that the letter didn't seem to be meaningless at all. Homura-chan, despite the mistakes she'd made, no matter how horrible they were...it seems that she really loved Madoka that much. Finding living without her so unbearable that she was willing to sacrifice everything, to be hated and reviled. just for a chance to be with Madoka again.

...You don't know all the details, of course, but that's what you gleaned from what you've seen so far.

Madoka seems silent at your words, and you see the ring disappear in a brief plume of pink flame, just as her fingers close over it.

Would she be willing to try saving a god by risking angering her? Why would she?

Quickly thinking back on the choices she gave you earlier, you decide upon classroom. Madoka merely nods at this, and holds her hand out to you once more - her sunless eyes now narrowed, spiteful, suspicious. You make to reach for her hand, when you suddenly realize that you may not see her for a while after this, just like what happened with your first warp.

She doesn't seem to be in the mood, but you believe that it's better to ask now than catch her unaware later, which could potentially cause more trouble than the sort you may get right now. So, just before your fingers touch Madoka's gloved, bloodstained ones - you ask her about the strange place. What was so scary about it? What was it that made her want to leave it immediately?

"...The person I hate was in that place," She all but spat, her words dripping thick with petulant hate and venom. "Crying. Helpless. Defenseless. I couldn't stand to see her like that, looking so useless. So worthless."

Before you could ask who it was, she'd already reached for your hand - and the world disappears once more.

It reappears as soon as you remember that you have eyes to open.

You are in the middle of a classroom. Transparent plexiglass walls, scrolling whiteboard, automatic chairs that unfold from the floor. Once, in a simpler and much more colorful time of your life, you'd have given anything to be here, to study where the elite of Mitakihara could.

How times change.

The room is empty, again, but in a strange twist, all the tables and chairs are unfolded, seemingly waiting for the students to come in. A few moments more of waiting - and it's then that you see yet another grey shape, sitting in one of the tables at the back row.

And then everything when to hell, Moemura was about to die then the anime Homura saved her and gave her a choice to either work for her or die.

Anyway, remember the first diary entry saying "Your are not who you think you are"

You call out to the apparition of your sempai. It's a bit disturbing how your voice doesn't seem to echo in this enclosed space, but at least you can hear it. It doesn't seem to catch the attention of the girl, though, and you try it again. And again. And again.

The fifth time, she turns towards you, looking completely irritated. You freeze for a moment - and you nearly, very nearly, laugh in surprise as you see for one brief second, your sempai looking like her old, ill-mannered, easily-irritable self. It's here then that you suddenly realize just...well, just how much you miss her. How the sempai that woke up after the procedure seemed like a complete stranger, someone you couldn't even look straight in the eye. Sure - she treated you with less suspicion and she was a bit more...considerate than the original, but it just wasn't the same. she didn't feel the same.

You reach up to wipe at the tears pricking at your eyes, and it's then that the long-haired ghost of Chiaki Matsuda vanishes, just like the first had. Leaving behind another envelope on the seat of the chair.

Another one. It's strange, it does kind of fit Madoka's idea of an RPG, doesn't it? Ghosts leaving behind messages. Warping through rooms to avoid encounters - a mysterious location with a seemingly powerful boss. You wonder, idly, if she's manipulating Chiaki's barrier to her own tastes? To provide herself with entertainment?

It's not as properly made as the first one. In fact, it's two pieces of notepaper, torn from a notebook, the first hastily folded into an envelope and the other folded and crammed inside. You make to open it when you feel someone come up from behind you once more. It's Madoka, of course, and her mood seems to be just as black as when she warped you here.

"Whining and crying all the time! Ugh, how did Homura-chan stand being around that crybaby?!" The pink-haired abomination snarls. It's then that her voice warps, into a cruel approximation of a simpering waif. "Boo hoo, being a magical girl is suffering! Sayaka-chan, please don't fight Kyoko-chan anymore, you're supposed to be friends! Kyuubey, please turn Sayaka-chan back from being the stupid monster that she is I HATE HER SO MUCH I WISH

The room shakes, and for one brief, dreadful moment, you fear the worst - but as soon as the tremors start, they stop, and you feel Madoka suddenly hugging you from behind. Burying her face into your back, her arms clasped around your stomach.

You try your best not to make any quick or sudden movements, while keeping a hold on the envelope.

"...Midori-chan, have you ever hated yourself for doing something...embarrassing...in the past?" Her voice is surprisingly calm, muffled against your jacket. She seems to be taking deep, slow breaths too, clearly trying to calm herself down. "Something you never want to be reminded of ever again, but you always get reminded somehow?"

How do you react?

As with all story-based games (or interactive stories as in MGNQ's case), this is always something to consider. Yes it is probably possible to do everything right, but screwups and failures will create a more interesting and emotionally engaging story. Happy endings aren't always the best endings in a story.

I disagree with that sentiment.
The possibility of failure is the important component in creating an interesting and engaging story, not the failure itself.

I don't think that we can necessarily turn Madoka "good". But reminding her that she is still a person might do wonders in making her less batshit crazy and malicious. And it's just a nice thing to do, in the end.

Bit late replying to this because I left to do something, but what the hey

You're correct in that the anticipation of failure creates good tension, but I take issue with your point that actual failure is a cheap emotional cash-in. The results of the protagonists failing in their goal can easily be an engaging story element and create interesting situations, whether or not you choose to label it as 'just for drama's sake'.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/12/12(Wed)15:29 No.22011553

Failure is a frustration and obstacle to a desired goal, or even having that goal become impossible to achieve.
Failure for failure's sake, or just because of a belief that it would make for interesting drama, only results in fury and anger for those whose goals have just been rendered impossible to attain.
A mistake resulting in a failure is one thing, but what you advocate is intentionally sabotaging success to acquire failure and frustration in order to create what you deem to be interesting situations, but which other players see as situations they want to avoid because it is not the outcome they want.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/13/12(Thu)07:19 No.22022779

You are a Magical Girl, and you're in the middle of a rescue operation in the most disturbing Barrier you've ever been in.

Your objective is to save your sempai; an unreliable, ill-mannered Vindicare who's ruined her voice with too much nicotine and whisky. She is also the current Warmaster-in-training in the Officio that you are now contracted to (in a very violent change of contract). Despite the fact that she drinks like a fish and smokes like a chimney, she had always smelled like pancakes. It's a subtle scent, but it's there.

You are currently being cuddled from behind by a pink-haired eldritchian horror who seems to be on a hair-trigger temper; and by hair trigger you mean that she is a hair away from tearing your digestive system out of you, whether she felt like it or just for fun.

Your backup is a young girl half your age with an unhealthy fascination for firearms and has a pet robot that's as big as a small building. Besides that and her brother, you're alone in this one.

No problem. No problem at all.

Volume 6, Page 30, specifically. The Rise of the Overfriend Arc.

She had to fight the tentacle god by herself, without Murder Mayumi's help.

This is no different, and will end the same way.

Hopefully with your sanity intact.

Carefully placing a hand on Madoka's own, her gloved hands clasped tightly together around your waist - you quietly tell her that yes, you do have something like that. You're pretty sure almost everyone has something embarrassing that they've done in the past that they'd rather forget. It's...it's a part of growing up, you tell her. A part of life. It's painful, sure, but everyone eventually moves past it. They have to keep going.

A moment of silence, before you give Madoka's hands a careful squeeze.

"You're not the person you were yesterday, Madoka-chan." You murmur. "Just like your friend, as stupid as she is, isn't the girl that broke your heart then."

She sniffs loudly, before slowly unclasping her arms around you. You turn around slowly to face her, and she seems to be pouting at you.

"...You know the right things to say at the right time," Madoka harrumphs, crossing both her arms over her chest. "That's...I guess that's pretty cool, but that makes you a bit suspicious, too."

W-well, you can see where she's coming from, but--

"Ah! Another envelope?" And just like another switch being flipped, an eager, sunny smile comes on the pink-haired horror's face. "Well, open it, then! Let's see what's inside!"

Not a porn manga, but a porn VN. A sidestory of a porn VN.
Which was popular enough to get its own spinoff. Which was far more popular than the original series. Kinda hard to follow, isn't it?

But still, sex is allowed on TV, but insertion isn't. Which makes me think her manga isn't really porn, just very close to it, if it got a TV adaptation greenlit.

You make to open the envelope, but you take a moment to remind Madoka to...calm down and take it easy, no matter what you find inside the envelope. You know that it may be about her friend Homura, and that it could bring up some painful memories, but getting mad about things doesn't help the both of you trying to find her, doesn't it?

"..." The pink-haired girl narrows her obsidian eyes at you, as if trying to glean anything from your already nervous expression. You try your best to look completely innocent, and it's then that you feel a single drop of cold sweat make its torturous way down the back of your neck.

"...Okay! I promise I'll take it easy!" Madoka chimes, smiling, putting a blood-smeared hand on her chest. "At the very least, I'll try my best!"

Right. Okay. That's...that's good. You let out the breath you've been holding, and carefully open the envelope. You pull out its contents, which consists of a hastily-folded piece of paper and nothing else.

The cellphone messages warning about Midori's illusion back on the first job of this quest and later about the Operation are kinda suspicious. If there IS a Homura/Chiaki local to this timeline, I wonder if Homura Prime is running around somewhere beneath Madoka's notice.

Of course, I can't begin to guess as to why she'd want to divert all of Madoka's attention to a very convincing replica. The most practical reason would be that she's working on something, and doesn't want an insane god-witch breathing down her neck. But then again, Madoka mentioned that all of the pain and such that has been happening over the past millennia has been for Homura's sake.

Yeah, at first Pinky thought she was just a copy, but later on she backtracked and said she wasn't so sure about that anymore.

You give Madoka a few moments to compose herself, taking care to fold the paper back into the envelope and slip it slowly, carefully, into your jacket pocket. If you were honest, you'd have thought that she'd react in a bad way to your doing that, but she seems much too out of sorts to even look up and notice.

Carefully zipping up that pocket, it's then that you murmur her name, and she slowly looks up at you. Her solid-black eyes reflecting your face once more, and you try not to be too disturbed at how pale and tired you look.

You ask her in the most quiet voice that you can if she needs some more time to get herself together, and if she feels up to it, maybe the both of you could go to the Clinic? You think it's time you moved on, anyway.

Madoka blinks her unnatural eyes slowly at this, before nodding.

"I...I suppose..." She murmurs, reaching out with one hand. "I...I guess I'll just warp you there again..."

You shake your head no, and she blinks once more. Tilting her head to the side, puzzled.

You'll be going together, you say. On foot. No warping. Just the both of you exploring the halls.

"B-but it's quicker this way..." Madoka seems stunned at this, but she lowers her hand. "I mean, um...I'm sorry if you think I'm being difficult and all, it's just that I really hate seeing that person..."

She doesn't have to apologize, you tell her. Besides, the both of you are looking for your sempai, right? You have to look out for each other. Besides, she'll take care of any flesh-eating familiars on the way, right?

"O-of course!" Madoka beams, instantly refilled with vigor once again. "I'll make sure they never get close to Midori-chan!"

That's the spirit!

...Mental note: Maybe a sidekick, Magical Mimiko, could be introduced in a future volume. Helpful, younger Magical Girl with loads of magic, but unable to control herself in the most inconvenient of times. Perfect!

You make to head out of the classroom with her when Madoka stops, suddenly.

"Um, Midori-chan, remember that strange, scary thing I told you about? Earlier?"

The one in the fourth location? Wasn't that the person she hated?

"N-no, well...not really," Madoka frowns, shaking her head. "T-that was something else. I...I think it's trying to find us. I can sense it--"

It's then that you hear footsteps. Clanking, metallic footsteps, reminiscient of a former warmaster. But this is heavier, with the underlined growl of machinery. You've heard such a sound before, with Tiny Pete.

...You didn't accidentally trip the Teleport Beacon, did you? You glance at the bulky watch on your wrist. It doesn't look like it's been activated, but you're not sure.

What do you do?

All jokes aside, I'm wondering if this is necessarily a bad thing. Homura kind of broke everything all to hell, and Pinky's trying to do SOMETHING with it.

I feel it's entirely possible that we've spent a lot of the quest rooting against the (admittedly psychotic) 'good guy'. If she recruits Midori - and maybe memory-regained Homuriaki - and we get a chance to fix this by uniting the Golden Weapons, then this is great.

That's just speculation. I do agree Midori's probably being influenced by now, either way.

Mami has done nothing but care relentlessly for Chiaki since the moment she fell out of a Witch Barrier, despite Chiaki's generally being kind of an awful person.

Whatever it was, it doesn't sound like good news. Not good news at all.

"I-it's coming closer," Madoka's eyes grow wide, fearful. "M-Midori-chan, I can hear it, I can...I can sense it trying to f-find me, trying to track my scent..."

And it does sound like the heavy, grinding footsteps seemed to be, indeed, getting closer. The whine of servos hiding another sound entirely: the rasp of a long, heavy blade being dragged across scarred cement, leaving behind a deep, jagged furrow in its trail. Whoever - or whatever - is heading towards you, it's very well armed.

Alright. You had few options as it is. Warping to the Clinic sounds like a good idea at the moment, but you'd already promised Madoka - and you didn't want to find out how she was when she was disappointed with you. From the rudimentary Witch-hunting lessons you remember, you only used magic in a barrier if you were absolutely confident that you'd get away with it, or that you were fully prepared to tackle the Witch head on - as any magic usage could potentially lure any nearby familiar towards you.

You manage to work up a smile, before taking Madoka's hand in yours. You tell her, as quietly as you can, that the both of you seem to have reached the stealth section of the dungeon, and that she'll have to be just as quiet as you until you get to safety. She nods at this after a moment, seemingly buying it, and it's then that you ask if she could...take care of it, if it came down to an encounter.

"I...I suppose I could," Madoka murmurs, but she's not too confident. "Maybe if I went full-out, but--"

Well, that's fine. You'll try to see if it doesn't have to come to that.

Hiding would require magic which is both dangerous and is an uncertain prospect since if it is a familiar then it will be attracted to us

So run

What are Midori's powers again?

Easy mode: Take the guise of someone, as long as she has studied them for a while

Nightmare mode: Projects an invisible barrier in which people will see Midori as the person they expect.

Not much help.

Thinking about it, doesn't the classroom have GLASS WALLS!

My sides. You're suggesting to try and protect FAUST'S sanity points?!

You decide to run.

Ignoring the blood pumping in your ears, or the way your heart seems to have caught in your throat. The heavy footsteps creating reverberating tremors on the floor, making the plexiglass walls around you rattle gently.

It's with complete and utter haste that you tear out of the classroom, Madoka in tow. Both your footsteps quick, hurried, desperately fast - a contrast to the plodding, inexorable hammer-falls of the pink-haired girl's pursuer. You don't even dare to look back - the thought of seeing what could terrify someone like the girl with the sunless eyes a bit less terrifying than the thought of seeing...well, your senpai, twisted horribly into something else. Turned into a mindless creature of hate and despair.

It was only until you finally managed to turn the corner - hopefully out of your hunter's field of vision - that you thought of the possibility that it might be Wakaba Mirai. That she was the predator here.

You shake your head, and continue running. Madoka squeaking, pleading with you to slow down a bit, but you ignore her. The both of you need to get to the Clinic before it catches her scent again--

>What kind of friend are you?

Wakaba Mirai's voice tickles the edge of your hearing, and you grit your teeth against it.

...No. No time for that. Clinic. Must get into Clinic.

You arrive at the stairs, and without missing a beat, you scoop Madoka up into your arms and carry her up them. She holds on, clearly frightened, shivering in your grasp. She weighs like a feather, and feels just as fragile.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/13/12(Thu)11:21 No.22024768

>>22024754

It's then that you see it. The only other room - barring the privies - that had opaque walls.

You pull the door open - a bit of a feat, considering your hands are full of crazy pink goddess - but you manage it, and you let Madoka down just as you push the door close again. Just in time, as you could hear those infernal footsteps start up again behind you. Dizzy with fear, you pull Madoka down on the floor with one hand, and your Soul Gem with your other. If worst came to worst, then...you'd have to transform, and do whatever it took to at least drive the monster off.

You're not too sure of your chances there.

The footsteps come closer, and it's then that you see a silhouette come up on the clinic door's half-window. The glass isn't that transparent, it's kind of opaque, but the silhouette...

You desperately gesture to Madoka to keep quiet as the footsteps slow to a halt in front of the door.

You hunker down even more, pulling Madoka tighter to you as you force yourself to remember all the lessons, all the skills you've learned as a Callidus that would help in keeping yourself as quiet as possible. Slowing one's heart rate and breathing down, silencing the inner voice, willing one's self to completely be still and motionless. You try to do all these things at once, forcing yourself to remember your training.

Maybe you shouldn't have taken it so easy during Basic, but them's the breaks.

What happens as soon as you do is the longest two minutes of your life. The beast behind the door - the flame dancing, curling lazily as it pulsed, once, twice - does not even make a single move to enter the Clinic, as if having simply decided to take a brief detour and stare incomprehensibly at a door in its path. The wait becomes so interminable that you actually find yourself wishing it would put you out of your misery and smash through. It would certainly be better than all this...waiting.

At the very end of its impromptu vigil, it seems to open its mouth and let out a low, guttural growl - so deep and harsh that the door's glass pane rattles in its frame, along with the rest of the door itself. As if it was trying to talk, to speak, but was unable to due to a mouth much too full of sharp teeth.

The footsteps resume again as the beast turns back on the path it'd been on. The heavy, trundling, plodding gait of armored legs punctuating the low shriek of a sharp, heavy blade being dragged across cement. The sharp song twinned with the whine of servos in motion.

You trust yourself to breathe ten minutes after the footsteps had receded into silence. Madoka squirms against you again, and she says your name in a pained whisper. She has to do it twice before she gets your attention, and you ask her what's wrong.

"Y-you're hurting me," she squeaks. "You're holding me too tightly..."

You hastily apologize for it, and slowly disentangle yourselves from each other. It's with infinite care that the both of you pull yourselves back up to your feet, dreading the sudden return of the beast earlier. Fortunately, it doesn't seem to be interested in Madoka anymore.

You hear something else, though. Someone's deep, regular breathing, the kind that says that someone's sleeping quite deeply.

Someone else was inside the Clinic with the both of you.

You don't even have to tell Madoka. She looks at you and nods, and the both of you quietly try and investigate the sound. The Clinic's small, unremarkable for one made for Mitakihara Middle School students - there's a Nurse's Desk and Chair at one corner, a medicine cabinet in the other, and two beds with privacy curtains taking up the bulk of the space. One of the beds are unoccupied, its drapes drawn back - but the other isn't. In fact, it's where you think the sound is coming from.

You draw the privacy curtain back cautiously.

And it's then that you see...your sempai. Not gray, but in the flesh.

Wearing the Mitakihara Middle School Uniform. Her black hair grown out long and thick and tied into two considerable braids. Each one tied off with a nice purple bow, to match her eyes.

She is on her side, curled up meekly like a squirrel underneath the covers. Her glasses clutched to her chest. Her expression as she sleeps a bit troubled, but otherwise peaceful.

"...That's...that's her," Madoka murmurs, tearing up again. But this time, it's not blood she's crying.

What do you do?

I am actually kind of jelly of this. I don't know how it happened, but I seem to be never seem to be taken by suspense and tension like this, and I don't know why. It makes me sad. This isn't a comment on Decu's writing, which is indesputably fantastic, I just seem to be unusual in not being able to be fully immersed in the horror aspect of stories like this. Maybe I'm just too aware of the fact it's not real.

Ah, when I've finished my current batch! As you can see, it's not going as quickly as I'd hoped. Work really steals a lot of drawing time.

I plan to finish this batch sometime before January ends, though, so by then! (Hahaha I'll keep dreaming)

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/14/12(Fri)07:15 No.22037900

You are a Magical Girl, and in the horror-filled hell of her own barrier - you've finally found your sempai(One of her, anyway, there's supposed to be four).

Chiaki Matsuda, or as the pink-haired eldritchian nightmare calls her, Homura-chan.

The girl you've written and drawn a twenty-six volume manga about, your own way of contemplating what could have been, what you wish could have been.

The girl who, upon your first meeting, shot your legs off. She got better afterwards, though, and saved your life more than once. Taking you (albeit reluctantly) under her own wing as a subordinate.

The girl you confessed to, in the dimly-lit darkness of a private plane's passenger cabin. She didn't exactly return your feelings, but she didn't turn you down, either.

And even though her memories seemed to have been reaved clean because of whatever Kharn and Souji did to her - she was the girl who staunchly defended you against your former Incubator. Refused him point blank when he offered to trade for you. Laughed at his threats when he attempted to scare her into surrendering you.

Things between the both of you could not have started off worse.

But it all worked out, somehow.

Saving her from herself.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/14/12(Fri)07:16 No.22037906

>>22037900

This particular fragment of her - you think that's the proper word to call the girl still fast asleep, curled up underneath the covers of a comfortable-looking clinic bed - looks absolutely nothing like the sempai you're accustomed to, however.

Her hair, long and thick, tied into two elegant braids. Her hands, still smooth and uncalloused, protectively clutching her glasses to her chest. Her eyebrows furrowed ever so slightly, giving her otherwise peaceful slumber a look of mild worry.

This is moe. Weaponized moe. As much as you despise that term, that puerile concept that the lesser of your peers often resort to in order to push sales figures - there's no other way to describe your sempai right now.

You would kill to be able to take a picture of her, in this state. If it weren't for the fact that electronics often fizzled out inside a Barrier, you'd have jumped on the chance.

...Well, even if you could, you probably wouldn't.

You're not too sure how Madoka would take it.

"It's her," The pink-haired girl whispers in a tearful, broken voice. "It's really her. I...I didn't think I'd ever see her again. It's Homura-chan, j-just like I remember her. B-before...before she became so cold, so angry..."

She reaches out towards the slumbering girl, hesitation slowing her movements - and it's then that her eyes widen at the sight of her clawed, bloodied hands. The splotches of crimson on the white silk still wet, the scent of copper still fresh.

"N-no, I can't. I...I don't want her to see me like this..." She shakes her head furiously, ponytails swinging back and forth as she backpedals. "Homura-chan doesn't need to see me like this--"

How do you react?

You take a moment to glance at the still-slumbering girl. You've no reason to doubt Madoka, really - her tearful reaction confirmed as much - but you still can't believe that the girl on the bed was your sempai, or at least used to be her. What changes a person like that? What kind of sacrifice did your sempai make? What sort of trauma did she put herself under to become so broken, so jaded, so hateful?

The list of unanswered questions - questions that you should really ask, but are much too attached to having your organs inside you - continue to grow. But that's neither here or there - the pink-haired girl needed your help now, more than ever. Questions can wait.

Stepping slowly and quietly to the distraught young woman, it's then that you offer your help. But you do it delicately - knowing that even with the time you've spent together, you know that you're still treading on thin ice here. You ask her if there's anything at all you can do to make things better.

"I...I don't know..." Madoka looks down at her bloodied claws, before burying her face in them. "I...I know what I look like, Midori-chan. Homura-chan...t-that Homura-chan, there on the bed, she hasn't seen me like this before. I don't want to scare her." She chokes down a sob. "I don't want her to be scared of me..."

You manage a small smile, and carefully place both hands on Madoka's shoulders. The shorter, slighter girl flinching slightly at your touch, before looking up at you, a questioning look on her face.

You tell her that even though you don't quite recognize your sempai in this form, you know, at least, that she never cares what her friends look like. The fact that they're her friends is what matters. She shouldn't worry about scaring her at all.

"No, you don't understand...! She doesn't know me like this! I...she wouldn't see me as Madoka, she'd see me as something else! A...a monster!"

You click your tongue at this. You're sure it wouldn't matter, but if she wanted, well...you could do something. You're Callidus, after all. Changing appearances was your specialty.

"W-what about the familiars...?"

You shake your head. The magic you'll be using would be close to nil, for what you're planning. But if it were to lure some familiars to your location, then you could trust her to protect both you and sempai, right?

"O-of course! A-and...and even from that strange, spiky meanie, too! I'll be brave!"

You smile and nod at this. For...for an insane goddess always on the precipice of ripping your face off, Madoka seems like a nice girl, really. You only have to know her a bit better.

Your Soul Gem gives off a tiny, miniscule spark, and you tell Madoka to close her eyes. She is quick to obey, and you gently brush your fingertips over her closed lids. Murmuring a certain transformation phrase as you take her hands.

You tell her to open her eyes, now, just as you pull your smartphone out of your jacket pocket. Offering her the deactivated device so she can see herself reflected on the screen.

...Soft, honey-amber eyes suit her so much better than black, you say.

"I...I don't believe it..." Madoka's eyes grow wide as she looks at herself at the screen. "H-how? I didn't even feel any magic! Midori-chan, how did you--? A-and my fingers! I don't have claws anymore!"

Callidus trade secrets, you remark, allowing yourself to feel just a bit of pride.

You may not be the best Callidus, but you have aces up your sleeve.

It's too bad most of them are minor stuff like this, but they have their uses!

You put your phone away just as Madoka makes her approach towards your sleeping senpai, again. It's almost surprising how she'd remained asleep, even with the racket the both of you have been making.

"What...what should I do now, Midori-chan?" She looks back up at you again, looking even more vulnerable now that you've temporarily embellished her...more striking features. Making it nigh-irresistable for you to walk over and just cuddle her, or something similar.

Was this the power of moe? Really? Something so powerful that it could make bloody horrors like her adorable?

You shake your head. Time to focus. She's asking you how she should wake her best friend up. Like a younger sibling, asking her big sister how to behave during her very first date.

What advice do you offer?

[]Wake Homura up gently.
[]Wake her up cheerfully.
[]Wake her up your own way.

You tell her to wake the girl up gently, with as much care as possible not to shock her awake. It's only right, after all - she's waking up in a Barrier, of all places, the least one could do is to start off the obviously-traumatic experience in a not-so traumatic way.

Madoka nods vigorously at your words, her eyes wide. "Y-yes, Midori-chan, that makes sense. You're...you're really smart about this sort of thing, huh?"

...Not exactly. You did fall in love with someone that shot your legs off.

You don't say that out loud, though. Instead, you shake your head, and just tell her that you've had a lot of experience with helping people deal with...things that shouldn't be dealt with. More or less.

"A-ah, I see." Madoka seems to consider something for a moment, looking down at the sleeping girl, before turning back to you. "U-um, Midori-chan, can you watch the door for a while? Just...u-um, check and see if that spiky meanie isn't around?"

You blink at this. Well, you could easily see the window from where you are, and if anything, you'll hear its footsteps before it shows up anywhere near the Clinic. You don't see the point--

"Please?" Madoka clasps her hands in front of her, pleading. A rosy blush blooming on her pale cheeks.

...Oh. OH.

Right. Of course. Guard duty. Nothing Magical Midori can't handle.

You give her a smile and flash her a thumbs up. She thanks you breathily, grateful, and you see her bend down slightly over your sleeping sempai just as you turn your back on her. Giving her and your sempai the privacy they needed.

...You never had a chance. You never did.

No, stop. Christ. You're not going to cry. Not now.

Get it together, Hanegawa. Get it together.

"N-nhh..." You hear a soft grunt, followed by the confused, mumbled gibberish of someone just roused out of sleep. And it's then that you hear it - the voice of your sempai. Pure. Unblemished and unroughened by cigarettes and whisky.

"Kaname-san? What...what are you doing here in the Clinic? Isn't it still Homeroom?" A moment. "And...and why are you in your Magical Girl costume? What's going on?"

"H-Homura-chan..."

There is a rustling of cloth, of a heavily-frilled skirt brushing against the bedclothes, and it's then that you hear Madoka start crying again. Her sobs muffled, indistinct.

"Kaname-san...? What's wrong? W-why are you crying? Did you get hurt? C-come on, Kaname-san, you're scaring me..."

Madoka doesn't reply.

"...U-um, Miss?" You hear her call out to you in a slightly-louder voice - and you can't help but note how vulnerable her voice was, moreso when she was trying her best to be polite. "I-I'm sorry for bothering you, but are you one of Kaname-san's friends? I'm...I'm sort of confused, Madoka-chan's crying, a-and I don't know what to do..."

How do you respond?

You manage to quickly run a sleeve across your eyes before turning around to reply, and you work up the most sincere smile you could muster in the current circumstances. There will be time to...do all the distasteful things later, when this is all over and you've a quiet corner to yourself. Right now is the completely wrong time for it, not when you've still got a job to do, here. One that you're currently one-fourths through.

You tell your sempai - or the girl who would soon be her, anyway - that yes, you're one of...Kaname-san's friends, and that she shouldn't worry too much about the pink-haired girl crying. Kaname Madoka just missed her a whole lot, and was worried sick about her.

"E-eh? But...but she was the one that helped me get here earlier...it couldn't have been more than an hour, could it? N-ne, Kaname-san?"

Still blubbering, still sobbing, Madoka barely manages to string together a coherent reply.

Helpless, Homura looks back up at you, one hand awkwardly patting the crying magical girl on the back, the other clumsily putting her glasses on. "I...I'm glad you miss me this much, Kaname-san, b-but I don't understand..."

Another muffled gurgling, and Homura smiles; a small, nervous smile that comes with a sudden crimsoning of her cheeks.

"Y-yes, Kaname-san. Of course. W-whatever it was, I'm sorry for doing it. A-and I forgive you, too. For...for anything that you might have done, w-which I'm not really sure about..."

You turn your back to them, quietly, allowing them all the time they needed. Thankfully, whatever had chased you into the Clinic did not grace you with a sudden reappearance - and Madoka was able to calm down long enough to gather her wits about her, and explain the situation to Homura as best she could. Telling her that all three of you were stuck in a Barrier, and that you need to find the Witch to get out alive. Wisely, both you and Madoka had agreed on not saying anything about the entire truth until it was necessary. Not in the interest of sparing the poor girl from it, but rather being completely puzzled as to how to go about it.

How do you tell someone that they were a fragment of someone else's psyche?

How do you tell someone that they were, in fact, in a Barrier of their own making?

And how do you tell someone that their best friend had become the Magical Girl equivalent of an eldritchian nightmare?

But yes, you and Madoka give her the basics, for now.

And for someone who looks totally out of place in this kind of situation, the bespectacled young woman nods. Not even questioning why she ended up there, or how. As if she's gotten used to it.

You can't help yourself; you ask her why.

"It's because I'm Kaname-san's friend. Being friends with someone like Kaname-san, strange things have to happen to you, right?" Homura explains as if it's the most natural thing in the world to talk about. "Sometimes strange things, sometimes scary things, but...I don't mind. Being friends with Kaname-san is worth it."

No chance, Hanegawa Midori. No future.

"T-that's Homura-chan for you," Madoka pipes up, beaming. "A-anyway, um, Midori-chan, I...I think we need to move to the next location, and really quickly. Since Homura-chan's with us now, we don't need to stay here anymore!"

It's then that you hear a voice, in your head, as she stares at you with the amber eyes you gave her.

+ It's coming for us again. It's a bit more slower this time -- I think it's trying to be careful because Homura-chan's with us now. +

Oh. You do need to get out of here quickly, then.

"A-ah! Where are my manners?" Madoka knuckles her forehead, sticking out her tongue in an embarrassed expression - before gesturing towards you with a gloved hand. "Homura-chan, this is Midori-chan. She's...she's a friend of Mami-san too, so she's sort of a magical girl sempai!"

"O-oh!" Homura's eyes - a bright, clear purple, a total contrast from the dark, lifeless violet you're used to - widen at you, and she bows. "P-Pleased to make your acquaintance, M-Midori-san! My name is Akemi Homura, please take care of me!"

You return the bow with a polite cant of your head, while trying to keep a straight face.

You don't know whether to cry or giggle, really.

Your sempai being so cute is just confusing, and ruins the urgency of the situation.

"A-anyway, as sempai, we're going with Midori-chan's lead in getting out of here!" Madoka says as she helps Homura off the bed. "S-so, Midori-sempai! How do we get out of here?"

What do you reply?

You decide to walk out of there on foot. You ask Madoka if would be safe enough to do so, and after a moment's consideration, the pink-haired Magical Girl nods.

"I...I think it should be safe, yes. I...I can pick the safest route for us to take, but we'll have to be quick about it. If we come across any resistance, I'll remove it myself...but the main thing is that we don't stop until we're out. That's important, I think."

+ If that thing attacks us again, I want you to take Homura-chan and get out of the school as quickly as you can.+ Madoka's voice interrupts your thoughts once more. + I'll hold it off and lure it away, and then I'll warp back to you. Nod if you understand. +

You nod, and Madoka beams. Homura-chan looks at you, then at Madoka, waiting quietly and expectantly. As soon as she sees a break in the conversation between you and the pink-haired girl, she meekly raises a hand.

You blink at this, and ask her if she needs anything.

"U-um, well, no. B-but I just wanted to ask, Midori-san, um...what happened to your costume? If you're a Magical Girl like Kaname-san and Mami-san, shouldn't you have your own costume?"

...That is a very good question, Homura.

And you answer by saying that you're one of the girls with the really embarrasing kind of costume, so you don't wear it often.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. You actually do like your costume.

It's just your role in being a Callidus that you eschew it.

Because you can't really blend into the surroundings when you're wearing a red beret.

Not many people can do a beret, but you can.

It's just not, you know, conducive to espionage stuff.

The three of you make your way out of the Clinic after making doubly sure that nothing spiky and terrifying is waiting for you outside - and it's with a hurried pace that you begin your cautious escape of the school. Following the route that Madoka seems to have memorized.

You're going a bit slower than you'd like, though. It seems that this version of your sempai has some health issues. A problem with her heart, Homura had managed to wheeze out, her face pale as she tried to catch her breath during a small stop in one of the empty classrooms. Madoka keeping watch of the entryway while the both of you hunkered down near her.

"I'm sorry...f-for slowing us down..." Homura apologizes for what seems to be the fifth time. Madoka is quick to correct her, saying that she shouldn't apologize. You were making good progress, after all, and you only had one more floor to go before the exit. Just a little bit more, and you'll be safe.

Relatively.

It's when Madoka takes a handkerchief from the pockets of her skirt to wipe the sweat away from Homura's brow that you're suddenly reminded of someone else. Someone who did that for you too, once, back when you still worked with her.

Wakaba Mirai. Former colleague - and from happened back at Siberia, a former friend.

But...

You look at Madoka. This could be your opportunity to ask.

As you wait for Homura to recover, it's then that you decide to ask Madoka about Mirai. She seemed stable enough for now, and it's a bit easier to talk to her when she's not...crying blood or having claws or looking at you with shiny black eyes.

"Wakaba Mirai?" Madoka blinks at you, a blank expression on her face - and it's then that realization dawns on her. "O-oh! Oh! Yes, um, your friend! Um, I, I'm not all that sure about her, but I think we'll be able to find out more when we get to our next destination, Midori-chan!"

+ Your friend may already be a Witch at this point. I'm not going to sugarcoat it. But there's a chance she might have not. This is Homura-chan's barrier, after all, and we haven't seen anything about your friend having one. + A pause. + But it may just be that we haven't explored enough. +

It's fine, you reply, working up a small smile. You can work with that.

"W-what...what friend?" Homura says after a moment, eyes wide. "Midori-san, you have a friend trapped in this Barrier too?"

You nod after a moment.

Madoka blinks at this, before patting Homura's hand, trying to calm her down. "It's okay, Homura-chan! We will, as soon as we get out of this place! With all three of us as a party, we'll find her for sure!"

Homura nods, clearly...and remarkably optimistic about it, all things considered. She turns to you with a firm expression of determination, which, while at odds with her breathy, stuttering voice, is just too precious for words. "W-we'll find your friend, Midori-san! We won't leave this barrier until we do!"

You nod, smiling.

What happened to you, sempai...?

After a few more minutes, you set off again - but before you do, you ask Homura if she'd like to be carried by you, instead. This way, she won't get worn out, and all three of you could be out of the school in no time flat.

For the briefest moment, you saw Madoka's eyes flicker black as she stared at you, but she seemed to support the idea when Homura asked her opinion. And it's carefully that you carry such precious cargo in your arms, with Homura's own wrapped tightly around your neck. Squeaking with every few steps, as if afraid that she'd get dropped.

"Not much farther," Madoka says. "Staircase is just around the corner, and from there, it's a straight run towards the gate, and--"

A guttural roar, one that you've heard before, erupts from the floor above.

Followed by the heavy, thudding footsteps.

Only this time, they're quick. Absurdly quick.

"...Run." Madoka's eyes flicker as she all but overrides your pitiful little cantrip - and a long, slender rose stalk, prickly with thorns, manifests in her hand, her clawed fingers curling around it. A moment, and a giant rose blossom as large as Tiny Pete's hand unfurls at the stalk's tip, blazing with black flame. At the same time that a solid beam of pure darkness materializes in Madoka's other hand. Slender, slim, sharpened to a point. As long as her arm.

...No, not just a beam, you realize as she nocks it onto the stalk and pulls back on it, fingers pinching an invisible string. It's an arrow.

"M-Madoka-chan? Midori-chan? W-what's happening--" Homura cries, alarmed. "Madoka-chan, your eyes--"

"I TOLD YOU TO RUN!" Madoka screams at you, as another deafening roar tries to drown out all sound. The footsteps getting horrifically closer with every heartbeat. "GET HOMURA-CHAN OUT OF HERE!"

It may not be a good idea to try to reason with it until we determine what the other Homura signals are. We don't know if the others are merely Homura's personalities as she became more jaded and desperate as she reset the timelines, or if they're particularly strong incarnations of her (i.e. Murderface, Chiaki, and one other).

The BRS version of Homura/Matsuda may merely be a fragment of Walpurgisnachtermarensomethingsomething.

Probably no one will see this by now, but driving home from work I thought a bit more on the 4 Homus that need to be rescued. Moemura is obviously the first one. Second one is probably Hommando, and third would be RibbonHomu aka The One Who Ruined Everything, with fourth being Murderface/Chiaki.

RibbonHomu didn't get much screen time in the anime, but she's the one who couldn't move on and put the events in motion that ended up corrupting Godoka. So it would make sense for her to have been a huge part of Chiaki's psyche before she got her heart ripped out and the amnesia started.

[X] Fucking RUN!

If Homura asks us about why Madoka looks different, how about using this as an explanation:

"This Barrier is very strange. It's like some kind of... of nightmare. And using magical powers in here is risky."

Which is true -- it IS a mindfuck of a barrier. And using magical powers is likely to draw attention from familiars -- or worse. The fact that we haven't transformed at all would help sell this too.

And we are, quite frankly, not even sure as to what the hell is going on here. This Barrier is VERY strange.

Also. You know what this whole thing has been reminding ME of?

F.E.A.R.

We've got a child with potential superpowers. We've got a creepy school. We've got some kind of demonic ghost with a weird agenda. We've even got the monster that even scares the demonic ghost around.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/18/12(Tue)06:21 No.22099036

You are a Magical Girl, and you are running for your life with one-fourth of your direct superior shivering in your arms.

Running away from an unseen beast that had the footsteps reminiscent that of a crazed Warmaster with blades for hands, and a guttural roar from the monster in your nightmares.

Escaping from your pink-haired savior who herself is a horror in her own right, with her saccharine smile that hid blood-pinked teeth and eyes as dark as a sunless sky. You could still hear the unclean edge of insanity of the words she screamed at you; a command to run, to keep the precious cargo you carried safe. Each syllable jagged with the unspoken threat that if there was anything to happen to her precious, precious Homura-chan...well, there would be hell to pay.

You have to wonder if all forays into a Witch Barrier was this horrifying.

Then again, this is probably the first time someone voluntarily jumped headfirst into one with the sole aim of rescuing somebody else, instead of killing the Witch inside.

Well, maybe in your former Officio. You're positive a Pleiades Saint would sooner crush own Soul Gem than stoop to something as filthy and plebeian as 'public service'.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/18/12(Tue)06:22 No.22099042

No sooner had you kicked the front gate of the school open upon reaching it - the steel barrier grudgingly creaking aside to reveal safety in the form of a barren wasteland - do you hear the throaty roar of a chainsaw blade being gunned. This is followed by Madoka screaming bloody murder, her voice forming a ghastly duet with the crescendo of the chainsaw's engine whining as it chewed into flesh.
And over that, a leopard-wet growl, one that is then muffled by an explosion that you don't so much hear as feel. The force of it slamming hard against the small of your back, all but shoving you off, and nearly making you topple facefirst along with your cargo.

But you manage to keep your footing, miraculously enough. Because you never stopped running no matter what you heard. You never stopped one moment to look back, even when your own curiosity begged you to. Even when your own conscience stung at you for leaving someone like Madoka-chan to the wolves.

There are no wolves in sempai's barrier. But then again, there shouldn't be a pink-haired horror in the first place, either.

"M-Midori-san?" Homura's voice, trembling and fragile, pierces the deafening drumbeat that your own blood, spiked with adrenalin, is hammering into your eardrums. "What's...what's going on? What happened to Madoka-chan...? Why did she change...?"

How do you respond?

You manage to answer her question despite running full-out. You tell her, in between dry, desperate gulps of air - your words sounding more and more strained with every step you took - that despite how strange it looks like, Madoka is trying to protect her. Doing her best to protect the both of you.

Another scream, another shriek of horrendous pain, another blood-curling roar - and you feel your sempai struggle weakly in your arms. As if trying to escape your grasp. You take this as a signal to keep running, faster, harder than you've ever done before. Ignoring the burn of lactic acid in your limbs, the prickling in your lungs. Ignoring the fact that the landscape ahead seems to be shifting eerily in front of you, changing landscapes from one second to the other. Showing the ruination of Mitakihara one moment, and an intact city the next.

All you know is that you need to get as far away as possible.

"I-I can hear her! She's getting hurt! Madoka-chan's...she's dying! That thing is killing her! M-Midori-sempai, we have to go back! We have to help her!"

...Even you know just how wrong doing that would turn out. As much as you'd like to help, Madoka's request was clear. Going back would just waste the chance she'd given you--

"I-I don't care! I-if being safe means Madoka-chan g-gets hurt, or dies, t-then I don't...I don't want it! Midori-sempai, p-please let me go!" She struggles again, a bit more strongly this time. "I-if you don't want to go back, fine! I'll go back for Madoka-chan myself!"

What do you do? If you stop right now...the place looks safe, with the school a far shadow behind you.

The girl in your arms continue to struggle, and you barely just manage to slow your panicked, desperate run into a stop before she wriggles out of your grip. This unfortunately ends up with her unceremoniously falling on her bottom on the cold, hard-packed ground. Homura yelps at this, and looks up at you with tearful anger in her eyes, a look you never want to see from your sempai again. You move to help her up, but she ignores your offered hand and pulls herself back on her feet, self-consciously patting her skirt of dust.

"J-just watch me, I'll save Madoka-chan all by myself...and you c-call yourself a Magical Girl--!"

Just as she tries to walk past you, clearly heading back towards the school, it's then that you let out a sigh - before reaching out to grab her by the wrist. She all but squeals at this, her eyes widening in shock and in pain - but you force yourself to act as necessary. It's painful to do this, but you have to.

You tell her that going back for Madoka, while admirable, is the worst thing she could do right now. The most selfish. Yes, Madoka may possibly be getting hurt, but a lot has happened during the time that Homura was asleep. Madoka has turned into...well, the most powerful Magical Girl in the universe, bar none - not even the monster attacking her would be able to hurt her. So she should just come with you and find a safe place to wait for Madoka to come back.

"L-let me go, you're hurting me...! I-it hurts!" She tries, unsuccessfully, to free herself from your grasp. "A-and you're lying! You're lying to me! You heard how she was screaming...! I've never heard Madoka-chan scream like that! Not even when I saw her getting hurt by a Witch!"

You shake your head. No, you're not lying. Why would you lie? You're just trying to make sure she's safe--

"NO! LET ME GO! JUST LET ME SAVE MADOKA!"

You couldn't have stopped yourself if you could.

The sudden slap - made by your free hand - stuns her long enough that she remains silent long after the echo of the impact had faded into silence.

Her own free hand reaching up to touch the reddening spot on her cheek. Fresh tears welling up in her eyes, falling freely despite her slack, surprised expression.

You repeat your explanation. Madoka was still Madoka, but not the same Madoka she knew. Someone much more powerful. Going back would be an insult to her. Going back would mean Homura putting herself in danger - the one situation that her best friend did not want to happen so badly that she stayed behind to ensure it didn't. But it wasn't a sacrifice, nothing so tawdry - this wasn't a third-rate anime or manga. Madoka will return. Homura should trust in her best friend, just as Madoka trusted you to keep her safe.

"I..." Homura's breath catches in her throat, before her expression screws up into the look of one very near tears. "I...I don't understand what's going on, b-but I just want to make sure Madoka-chan is alright...M-Madoka-chan's my only friend..."

You grit your teeth against the temptation to comfort her, and ask, not unkindly, if you could trust her enough for you to let go of her.

She only nods through her tears, and you do so. It's then that she steps forward, meekly - and you let her muffle her tears into the front of your jacket.

Just like you let Madoka do so, earlier.

Funny how things work out like that.

It's then that your Teleport Beacon strapped to your wrist chimes for attention.

What do you do?

You let Homura cry it out, patting her gently and comfortingly on her back - apologizing quietly for the slap you'd given her earlier, and for the fact that you have to answer a call while...well, this is happening. She doesn't reply, not vocally, but you feel her move her head at least, in what could be construed as her nodding.

Keeping your grip on the shivering girl, you nudge the teleporter beacon's screen against your hip, hoping that it's enough to trigger the call function.

A series of beeps and a scratch voice coming over the device's tinny speakers signifies that it is, and you hold it up to your ear.

"...Wah! M-Midori-chan's still alive! Useless brother, useless brother! Broccoli-head is still--" You hear Misaka's relieved, enthusiastic voice chime out, before it's cut off an older, rougher male voice. Souji. Sounding just as relieved but also quite...tired. "Yeah. Yeah, she is. That's a relief."

A clearing of the throat. "Hey, Hanegawa. What's your sitrep over there? The readouts show that you got into close range with two fuckhuge anomalies just a few minutes ago. We, uh...we thought you were fucked, actually. Guess how surprised we are to hear you answer." A nervous laugh. "Jesus. I'm getting too old for this."

You manage a shaky laugh yourself, while keeping Homura close to you. It's a bit surprising to hear this from Souji, considering he didn't quite leave a good first impression - but all the same, you tell him that you're still alive, and your situation seems to be good, all things taken into account. You've even managed to encounter your sempai.

"...Yeah, I got that. Readout's showing that you're in very close proximity with Murderface." There's a pause in his words, and you could hear Misaka talking to him in Russian. "...Both Murderfaces, actually. I assume you're with the first one, because the other one is just to the north of you. Which looks like dead ahead. Not too sure about the distance, but it's near."

Ah. Well. That's...convenient. What about the two anomalies from earlier...?

"Yeah, we were keeping track of them too. Expending huge amounts of energy, both of them off the scale. Let's see...one of them disappeared just after one particularly huge event." A crinkling of paper. "God damn. If this happened out here, this entire base would be blown into the sky ass-upwards." More crinkling. "Er, yeah. The other one seemed to wander around for a bit before disappearing too. We're not detecting them right now, but I'd say be careful, just in case."

Well, that's sort of good news and bad news mixed together. You thank him for the update, and ask him how things are going on over there. Was Miss Kharn alright?

"...Yeah. Let's go with that. Focus more on what we're doing here, Hanegawa. Keep the Murderface you have close to you and find the others. No idea how she turned out that way, but...things should work out if you get them all. Sort of a pokemon kinda deal, I guess."

Maybe it's your imagination, but he seems to be hiding something.

"A-anyway, anything else you want to ask?"

Do you have anything else to ask Souji? You have time for one. It seems that Homura is recovering from her ordeal earlier, and you do need to move.

You bite your lip for a moment as you consider the change of tone in Souji's voice. It's a tone you've heard one too many times - from unreliable intel officers that seemed much too eager to cover their own asses and claim ignorance whenever you confronted them about details that they should have warned you about beforehand; from former comrades who seemed ready to declare you expendable the moment you became too much of a liability; from Jyuubey himself, when you asked him why in the world were you being given such...horrific assignments.

You've heard it so many times that you could hear it from a mile away, and you're hearing it now, and it's not a very good sign at all.

Keeping a firm grasp of Homura, you ask him with a level voice if he is hiding anything from you. Yes, you understand that the situation is complicated. Yes, you understand that this is the first time you're working with him, and add to that, you've freshly defected from a rival Officio. Right now, you're not exactly trustworthy. But you are working to save the future Warmaster of the Officio that pays his salary and budget. You are working to save his fiancee's best friend and former partner.

So if he could kindly just tell it to you straight--

"...Kharn's escaped from the Silent Room. She tore herself out of it an hour ago. And she used the teleporter to send herself there." A sigh. "We've been trying to detect where she is, but we're not getting a reading."

...Perfect. Just perfect.

Maybe you should've smacked that cackling Russian when you had the chance.

But what about the stuff he shot her with, earlier? Does that mean the hypogun is useless?

"...No. It worked on her. It's the strongest stuff I've got. Not even Kharn's immune to it." A pause. "But either she'd developed an immunity, or...something else is controlling her. We're not sure. But...she's in there with you. I don't know what she's got planned, but if you see her..."

No. No favors. You still have to rescue your sempai, and even that's proving to be one hell of a task. How can you even think of rescuing Kharn? Someone who's probably just as dangerous as everything else in this godforsaken barrier?

"...I was going to say, Hanegawa, that if you encounter her...just run. Don't try to help her." He lets out a sigh of a condemned man, resignation souring his breath. "...I've been dreading something like this, and it's finally happening."

You find yourself unable to reply to that. What do you say to something like that, anyway?

You mumble an apology after a moment.

You're not too sure you could do the same, if you were in his situation, and Chiaki was in Kharn's.

"...No apology necessary." He says. "If...you're going to ask about Mirai, I...there's no way to turn a Witch back into a Magical Girl. That said, we're not sure how Kharn managed it. The first time is a complete mystery. The second, well...it took me, Murderface, and fifteen Culexus to do it."

...Two out of three isn't bad at all, at least. But what did he do? Did he do anything special, that second time...?

"I tried to remind her who she was before she turned. Nearly killed myself doing it." There's a slight crack in his voice. "It worked in the end, but...well, here we are. It's the reason why there's only one Culexus left back in Mitakihara."

...You'll just have to make do. You thank Souji for his answers, and his honesty. After a moment, you promise him that you'll do your best to bring home a happy ending for everyone.

"I've prepared myself for something like this for a long time, but...thanks, Midori. Take care over there. Tiny Pete will be standing by."

There's a click, a burst of static, and the call ends.
You lower your arm, letting it hang limp on your side. The conversation in itself seemed to drain you, and you're tired for some reason. You shake your head, and pat your cheeks with one free hand. No time for fatigue - you've got a sempai to rescue.

"...M-Midori-san, who was that...?" Homura murmurs, seemingly having stopped crying a few moments ago. She must have been listening. "W-what's this about turning someone back from a Witch? Who's Souji...?"

How do you proceed?

Basically, My friend witched out, as did another magical girl in the same room. The best friend of the other one is a bloodthirsty berserker who will tear us in half if she finds us, and she's in here hunting. I was hoping to restore my friend to un-witchyness but that isnt looking like a likely outcome.

Something ELSE might be controlling Kharn. This universe has more than one cosmic power.

The one we were tagging along with a couple threads ago mentioned getting stuck somewhere during her teleporting
>"...The person I hate was in that place," She all but spat, her words dripping thick with petulant hate and venom. "Crying. Helpless. Defenseless. I couldn't stand to see her like that, looking so useless. So worthless."
and later
>"Whining and crying all the time! Ugh, how did Homura-chan stand being around that crybaby?!" The pink-haired abomination snarls. It's then that her voice warps, into a cruel approximation of a simpering waif. "Boo hoo, being a magical girl is suffering! Sayaka-chan, please don't fight Kyoko-chan anymore, you're supposed to be friends! Kyuubey, please turn Sayaka-chan back from being the stupid monster that she is I HATE HER SO MUCH I WISH WE WERE DEAD!"

Chiaki thought that whatever was in the elevator with her when she nearly got ganked was NOT pinky, too. Although that's a bit shakier.

You explain to her - while the both of you make your way North, towards the direction that Souji directed you two, where the next fragment of your sempai should be located - the heavily-abridged version of events.

Even you realize just how much of a mindbreaker the entire story would be, and you probably only have half committed to memory. In any case, you tell her that the Barrier you're in has somehow split her into four individuals, all of which you have to find and rescue.

Your friend, a girl named Wakaba Mirai, is also somewhere in this Barrier, and she had turned into a Witch. You're looking to rescue her too. Souji...well, Souji is your connection to the outside world, your backup as it was.

"...So Magical Girls do turn into Witches." You hear Homura murmur, and you couldn't help but hear the simmering venom in her voice. "...I knew it. I've always suspected that something was up with...with Kyuubey-san. I knew he was hiding something."

It seems that your sempai was your sempai, no matter what form she was in. You've sensed that underlying hatred, that narrow-eyed suspicion in which she always seemed to regard the Ninth Incubator.

You thought it was just the sort of friction you'd see with a disgruntled employee and his synergy-obsessed, numbers-crunching, buzzword-flinging boss - but this was seething, barely-kept venom, pure and simple.

You turn slightly to glance at Homura. You ask her if she'd always felt this way about Kyuubey. She blinks at you, as if taken off guard - before she nods.

"Y-yes. Well, um. The first time I meat Kyuubey-san, I thought he was really cute," Homura murmured. "He looked the kind of mascot that Magical Girls in anime hung out with. But then, I..." She shakes her head, braided ponytails swaying from side to side.

"Whenever I looked at him, I'd always feel...angry, at him. E-even though he hasn't said much to me, or even asked me for a Contract. I always felt that he was hiding something from us. That he wasn't just granting wishes just to be nice."

That's your sempai for you. You tell her that while she should work on not getting carried away - especially with anger - she should keep the habit of being wary around Incubators. Not that they're bad or anything, but just to watch out.

Homura murmurs her assent, and the both of you walk in relative silence - the hard-packed dirt road smoothly turning into what looks like asphalt. You look around, and you notice that your surroundings seem to have temporarily shifted to the red light district of Mitakihara. The bleak daylight darkening, and stars winking out of the sky as night seemed to fall in a disturbing pace.

"I...I recognize where we are," Homura says after a moment, and you feel her warmth on your arm as she seems to latch onto you. "D-Dad always told me not to walk out at this time of night, b-but on the way from Mami-san's apartment, I had to walk past here." You blink as you feel her grasp your hand tightly, the way a child does in an attempt not to get lost. "I...I saw lots of strange people walking around here, s-smoking and drinking and doing illegal things..."

A moment. "...A-and one of my other selves is here? Just...just what kind of person did I turn out to be...?"

Certainly a very interesting one that got a twenty-six manga written and drawn about her, but you don't say that. Poor thing's got enough on her plate already.

In any case, you know this part of town. And you think you know where to find the next fragment of your sempai.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

A year and...some couple of months ago, you were a Magical Girl. You're not sure when exactly this happens, but you're not really big on keeping track of time. Secretaries and people obsessed with SCHEDULES and APPOINTMENTS are only concerned with those bits. Chronologically, however, this happens in the past, and you're pretty sure that whatever you do now will affect the future.

But all that doesn't matter now. Not when you've got a much more important job to do.

You are going to get the most morose, Christmas-hating fuckers of your Officio the best presents they've ever gotten.

You are Kyoko Sakura, Eversor. While you're not the best in your rank - you can hardly remember the many times you've been made aware of that fact - you're pretty much unstoppable the moment you get a spear in your hands, or anything that resembles a staff, mostly. In fact, you're pretty famous for holding off two witches at the same time - no mean feat, considering that you were fighting with blood sheeting in your eyes and a left arm torn off at the shoulder. You came out of that well enough, and you still have both your eyes intact.

But again, it doesn't matter. Right now, you're fuming mad, mad enough that you broke the door when you slammed it on your way out of the Eversor common room. In foresight, maybe you should've kept your temper - it's bad form to lose it in front of the Warmaster, no less. And Mami was there, too. And Kyuubey. And...well, Sayaka, but really, she's more to blame about this than anyone else. Her and Murderface.

It's Christmas, for fuck's sake. You had it all planned. You told them weeks in advance that the Secret Santa was going to happen. You even took the time to properly make the slips of paper that had the name of your Secret Santa; you cut them out of GOOD paper and wrote each one by hand, no printing out names and tearing them out and crumpling them like a dildo would. You made sure that things were properly randomized! All they had to do was pick, and then spend the rest of today buying presents in time for the Christmas dinner later!

...You're not Sayaka, that needs to be said. You don't have her hair-trigger temper, and you're sure she's not rubbing off on you that way.

But you're not going to stand by and let these idiots not experience the joy that is Christmas. And you're not going to accept the excuse that it's "not very brutals to bes nice to each others", even if it's from your Warmaster.

It's important.

More than ever.

It's just Walpurgisnacht, you shouted at them.

And it wasn't to arrive in another month.

What the hell were they afraid of, anyway? The Officio's tackled Witches with that kind of designation before, and survived. You didn't even require the support of the other Officios, even if they were all chomping at the bit to steal your thunder. Walpurgisnacht was nothing worth canceling the Secret Santa over.

Nothing was worth canceling Christmas over.

In any case, you're standing in front of the door leading to Yuma's quarters, in the Culexus floor. You're not sure why, but you're probably the only non-Culexus to be able to tolerate BEING here in their floor. Everyone else would have thrown up or simply passed out at the presence of so many Culexus in one place - and that was even with most of the Culexus still in their suits - but not you, for some reason. It was a mystery that even Kyuubey seemed to be completely perplexed about. You didn't give it much thought, though - you considered yourself lucky that you didn't feel like blowing chunks every time you popped by to check up on Yuma. She seemed to appreciate it, and the other Culexus even seemed pleased that they had someone else other than their own to talk to.

Well, at least you think they're pleased. You've seen them talking in hushed tones whenever you passed by. You tried asking them what's up, but all you got was hasty apologies, and something about their helmet speakers acting up. You have a feeling that's not the case at all, but they seemed sincere enough, so you let them be. Nice folk, really, just a bit quiet, especially when Malal was around.

You make to simply open the door, but you stop yourself just in time. The last time you barged in unannounced, you woke up in the infirmary, flat on your back, with a dozen skull helmets looking down at you, and Yuma sobbing inside hers. You found out from her - after a dozen or so tearful apologies - that you'd burst in on her changing out of her suit, and she'd shut down your Soul Gem completely with an unrestrained burst. It took three Grief Seeds just to resuscitate you.

...You don't want a repeat of that, right? Besides, you're here to ask her to help you with the gift-shopping and all.

Seriously? You want to Solid Snake your way into Yuma's room? Getting knocked out may be the least of your worries if you surprise them again. The Culexus, despite them being really nice and all, can just be as high-strung as the most titchy Eversors you know - and that's saying a lot.

...Fuck it, it's Christmas. Sure. You take the Santa Hat you'd stuffed into your costume's pocket, pulling it over your head - and it's then that you walk towards the air vent you saw a couple of corridors back. Hijacking a stepladder from a nearby supply room and prising off the vent lid with the blade of a quickly-manifested spear, you squeeze your way into the the cramped, dusty, and not very comfortable vent. On your hands and knees - coughing as you immediately get a lungful of dust - you begin the arduous task of crawling your way to the vent that would hopefully lead to Yuma's room, and not someone else's.

It's not a very nice place, this. But you're already committed, just as you're committed to bringing the joy of Christmas to the group of dildos you consider your close, personal friends.

Oh, you can't wait to see their fat faces when you get them the best presents ever. It'll be worth breathing in what smells like a year's worth of dust into your system, making your lungs just as bad as Murderface's (who's just recently taken up the horrid habit of smoking, something you've asked her more than enough times to quit).

After a bit of crawling, coughing and cursing - you finally come upon a row of three vent lids, each one equally spaced from each other. You should be in the corridor where Yuma's room should be, so one of these vent lids should lead to where you want.

What do you do?

[]Try to peek through and listen from each vent grill first, quietly as you can.

You decide to take your time and check, first. It couldn't hurt, really, and while it may ruin the surprise a little bit, it's more for their sake than yours. You don't want some poor Culexus having to spend Christmas night sitting by your bedside, worrying whether or not you'll make it. They're sorta NEETs already in the way they keep to themselves, no need to torment them further than necessary.

You crawl your way towards the first vent, squinting through the spaces in between the grills. They're not made for spying purposes, so it's hard trying to make out anything. You do see that the room is rather very heavily-furnished. Manga, figurines, video games...and is that a character body pillow?

Yeah, that's definitely one of those dakimakura things. You can't make out what character it is, but it's got green hair. And it's being hugged by...well, a Culexus in her pajamas. Her skull helmet still on.

...They have to wear their helmets even when they're sleeping? Man.

Well, you're not sure if Yuma is into otaku stuff, or what. But then, they usually don't talk about that things, right? Something about hiding your powerlevels? So there's a decent chance it could be her.

The second room you squint into is a more normal-looking one. It actually looks quite homey, like a student's room. Books in every corner, a study table at one side, the bed at the other. A small TV placed on top of a small entertainment center, with what looks to be a game console hooked up to it. The Culexus, fully-clothed, is sitting on the floor, in front of the TV, a controller gripped in her gloved hands. She seems to be getting angry at video games, as far as you can tell from her vox-corrupted grumbling.

Hmm. You've heard her talk about video games, but you don't remember her talking about a specific sort of console. Yuma isn't really the competitive type, either, but then again, she might be hiding that from you too.

The third room is a bit more spartan, with every inch of the walls converted into a gun rack of some sort. There is some SERIOUS FIREPOWER in that room, guns that you've only seen Murderface hold. The Culexus is sitting on her bed, humming a quiet tune, with what looks to be a heavily-complicated rifle reduced to its component parts and pieces hovering in the air in front of her. Each piece slowly moving, clacking into place, the weapon seemingly assembling itself fragment by fragment.

That's...that's actually pretty cool. You didn't know they could do that.

...Speaking of, that looks like the rifle that Yuma was given on her first day. Maybe that's her? But you're sure she's not THIS much of a gun nut...

Who do you intrude upon?

Coobie Quest took place the very first time Girl A woke up. So, Yuma became a Culexus roughly about two years ago and Murderface got her name roughly about a year and a half ago. This is probably in the period of time between Murderface and Kharn becoming partners but before Kharn leaves for Siberia.

You're being especially cautious today, aren't you? Normally you'd have barged into Yuma's room, no questions asked. This is the most cautious you've ever been in a long time, so much that you're actually finding yourself annoyed at how ponderous things are going. If anything, Eversors aren't supposed to be this tactical, this...mired in common sense.

You hate to admit it, but this is more of a Vindicare kind of thing, what you're doing right here. Eversors, like the ideal that Kharn represented as Rank Leader (and also Warmaster) - never take more than a heartbeat's span to make a decision. The first impulse is always the correct one - instinct, reflexes and a good blade would see you through should things go ass-upwards.

Ahh, but then, this isn't exactly a normal assignment, isn't it? Not in the slightest. You can't exactly cut your way through if you get caught, either.

Well, any case. You'll deal with things when they come up. Right now, you have to send a message to Yuma, using that. How'd they call it? Pulsing. Yeah, that's right. Strange, but you guess it does the job done. It sort of fits, anyway.

This 'pulsing' thing is sort of a secret between you, Kyuubey, and the rest of the Culexus. Such was your surprise when Kyuubey called you to his office, a mere two weeks into Yuma's basic training. You were even more surprised to find Malal there, in the middle of putting her helmet back on.

You respectfully averted your gaze just before you could get an eyeful - although you were very tempted to take a peek - and it's after a few moments that she told you that you were, in fact, to take a special week-long training course with Yuma on the basics of Pulsing. A confidential kind of training, no one was to know about it. Not even Sayaka, or even the Warmaster herself.

It wasn't telepathy. It was more than that, from what you remember. It was something about harnessing the frequency of your soul gem to transmit a part of you elsewhere. Piggybacking on the other soul gems in your vicinity if you needed to, to transmit a message.

But not just messages - emotions, visions, that kind of thing. Some of the Culexus could even 'empty' their soul gem and place themselves into another one, were they trained enough to do so. And it took a lot of training.

Right now, you could do the most basic level of it. Brief messages, no longer than a sentence or a thought. A picture, if you really concentrated. That's about it, but the Culexus assured you that getting to that level without being a Culexus yourself was pretty good, already.

Now, how did this go, again? Yuma said to focus on something that made you feel positive, and then use that emotion to form the message you wanted. The first time you tried it, the Culexus in your training circle all looked away, sniggering.

You'd pulsed them a vision of Sayaka in her underwear, they'd told you after they'd calmed down. You made them promise not to say anything, and true to their word, they hadn't. Although none of them could look Sayaka in the eye for a while (not that they normally could, she didn't like Culexus much).

You know enough, at least, not to make that kind of mistake.

A moment more, and you pulse your message. Forcing to confine it to just one recipient, only.

+Yuma, open your door. Coming in.+

You barely manage to stop yourself from groaning in exasperation as all three Culexus seem to snap to attention. But only one of them gets up to walk towards the door leading to their room. A faint, quiet reply being pulsed back to you, proper and restrained, and somewhat puzzled.

+Eh...? Er, alright, sempai.+

You grit your teeth as you make do with the cramped space that you've got - before giving the vent a good, solid kick in the face. Well, you don't think they actually have faces, but your kick is a solid, face-breaking one if you're any judge. The vent holds, though, annoyingly so. You give it another kick, putting a bit more into it--

--and you nearly shriek out in a very non-flashy way as it and a good portion of the ceiling gives way underneath you, raining ceiling tile and dust down into the center of the room - along with one very surprised magical girl wearing a Santa Hat and a foot-thick layer of dust. Yuma, wearing her helmet and her pajamas, does the shrieking for you instead.

"W-WHAT...?! KYOKO-SEMPAI, ARE YOU CRAZY?! WHY DID YOU--HOW DID YOU--"

You manage to prop yourself up from the floor with your hands, and grin at the Culexus through a face caked with dust. You cough out a couple of dust bunnies, just before you bellow out your chosen battle cry of the season.

"MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS!"

She wasn't too pleased with that. She reminded you - while you helped her clean up the damage left by your entrance - that as her sempai, you should present a more respectable image, being her role model and everything. As one of the more highly-esteemed staff in Kyuubey's payroll, you should be more dignified and sophisticated, and not climbing around air vents and dropping into someone else's business.

You were just trying to get into the holiday spirit of things, you tried to reason, as you shook dust out of your Santa Hat before pulling it back on. You hear Yuma grumbling underneath her vox as she pulls it off of your head, patting the white ball of fluff at the end free of remaining lint and dirt, before putting it back on you. Her touch careful and considerate, as it always had been.

"Santa Claus doesn't sneak into girls' rooms through air vents, Kyoko-sempai." She sighs this one out, the vox of her helmet corrupting all emotion from her voice.

Well, there's no evidence that he doesn't! Maybe he should start doing so!

"He'll get himself arrested if he does. Anyway, Santa Claus isn't a pervert." Yuma shakes her head. "In any case, Kyoko-sempai, may I ask why you're spending Christmas morning in my room? Shouldn't you be with someone else?" She asks this pointedly, as if insinuating something.

How do you respond?

She's a piece of work, this Yuma. True to his word, Kyuubey allowed you to teach her the basics - and for someone her age, she picked up on things pretty easily, if not disturbingly quickly. Even Sayaka was impressed, and she's someone who doesn't impress easy. You remember her scoffing when she found out that Murderface could in fact stop time.

But other than that, Yuma's intuitive. Very much so that Malal warned her about reading minds without permission, or something like that. Yuma had confided in you, back then, that it wasn't really that she read other people consciously - it was only that most of them had very loud minds. Yours, in fact, was one of the loudest she'd ever encountered, rivaling Sayaka's and Kharn's. Malal and Murderface, in contrast, had minds as quiet as an empty graveyard. She could easily tell, just by being around you, what you were thinking about and what you were about to do.

It's a wonder, then, how you are able to sneak up behind her and lift her into the air, before spinning her round and round. The girl in your arms shrieking again.

"WE'RE SURE GETTING COCKY ASKING IMPROPER QUESTIONS, AREN'T WE? HOW ABOUT I MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS YOUR DAY, EH?"

"T-that nonsense again! P-put me down, Kyoko-sempai, please! I-I'm getting sick! I don't want to throw up in my helmet...!"

You let her off after a couple more spins, and she shakily sits down on her bed as you finally explain to her the rationale of your entrance. Some of the fatheads that you consider friends are being all morose and killing your Christmas buzz. Cancelled this year's Secret Santa, in fact! That's why she's going to help you get them the best presents ever.

You look at your reflection in the dark visor of Yuma's skulled helmet for a few moments, before allowing yourself a grin - and it's then that you give your underclassman a friendly whack beside the helmet. This makes her squeak out in pain, not to mention being knocked sideways into her bed.

And you thought the Culexus were supposed to be more logical than the Vindicares! Where was the logic in taking it easy NOW, that there's a battle to be fought in the horizon? Instead of letting it hang over your heads like the massive Sword of Damocles it was, you should do everything to keep your mind off it. You Magical Girls deserve at least that much. Christmas at least deserves that much!

"That...that scrambled my visuals for a second," Yuma murmurs. "S-sempai, please, I'm still using the training Anima Speculum, it's not meant to take any kind of abuse! T-try to be a bit more gentle!"

Eh? You weren't even trying, then, but...sure. You'll try.

"A-anyway, I...I guess that makes sense." The Culexus replies after a moment, after tapping her helmet's tinted visor a couple of times. "...I'm not looking forward to Walpurgisnacht myself, and it's hard to get excited over anything when it's looming over everyone. But that's no reason not to try, isn't it?"

"Alright, alright, Kyoko-sempai. I'm in. Dial it back a bit." She raises both hands in a placating gesture, but you could hear the smile in her voice. You grin back at her, before taking a full look at the contents of Yuma's room.

...She's into this Magical Midori in a really huge way, isn't she?

"It's...well, um..." She actually stutters over that for a moment. "...I-it's a really good story, Kyoko-sempai, and...and I just like the characters, and the art is--"

You wave her excuses off. Having a hobby is all well and good, but she should take care that it doesn't become her entire image.

"I...I won't, Kyoko-sempai." She turns towards the body pillow she'd stashed at the foot of her bed. "...Please don't tell Miss Malal. She'll tell the entire squad!"

Of course you won't. You're not some sort of pariah to do something like that to her.

"Thank you, Kyoko-sempai." A moment. "U-um, well...where do we start gift shopping? And who are we buying presents for again?"

You BROUGHT FORTH THE LIST. Which is really just a piece of paper you've folded and stuffed in the Santa Hat you're wearing now. You shake it out of the hat, unfold it, and re-examined the list you've made of the fatheads you've sworn to bless with some Christmas spirit right in their stupid faces.

Six names, all in all. That makes for six presents, including Yuma's. You don't tell her this, of course. That'd just be ruining the surprise. She tries to peek at the list herself, but you quickly fold THE LIST up and slip it under your Santa Hat, for safe keeping. Yes.

"I was just going to take a picture of it, in case Kyoko-sempai lost it or something." There's an offended tone to Yuma's vox-corrupted voice. "But fine, I can just input a list of my own, here." A sigh. "So that's Miss Sayaka's, Miss Mami's, Miss Murderface's, Miss Kharn's, Miss Malal's...five presents, then. And I think we can look at Mitakihara Central Mall first before we shop online - this way, we can buy them and have them wrapped just in time for the dinner later."

It's then that she levers herself off of her bed, making her way to her dresser. "If we go the online route, we'll be looking at a week-long delay, what with the shipping rush and all."

...Yuma's pretty dependable, isn't she? If you ever make Warmaster, you'll make her your equerry, you tell her. You won't choose anyone else!

"I'm flattered, sempai, but this isn't really a big deal for us." Yuma replies as she divests herself of her pajamas, and slowly putting on the Culexus suit, piece by piece. "After training and licensure's done with, we have a lot of time to brush up on things. We only see action when we're really needed."

You've been called obtuse before, but even you could hear the note of loneliness in her voice. It's a note you've heard in every other Culexus you've spoken to, including Malal.

This robs you of any response, and you're silent as she finishes putting the suit on. You turn around just as it activates - and there's a sharp, teeth-itching whine as the lines of the suit glow red, then blue, before finally fading out. You immediately feel a strange weight being lifted off your shoulders - you hadn't noticed it until it was actually removed.

Of course! To the mall, wherever it is, and stuff!

"...I think it's better if you let me drive."

You were just about to suggest that! You're not allowed to drive yet!

The trip to the mall, then, was made using the Warmaster's giant bulletproof jeep...thing, you're not too sure what it's called. Yuma herself had to adjust the seat a couple of times to make sure she could look over the steering wheel AND reach the pedals. You'd asked why she'd taken this particular car - and the mischief in your junior's voice is evident as she manned the beast into a parking spot.

"Because I've always wanted to drive this thing," She replies, slightly out of breath. "Miss Malal wouldn't let me or the other Culexus to. But since this is a sanctioned mission from a direct superior, I can't possibly pass up this chance of driving it without getting into trouble, now can I?"

...Pretty slick.

"This is a sanctioned mission, right, Kyoko-sempai?"

Well, you did tell Kharn and Kyuubey to screw themselves and wait for your awesome gifts, so...

With the Marauder parked and its security systems activated to vaporize any attempt of stealing it, you finally step through the automatic sliding glass doors of Mitakihara Central Mall, the biggest mall in the city and arguably the ritziest. You haven't even HEARD of the brand names you're seeing here, selling clothes that probably cost more than a month's salary. Everything is polished to a mirror sheen, even the floor. It smells of old money. VERY old.

"...Well, here we are, then, Kyoko-sempai." Yuma chirps beside you, ignoring the stares the both of you are getting - you haven't changed out of your costume because it fits thematically with your Santa Hat, and Yuma, well...the skull helmet doesn't exactly do her any favors in blending in. "First on our list is Miss Sayaka. The question is, what do you want to get for her?"

That's...that's a good question!

A world where Mami is more cynical and is able to take the horrible, horrible truth.
A world where Sakaya has a chance of NOT witching out a few days after contracting.
A world which has a chance against something like Walpurgisnacht.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are Sakura Kyoko, Magical Girl. A year or so ago, you decided that it is your duty to inflict some good old-fashioned Christmas cheer into the gormless faces of the fatheads that you consider your circle of close, personal friends. Seriously, they cancelled this year's Secret Santa, and you've worked your ass to the bone trying to organize it. You're not going to let them get away with it.

Each one of them are going to get gifts so awesome they won't be able to deal with it. They're going to talk about your gifts for WEEKS, and there's nothing they can do about it. Possibly.

You've all but kidnapped Chitose Yuma - someone that you yourself had a hand in arranging her contract in becoming a Magical Girl - to help you along with this quest. Being a Culexus, she's wearing her usual skull helmet and black leather suit, making her look more like a delinquent biker than anything else.

That said, you're not one to talk - you're in your mostly red Magical Girl costume, which frankly makes you look like some costume-playing nutcase (the detached sleeves kind of put it over the top, in your opinion). The Santa Hat you're wearing kind of makes it a bit more Christmasy, but with mini Ghost Rider beside you it's a bit hard not to draw stares. Not that you mind, but it gets a bit irritating.

All that aside, you're currently in the middle of choosing what sort of gift to pick for your...ah, significant other. That's what they call them, right? You still can't say girlfriend without your cheeks burning up. You tried asking Sayaka yourself - she just shrugged and called you 'husband', which pretty much set you back to square one so hard that you nearly forgot what the question was.

...Anyway. Gift. Gift choices for Sayaka! You have to decide! Yuma's looking at you funny, already, or at least you think she is! Damn kid and her tinted visor thing - you can't tell with this girl sometimes.

"Kyoko-sempai, please stop thinking about Sayaka-sempai in her underwear." Yuma suddenly says, out of the blue. "It's disturbing."

Damn mind-reading brat!

You can't decide between getting her cake and some battle panties. The former because you know just how much she loves the stuff, and the latter...well, it's as much of a gift for you as it is for her, isn't it? Yeah. Yeah, maybe something realy fancy, like something with frilly stuff on it, like laces, and garters. Oh man. OH MAN. She's going to look so...so...

"Sempai, you're drooling," Yuma whispers through the vox unit of her helmet, pulling out a handkerchief from a pocket on her suit and patting at your lips with it. You manage to snap yourself out of your reveries long enough to look properly sheepish, before going on to maintain some semblance of dignity. Can't be having with a senior Eversor daydreaming with their mouth open in public, oh no.

Any case, you've made up your mind. You'll get them both for her. You can afford to splurge today, after all. Being frugal for most of the year does have its benefits, and you know you've tucked away enough in a savings account for a nest egg. In fact, not a lot of people know just how frugal you are. You even stay back in the cafeteria just before closing, to nab the uneaten leftovers they'd just be throwing away.

"So, a cake and some fancy underwear, then, Kyoko-sempai?" Yuma pipes up. "The cake shop's a floor up, while the Women's Underwear section is on this floor. Want me to buy the cake for you while you pick out what kind of garnish you'll be having for dessert later?"

You blink at this, and you feel your cheeks heat up. Where'd she learn that kind of thing? Ahh, you gotta talk to Malal about this, that just isn't right--

"I read a lot, sempai. In my spare time. Now, what flavor of cake should I get for Miss Sayaka?"

You decide on a strawberry cake. Yeah, strawberry's good - Sayaka's quite a fan of the things, and you've seen her and Murderface nearly come to blows whenever Mami brought one of them over, and the last piece was up for grabs. You're more of a chocolate cake person, really, but this is more for her than for you, and cake's cake. It's nice for sharing, anyway.

You turn to Yuma to relay your decision, but she cuts you off before you can even speak. "I'll go over there right now and get a Couple's Christmas Cake, then. Strawberry Cream, extra Strawberries." It's then that she unclips a black, rectangular device from her belt. "Let's keep contact on our phones, then, sempai, just in case I see anything perfect for the others while I'm on the run."

Huh. Well. You never thought of that. That's a good idea.

She looks at you pointedly after a moment. Now what?

"I'll need your number, sempai."

...Oh. OH.

You give it to her, rattling off the number that Sayaka's forced you to memorize. She bought the smartphone for you - she got much too irritated by the fact that you tend to disappear from time to time during missions, becoming completely unreachable. You've tried to explain why, but she wanted to be able to reach you whenever. You relented, and now you're stuck with the thing.

Ah, well. At least there are games on it. There's this one app that said you could look through other people's clothes through it, but you've never really gotten it to work...

"...Right. Later, Kyoko-sempai." Yuma nods at you, before running off, towards the direction of the escalators. You shout at her to be careful and have the cake gift-wrapped nicely - before you make for the underwear section of the mall itself. In no time at all, you've surrounded yourself in a world of frilly, lacy things.

You're...well, you're not too sure what to do here. Where do you start, anyway?

You bumble on for a few moments, before someone taps you on the shoulder. You turn to see - of all people - Mikuni Oriko, the platinum-blonde girl that'd been a potential contract a few months ago. You changed your mind on setting Kyuubey on her - having Yuma contracted is enough on your conscience.

"Sakura-san~" She says your name like it's some sort of delicacy, voice like pure honey, and you see her eyes light up as she does so. "This is a surprise! I wasn't expecting to see you here." Her gaze flicks upward, and she giggles slightly at your headgear. "Are you gift-shopping, by any chance? How every lucky for whoever it is you're buying for, to have a Santa like Sakura-san..."

You laugh sheepishly at this, unable to form any words at the moment. Oriko's always had this effect on you, for some reason, able to make you speechless and bashful just by being in the same room. Not that it's nice, but you're...already attached, and it kind of can cause misunderstandings.

Wait, if Oriko's here, then that means Kirika--

The person you've done your best to avoid these past few months - on a promise made to Sayaka - comes into view from behind Oriko, one arm beset with shopping bags from expensive brands, and the other carrying what looks to be a huge stuffed rabbit. She is wearing some rather stylish civilian clothes, as per usual. "And you're going around in your costume. I'd lecture you about that, but then I remember what kind of rags you wear when you're off-duty."

You bite back the desire to snap out with a SICK ICE BURN about how Kirika dresses like a compensated dating girl, what with her slightly-dyed hair, contact lenses, and gaudily-colored thigh-high stockings. You're better than that, and doubly so when refined company like Oriko's around. Sayaka would probably just sigh at you if indulged Kirika, and that's all well and good, but you've no truck with causing a scene in public, 'specially with someone not in the know like Oriko.

Besides, you're kind of in a hurry, picking out fancy drawers for a certain blue-haired Eversor. If there ever was a worst time for back-sass, this was it.

It's with a calm voice and a toothy grin that wouldn't have shamed Kharn, then, that you tell Kirika that it's Christmas - and you can never be too old for Christmas. The only people who grow out of Christmas are the sort of people who keep way too many cats around, and tell other people that they're too old for Christmas themselves. And you're pretty sure you're not either sort.

Kirika merely smirks at this, and opens her mouth to say some really snide things when you block her out completely as you turn to Oriko and smile a genuine smile, the kind that doesn't say that you're a hair's breadth from tearing someone's face off. Yes, to answer her question, you ARE gift shopping, and the hat's just to get you into the spirit. You tell her that this is also somewhat of an impromptu thing, really, you yourself weren't expecting to make this trip. But, well, here you are.

"Ah, I see." Oriko smiles back, in that dignified, soft way that reminded you of Mami, except where Mami was big sister-like - nearly maternal - the girl in front of you projected a fragile, regal air, like a kind but sickly princess trying her best to look proper and prim in front of her subjects.

"And I suppose you're buying something for...um...Sayaka-san, I believe her name was? Here?" She looks around pointedly at the racks of lingerie around you, as well as the lightly-dressed mannequins sporting some very daring scraps of lacy cloth.

You manage to nod after a moment, feeling your cheeks burn a bit more hotter. Oriko all but giggles at this, before turning to her companion.

"There, now what did I tell you, Kirika-chan? Sakura-san's nice enough to buy gifts for her other colleagues. I can't see why you can't do the same."

"But I already ordered takeout for the rest of my squad. That's enough, isn't it?" She protests, all while giving you THE EYE. THE EYE that told you that you were on dangerously thin ice. You answer this by grinning like an idiot. "I just don't see the point--"

"The point is that you show that you care, Kirika-chan. If I have to explain it further, then you are indeed missing the point, and I can't have that." Oriko shakes her head, before turning back to you, the smile back on her lips. "Ah, but I suppose Sakura-san has more shopping to do, don't you?"

"Hnh. She'd probably just steal stuff. I'll warn the guards." Kirika snaps, and you barely manage to stop yourself from punching the smirk off her face.

"Kirika-chan! Please!" Oriko is properly scandalized at this, placing one hand on the girl's arm. She turns towards you apologetically. "I apologize for that, Kyoko-san, I honestly do. I was just about to ask you if you needed any help." Her flustered look smoothens out into the smile once more. "I...couldn't help but notice how confused you looked, earlier. That's why we approached you."

Oh. Erm...well. You admit that this is the first time you're doing something like this. Buying lingerie, you meant.

That's the thing. You have no idea what they are--

It's then that you notice it.

Sayaka and Oriko...they sort of have the same sizes, don't they?

Well, if you'll be honest, Oriko's definitely bigger in the chest department, but she's...close. Yes. Close. Especially at the bottom...part. With her to compare with, hunting for Sayaka's gift will be a cinch!

So, um. I really do NOT think we should ask Oriko her three sizes. Even if it's a perfectly innocent request, Kirika will still be moved closer to flipping out and murdering.

There's still room and time for it, y'know.

Really, I just feel its in poor spirit. This is meant to be a time for MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS, not about "inescapable fate" or whatever.

Being nice now just means their grudge gets started off-screen. In one of the early threads Kyouko already told Chiaki that she got into an argument with Kirika over "stealing her childhood friend".

Either it happens now or at some point down the line.

Personally, I'd say take the hit, get a good approximation of Sayaka's sizes, and don't spoil the surprise.

... And it's still Christmas. So I prefer we take the hit LATER. It can be more in the background, and not be rooted in something that happened on Christmas.

It's perfect! Yes, you'll borrow Oriko for a bit to get the frilly stuff that's just right for Sayaka! This'll work for sure, and just in time too!

You make to reach for Oriko's hand, when it's then that something inside stops you.

It's...it's your common sense. Your common sense is tingling.

Well, not really. But you are thinking about how...well, how would this look, you dragging Oriko away to fit some unmentionables. Kirika's the last person you ever expected to meet here, really, but just because you don't like her doesn't mean you should be a complete and total prat to her. Besides, you're borrowing her girlfriend, not a goddamn handkerchief. You have to be a certain way with this, and doing something else'll just...create some misunderstandings you'd rather not deal with.

You admit to Oriko, then, in the most sheepish-sounding voice you could muster, that you're a terrible husb--er, girlfriend, and that you don't even know Sayaka's three sizes. This gets you a concerned look from Oriko, and another snort from Kirika - that is, until you continue by saying that the former is just the right size for Sayaka, and if it's not too much, could she help you by being a model, at least? No funny stuff, of course, you just want to do this thing right.

"A-ah. Um...I...I see..." Oriko crimsons at this, looking to the side, almost contemplative. Kirika does the same, reddening up to her ears, but for a completely different reason.

"Oi...! What do you think you're doing, Sakura?!" Kirika takes a step towards you, her normally-smooth voice rough with belligerence. "T-That's...don't presume to demand from Oriko such things! Don't involve other people with your incompetence and irresponsibility, Sakura!"

You manage to force yourself not to turn towards Kirika and smirk. You're pretty sure that if she didn't have her hands full, she'd be throttling you by now.

"N-now, now, Kirika-chan. Sakura-san needs my help." Oriko says after a moment, placing a placating hand on Kirika's arm. Smiling at you first, before looking back at her companion. "What are you afraid of? That Sakura-san will take advantage of me in the changing room, or something?"

"W-what?!" A few shoppers turn at Kirika's raised voice. "N-no, I mean...o-of course not! It's just that...I-I mean, she and Sayaka, they--"

"They what, Kirika-chan?" Oriko's placid, beatific smile could almost be described as saintly, a complete contrast from Kirika's stunned, stuttering grimace, her jaw working up and down, trying to form words that just wouldn't come out.

Oriko lets her companion stew for a few moments, before giving her arm a squeeze. "Kirika-chan, please. Sakura-san is a good person. Even if you don't trust her, at the very least, trust me."

Kirika looks down at her feet, mumbling like a chastened puppy. "I trust you," she grumbles. "I just don't trust HER with you." She lifts her gaze to glare at you.

The silver-haired girl huffs at this. "Come, now. You both work in the same company, don't you? I'm sure Sakura-san, even if she was a predator like you keep insinuating, wouldn't risk losing her job over something like this. It doesn't make sense." She gives Kirika's arm another squeeze. "Go on and get cake for us, like we planned. I'll help Sakura-san in the meantime, and I'll be fine." A moment, before she smiles at her companion once more. "If Sakura-san tries anything, you can be sure I'll call for you."

"...Right." Kirika nods, beaten, but she all but snarls at you as she walks past, stuffed rabbit and bags in her arms. You couldn't help but grin at her retreating back, while Oriko herself lets out a sigh of relief.

"She can be a handful sometimes." The elegant girl shakes her head. "But Kirika's a nice person once you get to know her, really. She almost reminds me of..." Her brow furrows. "...Murderface, was it? That friend we met during the company party? They're almost alike, in a way."

...Hey, yeah. You didn't think of it before, but they're a bit similar, aren't they?

"In any case. Let's get to picking out Sayaka-san's present." Oriko smiles, clapping her hands, and you couldn't help but feel your heartbeat quicken at this. "Um, well, what kind of design did you have in mind for her anyway, Sakura-san?"

MAXIMUM SCANDALOUS! You want to get the most scandalous, most shameless, most terrifyingly-lewd set of underwear for Sayaka ever. Because you're nothing but brutally direct with what you want, no quarter whatsoever. Full speed ahead, throwing reason to the curb!

...Except, of course, when other people are involved, especially people that really have no business being involved. Oriko's been nice enough to be so accommodating with your request, that it'd be wrong to make her model the underwear you desperately want to see Sayaka wear. Kirika wouldn't appreciate it either, more's the pity.

It's then that you arrive at the maddeningly-reasonable conclusion: you'll have Oriko model a reasonable, decent pair for you, and then after you've returned her to Kirika, you'll go and exchange the pair for the set you REALLY want: the ones with the SCANDALOUS that is MAXIMUM. You're...well, you're not a pervert, that needs to be said, but sometimes you just have to do what you have to do, right?

You tell Oriko what's what, then, and she nods, smiling again. "Ah, I see! Something lacy and pretty - I think I know just the perfect brand and style! Come with me!"

And you do so. For the next ten minutes, you are given a crash course in the world of frilly, lacy, and nearly-transparent negligee. You learn about gussets, garters, the sort of thing you never really bothered with until...well, until Sayaka came around.

After a bit more time, it's then that Oriko comes away with what looks to be a pure white combo, with quite the tasteful lace design. A far cry, really, from the plain whites and blacks you yourself pull on, and quite a farther one from the sort that you're used to seeing on the blue-haired Eversor. Some of the lace design on the panties actually serve to make the...front part somewhat tastefully transparent, but covering up the important bits. Yes.

You actually had to think about that. It's...well, you love Sayaka, you'll be the first to admit that, even if you're still a bit hesitant to let other people know you're...'official'. But Mikuni Oriko, she's...you don't know if it's just your wishful thinking, or you're picking up the wrong kind of signals, here, but you can't help but feel...a bit funny, whenever she's around you. It's like being enchanted or engrossed by something you know you shouldn't be.

"Sakura-san?" Oriko asks again, her voice soft, feather-light. "Are you alright? You're looking a bit flushed, there..." She reaches out a hand, to touch your forehead. "You're not coming down with something, are you? There's a dreadful bug going around, you should be more careful--"

You all but shrink away from the hand, before blinking and sheepishly say that it's really nothing. Oriko looks at you, concern in her eyes, and you tell her that you don't want to take up too much of her time, so there's really no need for modeling or anything like that. You just want to make sure that they're the right size.

"Oh, I see. I suppose it'd be a bit bad if we kept Kirika-chan waiting." Oriko giggles, before nodding. "Then, please wait for me here while I try them on, Sakura-san. I won't be a moment." She beams at you again, before walking towards the changing room, as elegant as you like. Her solitary ponytail swishing from side to side with her every step.

Hnh. You just passed up the opportunity of seeing Mikuni Oriko model fancy, lacy underwear for you.

This Christmas isn't turning out as Maximum as you'd like, but you feel a strange weight off your shoulders. Like someone had been boring holes in your back with their eyes, and had stopped just now. The sense of relief akin to having your execution being called off by a state pardon.

Hmm. Well, Kharn's already got a personal assistant, doesn't she? Although you won't call Malal that to her face, anyway. Still, you're fully aware of just how much the current Warmaster seems to adore skulls, and you bet that she'd get a kick out of having one hover around her like some sort of pet.

You slowly and carefully type out a reply to Yuma - the last time you tried to make and send a message in a hurry, the phone autocorrected you into saying some rather lewd things. But anyway, you tell the Culexus that yes, she should get one of those flying skulls on her way back. You also thank her for the cake, and it's then that you send the message off. Just in time to see Oriko come back with the underwear, a slight blush on her cheeks.

"A-ah, Sakura-san. These...these are the right size, yes. I..." She reddens just a bit more, before giggling nervously. "I'm sorry, but I do have to thank you for not making me model for you. I-it would have been quite embarrassing, as the lace design really...um..." She gesticulates rather vaguely with her hands. "T-they don't really hide anything, per se. I-it's really a nice pair, though."

Ah. Well. Um. Yeah. You'll go and buy the pair, then...?"

"O-oh, well, I asked the attendant to get you a fresh pair. I...I can't let you buy these, since I've worn them already. I'll just pay for them myself, although I really wasn't planning on buying any today." She reddens just a bit more.

Well, there's a thing. You forgot about that, didn't you? Of course, you have to pay for the pair of underwear Oriko tried on for you. It's not right for her to pay for something you asked her to help you with. Besides, she spared you from the embarrassment of buying something ill-fitting that's supposed to be intimate, and even you know how much of a dealbreaker that can be.

The attendant comes along with the fresh set - and it's there that you take the set that Oriko had worn off her hands, and tell the attendant that you'll be paying for both. You give her the merchandise, along with your debit card, studiously ignoring Oriko's protests. The attendant is puzzled for a moment, before you grin at her and say that it's a rather late Christmas present. She sems to understand this well enough, and hurries off to make the transaction.

"Sakura-san, you didn't have to, really..." Oriko tries again, but you wave her off. You tell her to consider it a gift from you, at least, one that you're positive that Kirika will appreciate too. The young woman crimsons at this, falling silent. You take no notice of this, of course, and continue on to tell her that if she really feels bad about it, then she can pay you back with a present of her own, whenever she wants.

Just as the underwear arrives - in two bags, one for you, one for Oriko, and your card returned to you with the receipt - it's then that you hear her whisper something. Something that you're not sure you heard, since Oriko had been silent the whole time. You hear her voice, breathy and soft, in your head.

+...But I wanted to model it for you, Sakura-san.+

No. No, you couldn't have heard that, could you? You probably just thought it up, that's all. Wishful thinking and all that. It wasn't as loud or as clear as what you hear whenever Kyuubey or Yuma does that pulsing thing. No, couldn't be. Oriko's just shy and all because you bought her an expensive pair of panties. Anyone would be. No big deal, right?

You ignore Kirika's remark and manage to work up a smile, before thanking Oriko for helping you out. She doesn't look back up at you, but she at least acknowledges your thanks with a nod. You take this for the good sign that it is, and wish her a Merry Christmas. Same goes for Kirika, although you don't trust yourself too much to glance at her at the moment. She'd probably notice how...well, confused you are with things.

With that, you make to leave, as slowly and as normally as you can, with the sole intent of getting some breathing room and just being somewhere else. You find yourself stopped by a hand clamping down on your shoulder.

"Wait up, Sakura."

It's Kirika. You could tell by how she's almost trying to squeeze your collarbone into powder.

You manage to repress the reflex of punching a spear into her midsection as you turn slightly to acknowledge her.

"Yeah?"

"...Sorry about earlier." The raven-haired Eversor clears her throat, somewhat awkwardly. "...You know how I can get." A moment more, before she takes her hand off of your shoulder and holding it out instead, an offer to shake. "No hard feelings, at least on Christmas, yeah?"

>> ☐ Deculture 12/27/12(Thu)15:00 No.22249335

>>22249328

You look at the proferred hand suspiciously, then back up at Kirika - and it's then that you clasp wrists with her. Standard salute between Eversors.

"I catch you looking at her again, I'll kill the both of you. And Sayaka." Kirika hisses under her breath as she pulls you close. "Understand?"

You grin at this. Your reply is just as barbed, just as promising.

You don't actually remember it, but you're certain it was about using her flayed skin as a cape if she ever so much as touch Sayaka.

You manage to pull away and leave in a casual manner - and it's only after they're well out of sight that you prop yourself up against a wall, gasping for a breath that you've been holding for quite a bit.

What the hell? WHAT THE HELL? WHAT THE HELL WAS THAT ALL ABOUT?!

THAT WaS NOT MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS. NOT AT ALL.

THE FUCK.

You struggle to catch your breath for a few minutes more, before a puzzled Yuma comes along, a boxed cake in her arms and a paper bag, most probably containing Kharn's skull thingy.

"...What, you're tired already, Kyoko-sempai?" Yuma asks, her bewilderment coloring her vox-corrupted voice. "We're not even halfway through the list! Er, speaking of which, who's next, anyway?" She glances down at the box in her arms. "Miss Sayaka's is done, I'm assuming Miss Kharn's is, too..."

How do you react?

Oh wait, nevermind, false alarm. Bitch is so going on the Naughty List.

We should totally get Kirika a sack of coal for Christmas. Or maybe just an old sack with whatever coal we could find, WITHOUT buying anything... Except for the wrapping.

We get a flashy and expensive box and wrapping.

And then leave a chunk of coal inside, with a note saying "Worth every penny!" or some other sarcastic retort to how she mocks Kyouko for being poor and scruffy.

Or maybe no wrapping, just some old sock Kyouko was going to throw away, filled with some coal she picked up somewhere.

Maybe leave a matchbox too. Without any matches. Just another sarcastic note.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/28/12(Fri)07:19 No.22263174

You are Sakura Kyoko, Magical Girl, on a quest a year and some months ago to inflict MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS on some people that foolishly think that Christmas is something to be skipped. Like it's an optional thing. You couldn't even fathom where that kind of thinking is justified. Sure, in a month or so you'll be facing a Witch in the category synonymous to a global-level extinction event, but really. Cancelling Christmas? Just because of that?

Please forgive them for they do not know what they do. Bless their hearts, and bless them right in their stupid faces.

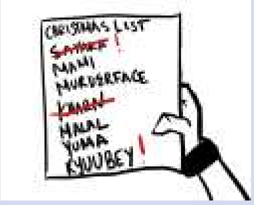
File: 1356697220020.png-(86 KB, 700x560, christmas list.png)



In any case. Just a recap on things as they stand: Kharn's and Sayaka's presents have been bought and secured. You had a bit of an encounter with Oriko and Kirika, an encounter you probably don't want to dwell too much on - that is, if you don't want Yuma to see some very strange and very disturbing images involving Oriko wearing really lacy underwear and your using Kirika's dismembered head as a kickball.

Your list still has four names to cross out, and you've added Kyuubey's name to the list after some thought. Mutant cat may be a bit creepy at times, but he's been a good boss as far as you're concerned. You've heard nightmare stories about girls in the other Officios, about their Incubators being much, much worse. As such, you hold yourself lucky that while you're contracted to a white furry Satan, at least you're contracted to the one who actually has, at the very least, good business ethics.

Yuma has linked back up with you in the department store lobby, and is waiting for your next course of action.

What do you do next?

[]Exchange the lacy panties for MAXIMUM SCANDALOUS.
[]Proceed with the gift buying. The choice of underwear will do.
[]Ask Yuma for potential gift choices.

You decide to continue with the shopping for now. You'll go back and get some MAXIMUM SCANDALOUS panties for Sayaka later, once you're sure that Oriko and Kirika's gone from this particular part of the mall. The rest of the names still need crossing out, anyway.

After a few moments, you finally manage to get your breath back. You apologize to Yuma for this, saying that you've lost the MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS for a minute there, but now it's back and you're raring to go. The next one on THE LIST is Mami, in any case, and you've a few ideas on what to get her. Well, besides the obvious - you've heard her mumble in the locker room a few times about how her bras have been getting tighter and tighter, to the point where she'd had to go commando on some days (that's what you suspect, at least). You've tried to confirm it with her a couple of times, but she always ducked the issue, blushing furiously all the while.

"Oh, yeah, I noticed that too, Kyoko-sempai." Yuma pipes up, apropros of completely nothing and nearly making you drop the packet of Pocky that you've been in the middle of tearing open. "You could really tell by the way she walks slowly and carefully, without the spring in her step that she usually has. Otherwise they're just going to..." She lifts up a gloved hand to her own chestplate, palm skyward, and makes a bouncing motion.

"New brassiere's a nice choice for Mami-sempai, but...well, we don't have her exact measurements, and I doubt she'd appreciate a gift like that." The Culexus shrugs. "She seems the sort to buy her own...stuff. A tea set or something tea-related would probably work better. Or maybe some expensive tea instead?" Yuma points to one of the upper floors. "There's some shops here that sell the premium stuff."

What do you get for Mami Tomoe?

[]New brassiere!
[]Expensive premium tea!
[]Something else?

Hnh. Well. As disturbing as it is to hear Yuma talk about this sort of thing like the weather, you do have to recognize her logic. Mami is pretty sensitive with her sweater puppies, even though she's the last one to say so. Buying her a bra without her actual measurements at hand would probably make for one awful and awkward Christmas gift, and Mami deserves better than that.

So you decide on the stylish tea set AND a bag of premium tea. Yuma nods at this, the vox speaker of her helm clicking, telegraphing the fact that your junior is just about to speak. Strangely enough, nothing follows after that, as if she'd changed her mind about speaking. It clicks a moment more, and it's then that her vox-mangled voice comes on again.

"Kyoko-sempai, I don't mean to sound presumptuous here, but do you know anything about tea?"

Not much, actually. You're more of a coffee kind of person. You do know that it's a long and complicated process just to brew it, and even more of one to drink it. You personally don't think much of the stuff - but you respect it enough, because classy people like Mami seem to enjoy it quite a bit.

"If that's the case, then I suggest splitting up again, for this one." She raises the boxed cake, and the bag containing Kharn's gift. "I'll drop this off at the company car, and then run up to the tea shop and get Miss Mami's tea set and that bag of premium tea. You go and tackle the next one on the list - that'd be Miss Murderface, right?"

Y-yeah. It's probably her that's next up.

"Well, you know her longer than I do, so that'll be easy for you. The stuff about tea, I actually know a bit about, so you don't have to worry about that." Even though her features are masked by her skulled helmet, you can hear the smile on her voice. "So, what do you decide, sempai?"

[]Split the party up. It's faster, anyway.
[]Stick together. Who knows what kind of people you might bump into next?

I don't think Kyouko has enough of a budget to buy a gift for every Culexus.

Something cheaper and nicer would be to have Kyouko, who's the only who can stand to be around them without throwing up, to hold a small party or something, if you absolutely must.

Also, a bit meta but remember that every Culexus except for Yuma is going to die in just about two months. I think a party would be more memorable than a gift for them.

You decide to split up again. Yuma's right - it'd be much faster to leave the matter of tea to her, someone who actually knows something about the stuff. It cuts the shopping time in half, too - you don't have to spend as much time flitting back and forth to complete your list.

The Culexus is quick to follow your decision, and once more you're left alone to your own devices. It's only until Yuma's well and gone that you realize that you didn't get to give her the bag containing Sayaka's lacy unmentionables to stash back in the Warmaster's Maurader. You frown at this, and contemplate calling Yuma back - but you decide that it's not worth having her double back to you. It's not that it's heavy or anything like that, anyway.

Well, whatever. With Mami's gift being taken care of, Murderface is next on your list. And she's pretty easy to get gifts for, come to that. You've heard from Malal that she seems to be getting interested in alcohol - and you've spotted her ordering a few drinks from the company bar. She didn't seem to like mixed drinks very much, though - so maybe something along the lines of hard liquor, but not anything too fancy? Something that's more up her alley, like...whisky...maybe?

There's always the chance that Mami might disapprove, though. You've seen the way she dotes on the girl - kind of motherly in a way, just a bit more intensely than a big sister. One time, she even spent the entire night brushing out Murderface's hair, back when she still had it long, and still bore the name Girl A. You volunteered to help then, but Murderface simply growled at you.

Heh. Probably wanted Mami all to herself. Not that you couldn't blame her. If you didn't have Sayaka, well...you'd probably go for Mami yourself, come to that.

+Focus, Kyoko-sempai.+ Yuma pulses to you, again. +You're slipping. Maximum Christmas and all that.+

In retaliation, you think about Mami in such a way that you've never thought about her before. Well, you probably have, once or twice, before Sayaka came into your life. In fact...

+G-gh! Stop! STOP, SEMPAI. I GET IT. NO NO NO NO--+

Yuma's desperate cries for you to stop trail off into a helpless whimpering, before finally trailing off into silence.

Heh. You reach up with the back of your hand to wipe off a burgeoning nosebleed, before continuing to stalk forward, glancing at the shops this way and that.

What do you get for Murderface? You note that this'll be your first Christmas with her, too, so you have to make it memorable.

Drinks, smokes and a jacket for the cold weather. That sounds like a nice assortment of things to get for your first Christmas, doesn't it? Yeah, that's what you'll get for ol' dour Murderface, maybe she'll be happy enough with it that she'd smile just a little bit. Granted, she's gone a long way from being the silent, unpredictable Girl A that you yourself once had to knock unconscious because she had a gun to Sayaka's head and was screaming this nonsense about fallen angels and so on - but it'd certainly be nice to see a more...normal side of her, anyway. One that didn't look so..miserable and haunted all the time, only to liven up whenever Mami was near.

You remember all too clearly the first week after Mami and Sayaka pulled her out of Charlotte's barrier. It was quite the stressful time - although you're probably understating it, considering that Mami nearly had a nervous breakdown dealing with Girl A. So many times that Girl A woke up screaming, clawing at her restraints, asking questions no one had the answer for. 'What timeline am I in?' was one. 'Is she safe?' was another. Every single one asked in a hoarse scream, desperate for anyone to answer them.

And then, when the medical staff had barged in to sedate her, with either you or Sayaka holding her down (sometimes the both of you, at once), she'd cry loudly and pitifully about failing again. About being scared of dying again. Apologizing to no one, crying with so much pain that it only took the sight of her tears for Mami to break down herself. Even you weren't immune, and you had to retire to somewhere private, where no one would hear you muffle your own sobs against a blue-haired Eversor's shoulder.

Day and night you and Mami stood vigil over this strange, lonely young woman from a Witch barrier. No Incubator owned up to establishing her contract, no one knew who she was, and no one seemed eager to find her. Even in this world where girls like you - the forgotten, the disowned, the lost - found meaning and redemption in becoming a Magical Girl, only she seemed to be truly forgotten by everything, the only one completely lost. Being a Magical Girl only seemed to make it worse. Mami shared your sentiment, here - you suspect that it's why she tried so hard. It's why you did, anyway.

Procuring the jacket wasn't all that hard. You bought her a navy blue bomber jacket, the one with the soft fur at the collar and the padded material to keep the cold out and the heat in. You have a bunch of these yourself - you think they're brilliant and comfy, especially in Mitakihara where it always seems to be chilly. You can make them as snug or as loose as you like, you can use it as a blanket if you're lying down or a comforter if all you have to sleep on is the cold, hard ground - and you can roll it up into a pillow if you're lacking one. In one of the inner zip-up pockets, you stuff a pack of Marlboro Reds - they're the only ones you've tried before, and you liked them well enough. You'd have gotten her flavored cigars, but it doesn't fit her image.

You're just about to make your way towards a liquor shop - to handle the third and last piece of Murderface's MAXIMIZED CHRISTMAS package - when your smartphone vibrates again, signaling a call, this time. You blink at this, and pull it out. The screen name - and the photo that comes up - tells you that it's Sayaka calling.

[]Answer it. May as well see what she wants.

You answer the call. While letting it drop may be a tempting way to show how you felt about what she said regarding Christmas - you've been with Sayaka long enough to know that she absolutely despises passive-aggression and any acts resembling it. She'd told you time and again that if you wanted to voice out a complaint, then you should do it in the most direct way possible - no limpwristed nonsense like cold shoulders or the silent treatment or anything like that. She wanted you to be frank, to be direct, to be proactive with how you felt. It was how she dealt with things, and expected to be dealt with the same way.

Well, it's definitely a rather honest and pragmatic way of living, and you can't fault her for wanting a clear-cut, black-and-white response out of everyoneo she met. You do have your own issues with such a way of treating people, but like all couples, it's one you both agreed to disagree on. At the very least, you promised her that you'd always make it clear to her how you felt.

The call connects, and you hear Sayaka's voice, all stiff and formal.

It's a strange phenomenon, really - all your friends, barring Mami, seem to be quite horrible at phone conversations. Kharn's prone to hanging up on you at random times, and often her accent gets so thick that you can't understand what she's saying; Murderface's idea of a conversation involves long periods of silence in between before she murmurs a reply; As for Malal, well, she always seems to know what you're about to say just as the call connects. Even before you could say anything, she'd have repeated the gist of your message back to you, thanked you, and then hung up.

As for Sayaka, well...she's not really the sort to enjoy conversation over the phone. She's told you enough that she found it impersonal, although you've heard the smile in her voice whenever you called to check up on her. But in normal circumstances, a phone call with Miki Sayaka usually involves clipped, terse language, no hanky panky or sweet nothings or nicknames or anything of the sort. Just a really tense conversation, something that you'd want to get over with sooner than later - that irrational fear of being interrogated prickling the back of your neck and giving you a cold sweat.

You consider your reply just as you get to the liquor shop - where a pink-haired girl with rather nice amber eyes and a pink apron over a blouse and skirt combo attends to you with a smile. You grin at her - she's wearing her hair in some rather cute ponytails, each one secured with white ribbons. Gesturing that you're on the phone at the moment, you mouth an apology, before pointing towards the bottles of Kong Whisky at the display. She nods in understanding, taking one of the bottles and placing it on the counter in front of you.

How do you reply to Sayaka?

"Currently shopping," You reply, in a tone you hoped sounded aloof, yet natural. "Could perhaps have reacted a little less explosive. Maybe. Nah. I don't care what people say, Christmas should be celebrated even if we might all die horribly the very next day." You take the silence after that as a good thing, and continue on as if you've said nothing out of the ordinary. "Hey, do we need toilet paper?"

More silence. Then... "...No, we're still good with that. Look, I know what you're trying to do. And I understand it. It's just...the rest of the Officio is spooked, that's all. The Warmaster thinks that it's much better if we take the time to train and ready ourselves instead of...playing around."

"Playing around?" You can't help but be offended at this, your eyes narrowing. "Christmas isn't playing around! It's one day of a year where you can show someone how much you appreciate being a part of their lives! Granted, we don't do it enough even when it's not Christmas, but when we actually have a day set to do it, you suddenly don't because there's a Witch hangin' over our heads? I don't believe I'm hearin' this from you, Sayaka!"

You let your silence speak for you. In the interim, you glance at the single solitary bottle of Kong that the girl had placed on the counter, before pointing at it with your free hand and then holding up three fingers. The pink-haired attendant blinks at your unspoken request, before smiling again and nodding - placing two more bottles of the same brand beside the first. You give her a thumbs up, and motion that you'd like them gift-wrapped into a single package. She nods again, smiling, although you could see from her eyes that she's a bit concerned from the way your conversation with Sayaka is going.

"Kyoko? Kyoko, come on. Am I just talking to myself, here? Dammit, I--"

"What if there isn't an afterwards?" You cut Sayaka off. "No one likes to say it, Sayaka, but what if this is th' last time we have to celebrate together? What if it's the last chance to be with someone you love?"

A cozy Christmas. Warm food on the table. Your mother in the kitchen, your father setting the table. Your younger sister, pouting as she insists to sit next to you, never once letting go of your sleeve.

You reach up with your free hand to pinch at the bridge of your nose, trying to disguise the fact that you're wiping at your eyes. "This...this should be a happy time, isn't it? We don't have time to put things off like this. What if you're not there to celebrate it with me afterward? What if it's me...?"

Silence. Utter silence.

"That's a lot of what ifs, you know." Sayaka's reply is soft, but sullen. "You promised that we'd never talk about stuff like that. With what we do, we shouldn't talk about that sort of stuff at all." Another sigh. "This isn't like you, Kyoko..."

You sniff derisively at this. Of course it wasn't. If they'd only kept their mouths shut about Christmas and let the Secret Santa happen, this would've have even happened. In any case, this'll be good for everyone, so she should get ready to have an awesome Christmas. One that's properly maximized.

"Idiot." You hear Sayaka sniff as well. "...I love you, you know that, don't you?"

You murmur the affirmative after a moment of silence, before returning the confession and hanging up.

"...I should really card you for this, you know," The pink-haired attendant says after you've blown your nose into the handkerchief that Sayaka always makes a point to make you bring along. "...but I think it's alright. It's Christmas, anyway." She beams at you, and you mumble your thanks as you give her your debit card. "I'll just say that you were buying it for your parents, or something."

Yeah. Yeah, that's a good cover story.

She rings up the giftwrapped bottles of Kong for you, and you grunt slightly as you take them off her hands. You didn't think they'd be this heavy, three bottles of booze taped and wrapped together.

"Oh, and have this one, on the house." The attendant gives you what looks to be a single shot of Kong in a miniaturized replica of its bottle, a rather cute pink bow tied around it. You thank her for it, placing it in the bag that contained the rest of Murderface's gifts. "Christmas promo for all our customers who buy more than two bottles." She seems to hesitate for a moment, before reaching over to pat your hand. "You're a good...um, girlfriend, Kyoko-san. Please take care of Sayaka-chan."

...What? How'd...how'd she know your name? And Sayaka? And--

"Oh, um." The girl seems to redden at this, her eyes widening, before smiling awkwardly. "The...the volume on your phone, I could hear your conversation clearly. I didn't mean to eavesdrop, though, really. I'm sorry if it seems that way." She ducks slightly in apology. "I...um. I'm pretty new here, to be honest, and one of the things I learned in management was to be a bit more personal in my approach. That said, you...you look like you needed to hear something like that."

...Huh. Well, erm. You suppose that's true. You manage to look sheepish at this, laughing slightly at yourself, before thanking her again. You tell her that you wish other booze shop attendants were as nice - and as pretty - as her.

You'd like to move on to the next one on your list, but the call with Sayaka's drained your MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS a bit, so you decide to refill by getting your junior into the spirit of things, as well. You duck in briefly into an otaku store you've passed by once or twice, and get something for Yuma that should do the job quite nicely.

After your purchase - which, if you're honest, you couldn't stop giggling about - you give Yuma a call, to check up on her and see how she's doing with Mami's gift. She answers after two rings, her voice colored with impatience.

"Hey, sempai. Picked up Mami-san's gift. It...kind of cleaned me out, sorry about that." She sounds a bit distressed at this, and you immediately tell her that you'll be reimbursing her for her expenses today. She seems to cheer up slightly at this. "O-oh, alright. I've also taken the liberty of buying Miss Malal's present for her, so you can cross her name out of your list too."

Huh. Well, that's convenient. What did Yuma buy for the Warmaster's Equerry, then?

"To be honest, she called me up just as I was about to try and guess, and told me to buy her pineapple salad, instead. She said she wanted to try some." There's a rustle of leather and chain, a subtle hint of shrugging. "Got her some in a sealed package, anyway. Should be good until we can get back."

Pineapple salad...? Well, you suppose it's tasty, but it's not really Christmas Food, is it?

Well, no matter. What's important is that your list is NEARLY done. With Yuma's present also already bought, it's just one more gift to buy!

"Ah, Kyuubey-san, right? He's...sort of some cat-like creature, so...what about catnip?"

Perfect! You were just about to suggest that. You tell her, then, to meet you up at the mall's pet shop, which is just a few floors up from where you are. She agrees, and hangs up immediately.

When you finally meet a few moments later in front of the pet store, it's then that you present her with her gift, in advance: the unholy union of a one-piece pajama and a mascot costume of a Christmas Reindeer. Complete with stuffed horns! It should be worn immediately, like, RIGHT NOW.

"...N-no, sempai, you've got to be kidding me."

RIGHT NOW. She has to wear it RIGHT NOW, you insist. Or is she against MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS? If even Yuma is against Christmas, then that means that the WITCHES have WON.

"B-but we're in public! I can't take off my suit here--!"

Whoever said anything about getting naked? She can wear the costume over her suit. It's a one piece, after all.

"O-oh. Um. Alright, then..."

You cross your arms under your chest, feeling very satisfied about yourself as you watch a young woman come to terms with adulthood.

Which is pretty much the same as putting on a costume in the middle of a mall, with everyone watching.

After a few moments of struggling with the entire thing, Yuma stares out into the world with the Culexus visor being eaten by a rather droopy-looking stuffed bipedal reindeer, its arms and shoulders a bit...droopy.

"This is the worst Christmas ever," She voxes.

Jyubey probably has a way of witching out his megucas in case they go rogue, and possibly as a way of weakening rival Officios by killing priority targets. Perhaps that one Pleiades Saint at Mami's place was trying to get out of Jyubey's business, but was remotely witched by Jyubey to kill two birds with one stone. Gets rid of defectors that could tell secrets, and whichever authority figure has to deal with a fairly powerful witch to boot.

He may not have had a chance to do this with Midori, as she was kept in the cold room when she was in the Ninth Officio's custody. I have a feeling that Jyubey was attempting to save face there, rather than recover a lost meguca.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/29/12(Sat)06:33 No.22278963

ONE YEAR AND A COUPLA MONTHS AGO. YOU. MAGICAL GIRL. SAKURA KYOKO.

BRINGING MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS TO THE STUPID DILDOS YOU CALL YOUR BUDDIES.

WITH YOUR GIFTS AND YOUR HELPER, YOU ARE MORE THAN READY.

AWW YEEEEAHHHH
MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS

Well, anyway.

There's just one more name on your list to cross out, and it's one that you added during the trip itself: Kyuubey, the Incubator of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum and pretty much the big boss. He's not really all that bad when you compare him to the other Incubators - he's polite, keeps to a timetable, and makes sure that every Magical Girl under his employ has a roof over her head and hot meals three times a day.

Hell, he even pays for a contractee's schooling if she wanted to be a working student! Of course, she'd be on call all the time, but she wouldn't need to drop out of school if she wanted to finish her education. When you asked him about this, he mentioned something about how one day, Incubators will be rendered obsolete by the Universe, and Magical Girls will be allowed to become what they were meant to be.

You thought he sounded sad when he said this, but you were giving him a tummy rub then, so you couldn't really tell back then.

Putting that aside, what do you get someone who is by all rights an alien mutant cat, and has enough money that he actually has an actual mini-fridge in his own office?

You don't get something like that if you're not a big shot.

CHRISTMAS LIST!
YUMA

>>22278967

"Didn't we already decide on catnip, though?" Your little helper in her reindeer mascot costume, Yuma, voxes beside you. You're both standing in front of what looks to be a pet store selling a lot of pet supplies. "By all rights, an Incubator is pretty much just like a cat. Biologically similar, too. So cat nip should work."

Well, yes, but it's not that Maximum, is it? Catnip's just catnip. Do you really want to be known as the Magical Girl who gave her Incubator a buncha weeds?

So, what do you get Kyuubey?

[]Cat nip.
[]A Cat tower.
[]Other.

Right! Besides a pound bag of cat nip, you'll get him one of those cat towers you always see whenever Sayaka sends you those pictures of cats with english words pasted on them. You've always thought cat towers were a bit...indulgent and decadent for a pet, as far as making them comfortable was concerned. After all, aren't cats supposed to roam around an' such? Your entire house is literally their cat tower, no need to spend any more on them besides the food an' the litter box. It's almost comparable to folks who buy pets for their pets. Crazy.

But when applied to your boss, who just happens to be a mutant cat, the concept is kinda cute, somehow. Actually, now that you've thought about it, you can't stop thinking about it, which pretty much cements your decision right then and there.

So, with the utmost conviction of treating your multi-billionaire boss as no different than a pampered fat feline, you step into the pet shop named 'Ganaha's Savannah'.

The first thing you realize here - besides the pet store having, well, real live animals walking around the premises - is that it doesn't smell like any pet store you've ever walked into. It has kind of an earthy smell - pleasant, kinda forest-like. Certainly not the nose-crumpling amalgamation of scents that has tepid water, fish food, and cat droppings mixed in.

"...Sempai, there's a crocodile crawling towards my leg," Yuma's voice crackles from her helm's speakers. "Sempai, the crocodile is on my leg. It's rubbing up against my leg." A moment more. "It's become MY LEG--"

"Oh, customers!" A voice pipes up from the depths of the pet store, and you turn to look at what appears to be the store owner walking towards you. She's wearing a teal tube top and denim cutoffs, with a pink apron over the entire deal. Her black hair, long and unruly, is tied off in a rather jaunty topknot, the length of it trailing down her back. Her bright green eyes a striking offset from her slightly-tanned skin, topped off by an enthusiastic grin with a protruding canine. "First customers of the day, even! What can I get for ya? Oh, and don't mind Hunter, he's just bein' friendly!"

"Whoa." Despite her crocodile-related troubles, Yuma gasps at the owner's arrival. "It's like...it's like I'm in a bad science fiction movie, or something." A moment. "Sempai, you're...you're not looking to lose your virginity now, are you?"

What? What the hell is this kid talking about? The hell is Malal teaching Yuma?

"N-nevermind, sempai." Yuma says after a moment, shaking her head, the plush antlers perched on top of her helmet wiggling back and forth. "For...forget I ever said anything."

Hnh. Well. You'll have to talk to her about the sort of nonsense that Malal's filling her head with. That's for later, though - right now, you've got a cat tower to purchase.

But first, greetings. Greetings must be made.

"YO!" You hold up a hand towards the ceiling, addressing the shopkeeper with the proper amount of confidence and bluster. "How's business?!"

The girl narrows her eyes at you, before suddenly grinning and returning the greeting, word for word, motion by motion. "YO! Not too bad, not too bad!"

"MERRY CHRISTMAS!"

"SAME TO YOU!"

"They talk the same," You hear Yuma's mumblings crackle through her vox in a breathless gasp. "They look the same, they act the same. They're just as annoyingly energetic as each other, too. T-this must be what going mad feels like. N-no, no, Miss Malal taught me to keep calm, and--"

Bwah. You should really have a talk with Malal. She's bringing up the kid with the completely wrong values!

"What's her deal?" The shopkeeper nods towards your little reindeer helper. "I get the costume, but what's with the helmet? Kinda clashing, ain't it?"

"Ah, it's something she has to wear, or else she gets a bit...ya know." You tap your temple, ignoring Yuma's clearly offended grunt. "Anyway, I wanna cat tower that'll kick my ass. It's for the boss, he's a...real cat person." A moment. "Oh, and probably a pound bag of high quality catnip, whatever you got."

"Oh, cat stuff!" The shopkeeper nods. "Yeah, I got a lot of that. Had to stock up just last week, after the crazy catpeople came rushing in to buy presents fer their 'life partners'." She mimes the quotation marks with curled fingers. "I mean, I like animals an' all, but some of them actually buy pets for their pets. Nuttier than peanut butter, those folks."

Yeah, definitely. You watch as she whistles what sounds like a complicated tune, holding out an arm - and, no kidding, you see two bluebirds and a freakin' HAWK perch upon her arm. Like some sorta Disney princess.

"Aaanyway, what you want is the CatMaster 3000." The shopkeeper points towards a particularly-expensive looking box with the picture of a cat tower built like...well, it's built like something expensive. With towers, tiers, hideaways and stairs. "That's the best I got, and the only one I have left." She whistles again, and the birds fly off - one of the bluebirds flitting about and resting on your shoulder, calm as you like. "Oh, hey! Little fella likes you, he's usually shy around customers, 'specially new ones. Ain't that something?"

Well, you're not much of a bird person, but you think the critter's cute. You like dogs more, you say.

"Yeah, I get that." She nods in understanding. "Oh, uh, catnip's already there." She points to a large sealed bag of the stuff, piled beside similar ones in the corner of the store. "I usually sell 'em by the packet, but since you're buying it in bulk, may as well get you one of those. They're three pounds a bag, and I'll give you the discount fer it. Just take one and I'll ring it up along with the CatMaster 3000, no problem."

"Work clothes, eh? Yeah, I can relate." The Shopkeeper looks you up and down, nodding. "Had to dress up a coupla times like that too, except there's much more skin showing. I like yours, looks nifty and active. The detached sleeves are a bit much though, but that's just my opinion."

Well, yeah, you actually think the same, but they keep your arms warm, at least. You wish you can say the same for your armpits, though, but them's the breaks.

"Yeah, some people'd call that a charm point and stuff. First it was like, the skin where your stockings ended, now it's armpits. It's crazy."

Yeah. Lot of perverts in this town.

A series of beeps and the loud scritching of an ancient receipt printer interrupts your conversation, and it's then that the girl hands you back your debit card, along with a rolled-up receipt. "Aaand there we go! Y'got yourself a CatMaster 3000 and a three pound bag of catnip. Whoever you're buying it for is pretty darn lucky." There's a rustling of plastic as she bags both the box and the bag of catnip - and you load yourself down with both. The cat tower is actually heavier, but it's nothing you can't handle. "So, uh, nothing else, then? Can't ask you to adopt one of my critters here, can I?"

"Sempai, the crocodile is still my leg." Yuma whispers, tugging at your sleeve.

"O-oh, but not Hunter, y'can't take him." The shopkeeper giggles as she moves to detach the giant green lizard from your reindeer helper's leg, which it seems to have been quite attached to. "Had to fight through customs to get this sucker through from Africa, and I'll be lonely without him around."

Heh. Well...adopting a pet's something you'd like to do, but probably in another month or so. You'll probably be too busy in the coming weeks, and it'll just be bad for the pet.

"Oh? Ah, yeah, that sounds bad. Sure, come back anytime when you're a bit more ready, then." It's then that she holds out her hand, and you take it, grasping it firmly. "Thanks for your business, any case! Name's Hibiki Gahana, hope to see you again sometime soon!"

You return her grin, and give her your name, as well. You promise that you'll try to be back soon enough, maybe with a couple of friends too. She beams at this, and you exchange numbers before you and Yuma leave with your purchases.

And with that, you've just completed THE LIST! You'd raise your arms in triumph, but as it is you're feeling a bit worn out from staying on MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS the entire time. In fact, you feel as though you've gone sparring with yourself for twelve rounds straight!

"I'm...I think I'm almost worn out, too, Sempai." Yuma replies, clutching the bags that contained Mami's presents. "S-so, er, let's go back, then? Maximum Christmas and all that?"

Yeah. Maximum Christmas.

You reach over and pat Yuma on the head -- or helmet, anyway. She's done good, to help you on this little sidequest.

"N-no thanks necessary, sempai." Despite all that you've put her through, today, you hear genuine cheer in her voice, if a bit colored by fatigue. "I enjoyed it. It was insane, and kind of a bother, but...we don't get out much, anymore, so this was...really great. I should be thanking you." She stops in her tracks to turn and face you directly - and with her arms full of gifts, she bows slightly at the waist, her reindeer horns drooping.

"...I really enjoyed being out here with you, sempai. Thank you."

How do you react?

You have no reply to Yuma's thanks except to step forward and pull the girl into a hug, nearly making her drop all the stuff you'd loaded her down with, your cheek pressing against the cold plexiglass of her helmet's visor. You hear her gasp at this, a surprised exhalation expressed by digitized speakers, but she offers no protest at all, this time. In fact, you feel her return the hug as best as she could.

It's after a few moments that you draw back, having finally organized your thoughts enough. You tell her that you're just glad someone else understood what you were trying to do. You apologize if it has been a bother for her, you going about all MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS and all - but you just wanted to make sure that the people you consider friends, including Yuma herself, to not forget what's really important. Especially in your line of work.

"W-well, I'm sure they won't forget it easily, this time." Yuma looks up at you, the smile evident in her voice. "S-so, um, should we go, sempai? We've got all we need, right?"

Hmm. You let Yuma free from your grasp, before glancing about once. Yeah, you guess you've got everything. It's then that you ask her if she can go ahead and bring the Marauder around? You just need to check something at the last second.

"O-oh? Er, sure, sempai." She nods, the reindeer horns flopping this way and that. "I'll just take this and park the car outside the lobby, yeah? Ten minutes?"

You nod at this, and she dutifully heads off, again. Once she's out of sight, it's then that you backtrack to the shop that you've been to only a few minutes ago.

"Oi, Kyoko-chan!" Hibiki greets you, blinking in surprise. "Changed your mind or somethin'...?"

It's well into the afternoon when you finally get back to the Officio in the warmaster's Marauder. Yuma, still in her reindeer outfit, pulsed a request for help for the other Culexus to assist in getting all the presents out. It's actually a lot, and they've given you a trolley thing to wheel the presents around in. They would've delivered the presents for you, but they didn't want to...spoil the delivery as it was. They were Culexus, after all, and a lot of them walking around at once would make it difficult to spread CHRISTMAS around.

So, who do you spread the Maximum Christmas to, first?

Alright. You decide to start off the MAXIMUM CHRISTMASING with your boss and Incubator, Kyuubey. With Yuma the Reindeer's help, you manhandle the trolley into the elevator leading up to his office. After a few moment's worth of grunting and pushing and swearing, you manage to wheel your impromptu sleigh past the entrance, and into the double doors leading to the Incubator's Sanctum.

"...T-this is the first time I've ever been here," Yuma murmurs, looking around. "A-are you sure this is okay, sempai? I mean, this is the Incubator we're kind of barging into without prior notice..."

It'll be fine, you tell her. If the both of you get in trouble for it, well, you'll take responsibility. You're her sempai, after all!

"I know that, but--"

The Culexus' protest is cut short by you basically kicking the doors to Kyuubey's Office open, resulting in loud echoing thuds that basically just boom around the enclosed space and surprising the hell out of the people currently talking to your boss. Malal, Kharn and Mami, probably standing around and worrying about Walpurgisnacht again. Confidently, you stride forward, pulling the trolley along by its front with one hand, while Yuma pushed from behind.

"...Kyoko-san?" Mami says after a few moments of stunned silence, with Kharn still blinking and Malal shrugging. "..What are you doing? What's in that trolley? And--"

"--what have you done with Omegon?" Malal's voice, corrupted by her vox speakers, overpowers the blonde's own quite easily. "Is...is that a reindeer costume?"

"Eh? Reindeer? What animal is--" Your Warmaster, Kharn, narrows her eyes at the word, saying it a couple of times, as if trying out its taste. "Oh, you mean, like with Santa Claus, and his horse things?" She turns back towards Yuma, eyes wide, before suddenly erupting in a snorting fit of giggling. "Ahahaha! Is perfect! M-Malal, t-that should be new Anima Speculum version!"

Malal seems to be less than amused, however. "Sakura, is this some kind of joke? Are you trying to make a fool out of my Culexus?"

Yuma seems to shrink at at that, but you bolster her by throwing an arm around the Culexus and grinning confidently. "Of course not! Yuma here helped me get you fatheads presents, and we both decided to get into the spirit! See?" You point to your slightly dust-besmirched Santa Hat, perched upon your head. It's then that you point at the trolley. "And THOSE are presents. PRESENTS that I bought for you idiots who can't seem to just let yourselves take it easy, even on Christmas of all days!"

Mami, Malal and Kharn all turn to look at each other, and it's then that the blonde Vindicare Rank Leader speaks up, an uncertain smile on her voice. "Kyoko-san, um, I know that you're upset about the Secret Santa, but Walpurgisnacht--"

"NO! NO WALPURGISNACHT!" You shout, arms akimbo. "NO WITCHES, NOT TODAY! ONLY CHRISTMAS! MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS!"

Even Kharn winces at your enthusiasm. "Ah, um, I understand how you are excited, yes? But tone it down a little, yes? Kyuubey is very tired, he is sleeping." The Warmaster gestures with a claw towards the Incubator's high-backed leather seat, and you can see a small, white furry bundle curled up, its eyes closed.

Huh. Well. You've never seen Kyuubey sleep. You've always thought he never needed to.

Well, you suppose you'll just have to leave your present for him beside his desk, then. He can enjoy them when he wakes up.

You ask Yuma to off-load Kyuubey's presents for him, while you yourself personally deliver a faceful of MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS to the others present. The tea set and expensive premium tea for Mami; the canister of expensive pineapple salad to Malal; and the servitor skull to Kharn. Both Mami and Malal seem pleasantly surprised at this, the former smiling at you beautifully in thanks. You feel your cheeks redden at this.

Kharn, on the other hand...

"Ahaha, what is this? If this is joke present, Sakura, I will be very angry, you know?" Your Warmaster smiles as her fleshmetal hands neatly dissect the wrapping from the box, and the colorful paper lies in strips on the office floor as she finally sees what you got her. "W-wait. This is...this is hovering skull toy, that can play music and take notes? A-and it follows me around, and responds to voice commands?"

"I...I got you batteries for it, too," Yuma squeaks in hesitation - before nearly full-out screaming as the Warmaster charges her, pulling her into a bear hug and lifting her into the air.

"THIS! THIS I LIKE! THIS IS BEST GIFT!" Kharn is beside herself in exultation, all smiles and energy. "IT IS PERFECT! IT IS WHAT I HAVE ALWAYS WANTED! AHAHA!" The rest of you are just silent as you watch the most feared killer in the Officio behave like a child on Christmas morning. "Honestly, was expecting some kind of gag gift, Malal always gives me those, but this! Is perfect!" She crushes Yuma to her, before looking at you - and you do a double take as you see tears in Kharn's eyes. "Sakura! You are idiot sometimes, but thank you!"

N-no problem! No problem at all! You manage to work up a grin and give her a thumbs up. Simply being MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS, after all!

"Hn? What's going on? What's the commotion about?" It's then that all five of you turn towards the Incubator's chair - and you see Kyuubey stirring in his seat, one perfectly-round eye opening, then the other. "Ah. Sakura Kyoko. I was wondering where you went--" It's then that he suddenly snaps up into all fours, looking around, suddenly animated. "...What is that smell? I can't place it, but it's around here, somewhere--"

His words trail off into silence as he spies the sealed bag of catnip stashed beside his desk, along with the boxed CatMaster 3000 - and quick as a flash, he'd pounced on the stuff, nuzzling it and pawing at it.

"...Catnip?" Malal says after a moment. "You got our boss catnip, Sakura? And a cat tower?"

You shrug at this, unable to form words as you see the normally-unflappable Incubator rolling around on top of the sealed bag of herbs. It's...it's a disturbing sight.

You manage to break away from the sight long enough to ask Mami where the others are. Namely, Murderface and Sayaka.

"Oh, um. Sayaka, I think, went back to your apartment. She said she was going to try and cook dinner for the both of you." Mami says, turning once to look at you, before moving back to photographing Kyuubey. "She was a bit down earlier, after you left. Murderface is in her quarters, as usual."

"I'm sorry about earlier, but we weren't expecting you to react this way! Thank you for your gift, I'll make sure to treasure it, just like I treasure you!"

She ends this, predictably enough, with a kiss to your cheek, and another hug.

We should give Sayaka a chance to make dinner and finish all of our business. Then we'll be lingerie Santa for her.

And Murderface deserves to be part of MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS, she might be grumpy, dour, and not admit that she likes it, but deep inside she'll appreciate that we did this for her.

You decide to move on and give Murderface her present personally. You'll save Sayaka for last. But before you do, you ask them if they could help Kyuubey with his cat tower. It looks complicated to put together, anyway, and you don't think he can manage on his own. Being a mutant cat and all.

"Sure, why not?" Malal says, in the middle of prising open her canister of pineapple salad. "I've got the exact same model in my quarters. I'll have it up for him after he's done rolling around in catnip." She turns to Kharn and Mami. "Hey, want some pineapple salad? Fresh Hawaiian pineapples, I had Yuma get the best stuff."

"Oh, don't mind if I do, Miss Malal." Mami smiles, and Kharn seems to be up for some too, the Warmaster having prised open her own gift and was now leafing through its instruction manual. You smile at the success of MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS, and leave the office with your helper and the trolley.

"...Did you hear Kyuubey?" Yuma asks as the both of you step into the elevator. "He was actually purring! A-and he was saying something weird, about how it feels as if civil war soldiers are living under his skin..."

Really? You didn't pick up on that.

At least he sounded happy, that's the important thing!

MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS!

Minutes later, you find Murderface exactly where Mami said she'd be: in her quarters, which is next door to Mami's own. You gave her door a good knocking, and pulled it open when you heard no reply. For a moment - as you looked about her bare, spartan room, devoid of anything except for a dresser and a bed - you thought it was empty, until you saw her sitting in the corner, knees pulled up to her chest, staring at nothing.

You take a moment to center yourself, before taking Murderface's presents from Yuma's arms. You tell her quietly that you'll have to do this one on your own. She readily agrees, and says that she'll wait for you outside.

She closes the door behind you, and you make to approach her.

You are barely able to before Murderface suddenly speaks, her gaze swivelling towards you.

"What do you want."

You've...well, you've always considered Murderface your friend, even though she will say otherwise (and she has, most of the time). But you never could really stop feeling a bit uneasy with her, which is hilarious, considering that you can spend all day with a bunch of Culexus and not feel the slightest bit off. Sure, Murderface is a bit better now, being in Kharn's retinue, worlds away from the Girl A that had always been an ordeal to be around with - but there was always this danger, an underlying sense of threat hanging around the girl. Killing Intent, or something like that. It just sets your teeth at edge.

You try to ignore this as you brazenly stride over to her corner and insinuate yourself into her personal space as annoyingly and as blatantly as you can, plopping yourself on the floor beside her, so close that your legs are touching. She recoils at the first contact, and tries to squirm away, but you've trapped her against the wall, already.

She puts up a token resistance, but finally sighs in surrender.

It's then that you drop her bag of wrapped presents in her lap. Which she grunts at, because it's pretty heavy, with the bottles of Kong and all. But part of that grunt is...well, surprise.

"What's this?" She asks, pulling out the wrapped items. Staring at them in wonder. "...A jacket? And...whisky?"

"Christmas presents!" You answer, grinning. "Got the others theirs, too. Wanted to hand them in personally, since you fatheads cancelled my Secret Santa and everything." In a spurt of bravery, you throw your arm around her shoulders. "Merry Christmas, Murderface!"

>> ☐ Deculture 12/29/12(Sat)13:31 No.22282578

She is silent for a moment, seemingly stunned. She doesn't even throw off your arm, that's how much she's poleaxed by your generosity.

"...But I didn't get you anything..." She murmurs after a long while, turning to look at you. Her purple eyes almost glowing from behind her glasses in the dim light.

"Aw, nevermind that!" You wave off her protests. "Just trying to spread some Christmas cheer for my friends and all! Just, uh, don't drink the Kong all in one sitting, s'all I ask. It's tasty, and I think you'll like it, but take it slow, alright?"

Murderface nods at this, still surprised. More silence, and then...

"...I'm sorry for...being difficult." She lowers her head, seemingly unable to stare you in the eye. "Mami told me that I should apologize when I could. It's hard. I don't think I can apologize to the other one." She must mean Sayaka. "But I'm sorry, Kyoko. And...thank you."

...Huh. And she called you by name, now. Not 'idiot', or 'cretin', or 'fuckface'.

You grin at her, before playfully ruffling her hair. Telling her that so long as you're friends, she can always count on you to forgive her, and to give her presents whenever it's necessary.

"...I'd like that."

And you spend a rare moment there, with the most tortured, most haunted, and arguably the most broken friend you've got.

You leave her in her quarters, just as she'd fallen asleep hugging the sweater to her. Leaning against the wall, possessively clutching the garment to her chest.

"S-sempai!" Yuma, still in her reindeer costume, comes up to you just as you close the door to Murderface's quarters behind you. "D-did she hurt you, or something? I could've sworn I heard yelling--"

You blink at her, before shaking her head, chuckling. Nah, that was just you laughing. But Murderface has her present, so all's well.

"O-oh. I see." Yuma nods. "T-then, it's only Miss Sayaka left, right?"

Yeah, that's right. Sayaka, and just one more.

"E-eh? Who...?"

You rummage in the bags left in the trolley, before bringing out what looks like a a shoebox, heavily taped together. You prise open the lid, reaching inside - before turning around to place a small, round object in Yuma's hands.

"Wah...! It's...it's..." Yuma's voice has never sound so feminine, despite the vox mangling her words. "W-what is it, sempai?"

It's a tortoise! A sulcata tortoise, to be exact - or at least, what Hibiki told you. A small yearling. It's relatively low-maintenance, so long as Yuma gets her the water she needs, good sunlight, and grass for food.

"S-Sempai..." It's then that you hear it, a crack in her voice. You carefully give her helmet a gentle knock as you hug her close with one arm.

She shouldn't cry inside her helmet, you tell her as she clutches the tortoise to her chest, carefully with her padded gloves, her shoulders shaking slightly. It'll get all stuffy inside.

You wait until she's calmed down, before letting her go on her way, back to the Culexus. Telling her that it's up to her now, to spread MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS to the rest of her sisters. You'd want to be there, too, but you have to take care of some business first.

"I'll..I'll do my best, sempai." Yuma's voice, still shaky from all the crying she'd done, has a smile in it at least. "T-thank you. I'll make sure to take care of him!"

It could be a her, you tell her. Hibiki wasn't all sure herself.

"W-well, whatever! A-anyway, see you, Sempai! And Merry Christmas!"

You wish her the same, and you make your way out of the Officio once you've decided that you've waited long enough.

You get to your apartment - well, your and Sayaka's apartment - and it's with a tired sigh that you step through the threshold. It's nighttime already, and the MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS that had sustained you through the day had more or less left you a fatigued, hollow husk. But there is still a spark left, enough to deliver to one last person. The most important person, in fact.

"Hey." You say, grinning your trademark grin, just as she comes to greet you with a smile of her own.

"Hey yourself." She says, trying to look displeased, and utterly failing to do so. She steps forward, and you make to give her the presents you've bought for her - but she sets them aside to pull you into her arms. Hugging you tightly, enough to hurt, enough to feel her warmth on yours.

And she apologizes like she has never apologized before. She didn't mean to make you angry - she just didn't want to be reminded that this may be your last Christmas together. That if you simply work through the holiday, it'd be just a normal day, and she wouldn't have to deal with the thought of losing you - or you being on your own. After all, who'd take care of you?

You remark, then, that it was incredibly selfish of her to do that. She even got the rest of your friends to play along, and that really jimmied your jimbobs.

She's just scared, she says. Scared of losing someone she obviously doesn't deserve. What if the Universe had finally wizened up and decided to take you away from her? What if some sort of karmic balance had finally been tallied, and it was discovered that Miki Sayaka did not deserve being with Sakura Kyoko?

What if--

You silence her with a kiss, a gentle one. Before grinning and bumping foreheads with her, a soft tap that she nevertheless winces from.

It's not good to talk about a lot of what ifs, you say, speaking her words back to her. Not with what the both of you do.

You're just as scared as her, but that doesn't mean it's alright to be scared in advance.

You'll be careful, just as she would, and fight as hard to stay alive for another Christmas. And you will have another Christmas. And if the worst came to worst, well...then whoever's gone ahead will have to sit their ass down and wait patiently for the other, right?

You smile at this, and make to pull her close again - but suddenly remembering your present. You take the one from the bag and give it to her. Sniffling, she looks at the package curiously, before tearing it open.

"...W-what? Battle...battle panties...?"

Those death flags were already raised way before. Malal is already dead, Kharn already got told that Murderface would kill her, and Mami has a golden weapon.

Just because a deathflag is raised doesn't mean we can't avoid it. Pretty much the only one that can't be saved is the one who's already dead: Malal.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you've willingly trapped yourself into a nightmare overlapping another one to save a girl. One who you're in love with, but does not love you in return.

Your mother had always told you that you'd have a problem with relationships, but she never told you it was going to be this bad.

Your name is Midori Hanegawa, Rank Callidus. Formerly of the Tenth Incubator's employ, a mission gone completely balls-up saw your legs shot off at the knees with a veritable handcannon by none other than Murderface herself.

THE Murderface, a name both praised and reviled among the other Officios. You've heard the Pleiades Saints make theoreticals and practicals - all in jest, of course, although you could never tell with Kazumi - on how they would go about killing such a Magical Girl. A Magical Girl who killed and killed, but refused to die herself.

The nightmare you're in - a frighteningly real simulacra of Mitakihara, one that showed both ruined and intact facets of it whenever you averted your gaze, settling on one after a few moments, like an image slowly focusing - is Murderface's. You abandoned her to fight another monster you didn't want to stick around to get a good look at.

You're not too sure you believe her. You're not too sure you believe a word she'd said to you, in between the moments of panic and cold fear that gripped you as you ran around this abberation of reality caused by a single wish. A wound in the world, made by the crystallization of a young woman's hope and dreams.

But maybe you should. You are holding the hand of the girl you're supposed to be rescuing. Well, not exactly her, entirely. More like one-fourths of her, a fragment. Manifested in a shy, cripplingly-awkward child with her hair tied in braids and thick, red-rimmed glasses.

A call from the outside helped you get your bearings back - as well as the rather disconcerting warning that someone else was now in there with you. Valnikov Kharn, the former Warmaster of the Eighth. You're familiar with what they call her now, too - the Betrayer.

You hope that she's not going to try and live up to that moniker anytime soon.

In any case, you've escaped the pink-haired girl and...whatever was chasing you around earlier for now. The landscape before you had shifted again, this time to resemble a piece of downtown Mitakihara that you're unfortunately quite familiar with. Four locations are open to you, from how inviting each one looked, their doors open, glowing with a soft golden light, beacons in this artificial night. You laugh slightly - it's almost a comforting sight, if you didn't know that this was the most hostile environment a Magical Girl could find herself in. You even feel the familiar scratching, pulling sensation at your Soul Gem, reminding you that you are literally walking around in the fevered nightmares of a corrupted soul.

To the left of you is Charles' Bar. It's a bar, basically, staffed by Mister Charles. He and your dad are friends of a sort. The sort that would challenge the other in a flex-off from all the way across the street, and the challenge would be accepted despite it being rush hour. It's a nice, cosy place to get hammered in, and your dad has promised to take you there once you're of age.

To the right is the Deli Heal Agency. ...The less said about it, the better.

Right next to Charles' Bar is Charon, the Gun Store. It's a small shop that caters to a very rare need in the Japanese population - the need for firearms. With Japan's strict gun laws, you're amazed that it was allowed to remain in business, or even allowed to open shop at all. You hear that it's staffed by a very capable and very studious young man with a very unhealthy fascination towards firearms. Your mother had tried to have you meet him, but...you were too busy with your manga, then. Yes.

And right ahead is Hanegawa's Ramen Restaurant.

Home.

You could almost hear your dad laughing with the customers, the clink of chopsticks against bowl, the scent of freshly-cooked noodles.

And Mirai. Yes. Her, too.

Where do you go?

You decide to go to Charles' Bar, first. It seems the likeliest place where your sempai would be found in, when she's off-duty. The revelation is a little sad, and just a tiny bit pitiful.

Well, it's not like your sempai's drinking problem is any secret. You've heard Kyoko invite Chiaki there for a few drinks - a memory from when you were still a captured enemy, half-asleep in the Silent Room - an invitation that seemed to be grudgingly accepted with a slow grunt and the grumbled words 'you're buying'. Kyoko would then balk at it, before laughing and slapping your sempai hard on the back, saying that it'd be her pleasure.

You've also heard Mami Tomoe - the apple of your sempai's eye, if you're any judge - lecture Chiaki over it, saying that drinking doesn't really do her any favors. Sure, Magical Girls don't really have to worry about long-term liver damage or anything like that, but it's an ugly vice, all in all. It's not something a Magical Girl should be doing. It's not someone like her should be doing.

You remember how guilty your sempai looked back then, and murmured something of an apology. Something you wasn't sure, back then, you were seeing or hearing. THE Murderface, apologizing like a child with her hand caught in the cookie jar. Mami merely sighed, and you turned away just as she pulled the other girl close.

...Well, anyway. Charles' Bar. Yes. You should be getting to it. You pull gently on Chiaki--er, Homura's hand - you still can't get used to the odd name - and move towards the swinging doors leading to the establishment. At least, you tried to, when you find yourself stopped by a girl who clearly didn't want to move.

You turn towards Homura, puzzled. A fearful expression faces you, nearly tearful. Her cheek is still somewhat red from where you had to slap her out of a panic attack. It seems to be getting better, but you can't help but feel guilty about it.

"I...I'm scared," Homura murmurs finally, her eyes wide and scared from behind her glasses. "I'm...I'm going to meet myself, aren't I? S-someone different. She's me, but n-not me." A trembling inhalation. "What...what if she doesn't like me?"

How do you respond?

Yet all of that is information that Midori doesn't really have. She has her rumors and hearsay of the sort of person that Murderface is, blurry recollections of being held prisoner, and her own interactions in which Murderface was suspicious of her and something of a jerk, but she did spare her life and treated her decently.

You manage to smile at Homura, before telling her gently that if that happens, then she shouldn't feel too bad. The person you're about to meet isn't really known for liking anyone much, anyway. Maybe only a few select people, you add mentally. But she doesn't mean it out of a seething hatred for anyone in particular, she's just hard a hard life, that's all.

"I...I see," Homura replies after a moment, nodding. The worry creasing her face fading a bit, but not entirely erased. "T-then, um...I'll try to make sure that she doesn't dislike me too much." Her grip tightens on your hand, in a sort of determined gesture. You give her hand a squeeze of your own, before you lead her into the bar. The scent of alcohol - and the faint acrid hint of gunpowder - tickling your nose the moment you step over the treshold.

...Well, for a replica born out of a Witch's fevered nightmares, the bar looked quite accurate, down to the fact that it was quite clearly empty of customers. Empty except for, well, the recognizable form of your sempai slumped forward onto the the bar, seemingly asleep. A half-empty glass in her hand, and an empty bottle of Kong's beside it.

"Is...is that me?" Homura whispers in a terrified whisper. "Is...is that...?"

You nod wordlessly and move closer. It's her, alright. You'd recognize her anywhere.

Her costume is...pitiful. The white nearly gray from the detritus of wearing it for far too long. Her stockings torn, tattered, the lovely violet diamond pattern at the sides ruined with gaping holes in the delicate material. Fresh bloodstains on her skirt, herfront, needle-thin spatters and pinpricks pointing towards sleeves, hands and fingers caked in fresh gore. An empty revolver - large caliber, but thankfully not in the malevolent gold you've learned to dread - sits forlornly on the floor just beside her feet.

One cheek resting on top of the mahogany bartop, the second fragment of the girl you're supposed to rescue is sleeping the sleep of the tired, the tortured. A dead man's sleep, where there was quite the good chance they may not wake up from it ever again. Even her face is splattered with drying blood.

Was this how she was like, before you came around? You've seen her in a similar state, fresh from a mission, wearing that ridiculous maid costume that seemed to fit her like a glove more than anything. You could understand that, but to see her in this state...

Oh, sempai...what have they done to you?

[]Wake her up, gently.

You carefully step forward, as quietly as you can, but not before having Homura stay back a bit. People like your sempai - high-strung Magical Girls with a nasty temper and an even nastier drinking habit - tended to be very light sleepers. This is true even when they're all but knocked unconscious by the alcohol. Wake them up wrong, and you'll be an unfortunate target of all the aggression and fury of someone who'd just been deprived for the only restful, painless rest that they've had for weeks, maybe even months. From how your sempai looks right now, it might have even been years.

You place a hand gently, lightly, on her shoulder - suppressing a wince as you feel a liquid, sticky warmth on your palm as it comes in contact with her costume. You don't have to pull your hand back to look at it to know that it's blood - the scent of it from your sempai is thick enough to leave its taste on the tongue. You try to force down the subsequent stab of panic at this - this is a fragment of your sempai. It's not actually her, in a way. She's not dying.

"Rise and shine, sempai." You lean down and murmur into her ear, as softly as you can. "Sempai, rise and shine. It's time to wake up."

The shoulder your hand is resting on seems to shift slightly, before dipping in an attempt to shrug away from your touch. A barely audible and intelligible grunt follows a few moments afterwards.

"Don't...don't touch me." Her voice, as rough and as abused as you remember it, growls from a parched throat. "Just...just let me sleep. Tell Kyuubey I'm done, alright...? I just need some sleep. That's all." A moment more, and then a sigh. "I'm tired. Go away."

Her slow, deep breathing resumes again. She didn't even so much as look at you, then, even deigning to go back to sleep.

Well, what were you expecting, anyway? That she would turn at the sound of your voice, her face lighting up in a smile of recognition? She probably doesn't even remember you, like the Chiaki you left behind when you just into this nightmare. You're not Mami, you couldn't help but think bitterly. You're not important--

You grit your teeth and shake your head. No, no. Now's not the time for that. Save her first. There's time for those bothersome thoughts later, when you're safe back in the real world.

You clear your throat, and make to try again. Waking her just a bit more firmly, even going so far as giving her shoulder a little shake.

This seems to get her attention, and it's with a tired, annoyed grumble that she pulls herself up off of the counter, sitting up enough on the bar stool, but not turning to look at you. As if trying her best to ignore your presence, as well as the girl by your side.

What do you do?

You let out the breath you've been holding. You've been tensed to tackle Homura to the ground, just in case your sempai woke up with the all-too-understandable desire to shoot people dead. From the looks of things, all she wants right now is something to drink, and there's no harm obliging her. Everyone needs a drink sometime.

You get to the other side of the bar easily enough - you don't clamber over it, no, that'd just be disrespectful - and you give the bottles arranged behind you a brief glance, to see what you could serve your thirsty sempai. You blink a few times, before shaking your head. All of the bottles were Kong Whisky. Not a different brand or kind of liquor in sight. You check the juice bottles too, for the mixed drinks - whisky-flavored juice. Whisky-flavored syrup. The lot of them.

Classic sempai. Classic Murderface.

Instead of taking the hint from your sempai's psyche, you fill her glass with cold water from the tap, instead. You try it out for yourself, though - you can recognize patterns very much, thank you, and you probably won't find it amusing if the bar suddenly had whisky-flavored tap water. That'd just be ridiculous.

...Well, no. Just tap water. Cold and refreshing. You nod in satisfaction at this, before upending the contents in the sink and giving the glass a brief wash and quick wipe dry. You refill it with water, and place it in front of your glowering sempai. The glass is snatched up, considered briefly, before downed in one single, thirsty gulp.

"...This drink." She growls after a moment. "...s'different. What is it?"

You tell her.

"Oh." A moment, and she raises her head to look at you. For the first time, you see her blood-streaked face, her hair matted and glued in a ugly black smear on her forehead. A wound in her scalp, most probably, bled out while she was sleeping. Clear purple eyes with no hint of darkness looks back at you. "...More, please." She pushes her glass towards you, and you gladly oblige.

As you refill her glass, she murmurs again. "You're...kind of pretty for a bartender. Where's the old guy?" She looks around, eyes narrowed. "...He was here a moment ago. I think." A moment, and she grimaces. "N-no. I don't remember. I...came in here. After killing a pink-haired girl. She tried to rip my heart out." She touches her own chest, fingers fanning across the bloody material of her costume, concern creasing her features before smoothening out in a tired, but triumphant smile. "...Heh. Still there."

Behind her, Homura is clearly chomping at the bit to say something, anything, but can't. Or won't. Or much too afraid to.

You don't blame her. This Murderface is...not exactly someone approachable. Even less so than the one you're used to.

But a witch is a busted magical girl. I wouldn't count on quite the same degree of stability.

Though then again, if we were playing by canon as far as witching out goes, Murderface should be barely a hair's breadth away from it pretty much all the time precisely because of the jaded cynicism. It's pretty much despair tempered by a heaping load of apathy, which ain't exactly a recipe for bright-and-shiny soul gems.

You manage not to look too embarrassed at Chiaki's compliment. It felt...oddly nice, actually, even though the compliment itself was made by a fragment of her psyche that did not look at all there. Still, she seemed...amiable enough. Calm enough to be talked to. Maybe it was the fatigue, the heavy weariness that seemed to come off her in waves. Maybe it was the haunted look on her face, warring against the small, unassuming smile that curled her lips.

You clear your throat after a moment, before deciding to risk it. Introducing yourself, you mean. You tell her your name - your real name - and her eyebrows quirk slightly at your family name.

"Hanegawa...? Same as the family who owns the ramen joint across the street?" She swirls the water in her glass, peering down at it, before looking back up at you. "Funny coincidence. The Warmaster and...and someone else, they...they liked to eat there. Took me there a couple of times." Her face screws up in effort once more. "I...I can't remember. That person was important. She...she told me something..."

SHe shakes her head, apparently giving up, before downing the rest of the water in her glass. Reaching over and placing her glass in front of you, again, wordlessly asking for another refill. You oblige her, while busying yourself by washing the other glasses near the sink. ...Anything to calm yourself down.

"Well, it's...nice to meet you, Hanegawa-san." She murmurs after a moment, nodding at you. "I...I hope I don't forget your name. I tend to do that a lot. I think." She then jerks her head towards Homura, who had given up on trying to approach her other self from behind and had slid onto one of the stools beside Chiaki - one stool away. Wringing her hands on top of the counter. "Who's this, then? I'm pretty sure kids aren't allowed in bars."

Homura makes a squeak, not unlike a small animal being stepped on, as her other self finally seems to take note of her presence. The looks back at you uncertainly, as if asking for help. You nod at her, before turning back to Chiaki. Chiaki, not Homura, even though everything in this damn barrier seems hell-bent for you to forget your sempai's name, the name she gave you.

You expected denial. You expected confusion. You expected...well, anything else, really. What you didn't expect was a surprised blink, before a nod.

"Guess so. She kind of looks like me." A low chuckle. "A bit nerdier, though. So it's probably one of them alternate reality things, or something." She takes another sip from her glass of pure water. "...Another one of them tried to kill me, before the pink-haired girl game. Had long hair, red ribbon. Same costume. Total bitch." Chiaki smirks. "Gave her the slip easily enough, or maybe she just got tired. I dunno."

"A-another one of...of us?" Homura looks at Chiaki, clearly alarmed. "W-why? Why would she do that? A-and...w-what happened to you? To...us? What happened to me?"

"Fuck if I know." Chiaki shrugs. "Figure it must've been really bad, though." She chuckles again. "I never asked for this."

You open your mouth to ask for something, when a pained voice, ragged with the unclean edge of insanity, stabs through your mind.

+Midori-chan? Where are you? Where's Homura-chan? I...I can't see. I lost my eyes. Where are you? Is Homura-chan safe?+

That thing.... blinded Faust.

Thinking about it since the MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS special, there is only one entity I can think of that can actually be a match for Faust.

Homulilly.

While we don't know how strong Homulilly actually is, due to the fact she only appears in a game over screen. She must be very powerful due to the fact that Homura must have acquired thousands of lifetimes of grief/bad karma before the end of the anime.
So I think our black rock shooter friend is a Embryonic version of Homalilly.

Faust probably had to slap a few handicaps on herself before entering the barrier.

I think it was established that she could only manifest herself physically once all the golden weapons were gathered. She can still appear in the world through illusions.

To everyone else Kharn was staring at a picture of Godoka.

It's Madoka. While you're relieved to hear from her - despite how each word she murmured directly into your thoughts seemed to burn with an unhealthy, fever-like warmth in the back of your eyes - you can't help but feel a sense of guilt. Playing bartender for your sempai and her other self, while a scared young girl is out there, alone, and most probably grievously injured.

+I found..another Homura, Madoka-chan. She thinks she's just walked away from you...ripping out her heart? Probably not the best idea to show yourself openly for a while, at least until I can disguise you.+ A moment more. +Are...are you alright?+

+I got her,+ Madoka pulses to you, her voice so faint it could be the psychic equivalent of a dying whisper. +I made her run. I...I got hit, though. She tore my eyes out. I...I did good, didn't I, Midori-chan? I protected you and Homura-chan, didn't I?+

+Yes, you did good. We're safe. We're going to look for the other two.+ Silence. +Madoka-chan? Madoka-chan, are you okay?+

You manage to work up a smile, shaking your head. Everything's fine, you tell her. You give her another refill of the cold water, which she thanks you for. She reaches behind her to pull what looks like a small, white unlabeled medicine bottle, one you recognize as her usual bottle of Interfectum 600 mg. She gives the bottle a cursory shake, before unscrewing the cap and shaking out two white tablets. These she pops into her mouth, before chasing it with the water you've just given her.

"P-painkillers?" Homura murmurs. "W-why? Are you hurt...? where does it hurt?"

>>22388950

"Everywhere." Chiaki says, matter of factly. "All the time. I had it checked, but they couldn't find anything wrong. Tried everything." She replaces the cap and tucks away the bottle. "Nothing I'm not used to."

Homura squeaks again, seemingly unbelieving that she would come to such a fate. You can't blame her - you'd probably be horrified if Future Midori ended up a chain-smoking alcoholic whose nightmares bled into reality.

Well. No. Maybe it'd be cool, actually. Like, if Murder Mayumi and Magical Midori changed roles--

"So, what's actually happening, here?" Chiaki says again. "I'm pretty sure something weird's going on. A girl with pink hair's tried to kill me earlier, moments before someone who looks like me, but isn't actually me, tried the same, except with a bigger gun. Now I'm enjoying a nice, brisk drink of water with Nerdier Me, and the ramen guy's daughter." She nods at you. "Something's happened to me, right? You can tell me."

You tell her, then.

She blinks at you, before chuckling again.

"Figures. I knew it was going to come up sooner or later." A moment. "Did I kill anyone? Mami? Sayaka? I...I hope I didn't. Kyoko doesn't deserve that, and Mami..." She shakes her head. "No, I don't even want to think about it."

You shake your head. No, she didn't kill anyone. You were interrogating a friend of yours - Wakaba Mirai - before things started happening. Now you're just trying to get her and your friend out of the barrier.

Chiaki looks back at you like you're the basest kind of idiot. "Witches can't turn back into Magical Girls, you do know that, right? It's part of the rules. It's in the Primer. Mutant cat couldn't shut up about it, even. If you witch out, that's that."

But Kharn--

"The Warmaster's a special case," The raven-haired girl shakes her head. "...But I guess she's not the best example, both for or against." She manages a grin, and for a moment she looks less decrepit, less haunted, less tortured than she actually looked. "But hey, I'm here, anyway. Might as well see what we can do for your friend, I think."

+She's coming for you, Midori-chan+ Madoka's voice, more urgent yet even weaker, this time. +You have to hide Homura-chan--+

As if on cue, both Homura and Chiaki wince in complete and perfect time, one hand coming up to press fingertips against their temples. "Ngh. There it is again. It's been on and off, ever since...um. Today."

"D-does...does it always hurt like that? A-and do you hear laughing, too...?" Homura murmurs, her face pale.

Chiaki nods. "As long as I can remember. It's always been there." She looks at you. "Something tells me we should be hiding, though. It feels like trouble's coming around." She finishes her water, before sliding off the stool. Her scarred shield clamping with a metallic noise around her right arm, followed by a click as it dispenses a golf club in her hands. She gives it a few practice swings, before resting it on her shoulder.

"I think it's a good idea if we move somewhere else. What do you think?"

You nod. You were just about to suggest that.

"Well, lead on. We'll follow." She gives you a tired grin, and you can't help but wonder if she'll ever make that for you back in the real world.

In any case, you should probably relocate. Madoka's warning sounded...well, serious.

You decided to go and take refuge in Hanegawa's Ramen Restaurant. Home. You're not sure if it's the safest place to go in this situation, but at least it's somewhere familiar. At the very least, you know the entire place like the back of your hand, including the exits that you might need just in case you need to get both fragments of your sempai out of there in a hurry.

The three of you make your way out of the empty bar, and walk across the empty street towards the empty Ramen Restaurant. Faintly, you hear the two girls behind you talking about...the golf club, of all things.

"I...I remember that. I used it for practice, back then. It didn't really pan out--"

"Yeah. Guns worked better. But I thought this was more satisfying, at least. Heh, remember this? We nearly snapped it in half here, didn't we?"

"Eh? O-oh. Oh! Yes! We accidentally hit Sayaka-chan...! She got really mad at me--er, us..back then!"

"That was an accident, though. We did say sorry. Twice." Another chuckle. "Anyway, want to use it for now?"

"I-if it's not too much, then..."

The moment you duck through the entrance curtains, you immediately catch the whiff of freshly-cooked ramen - broth, noodles, meat and vegetables, all - and immediately feel homesick. Even before Siberia, you've been living away from your parents, in a condominium building that housed the entirety of the Tenth Officio. You visited home perhaps once every week. You should probably give them a visit when you're back in Japan--

"Oh, customers. Welcome, please sit anywhere you like." A horribly familiar voice pipes up as you step through the treshold, the two Homuras following close behind. In your mind, again, bypassing your sense of hearing. But unlike Madoka's jagged pulsings, this is smooth, careful, practiced. It didn't hurt, because it was made specifically not to hurt. Communication without sound.

You pan your gaze around the empty tables, the empty chairs - before focusing on the single-customer countertop, made for the customers that were eating by themselves, constructed to face the kitchen.

Kyuubey was there. Kyuubey was manning the entire restaurant, standing on a stool behind the counter, his forepaws placed on the wooden tabletop in front of him. Wearing a white chef's shirt and the hat, downsized to fit.

His perfectly-circular crimson eyes burning into yours, making you stop in your tracks.

"Ramen'll be ready in a bit. Table for three, then?" He nods towards both Homura and Chiaki, seemingly also dumbstruck at this development.

"H-how...?"

No, this is...wrong. Your dad should be there. Not the mutant cat!

"Is there a problem?" Kyuubey blinks. "Don't loiter around the entrance. Two customers came in earlier and went out for a little bit. They're bound to come back soon." He lifts a paw towards a table, where two untouched bowls of ramen sat, quietly steaming.

How do you react?

God wills it, my child. We shall not stop our divine mission until all of /tg/ is Strike Witches. We can not stop.

But seriously, I have no idea. And there are people in the IRC who talk about running even MORE SWQ spin-off quests. People just flock to the concept for some reason.

It's gotten to the point where I thought of calling off our quest due to over-saturation, but deculture would kick my ass if I did. Seriously. His journey here would be fueled by rage alone. It would be magnificent and terrifying. Songs would be sung of my physical trauma for centuries to come. Then after his work would be finished, he'd throw me to the MGNQ fans who would harm me further for making deculture cry.

And that's bad.

So it's probably too late for this, but could Mirai be in the Deli Heal Agency?

It being the one place that we are the most unlikely to go, could it be considered the bonus stage where the secret character can be recruited, to use a video game analogy?

We are fast running out of time and chances to save Mirai; could we have Misaka and Souji scan the local area for any disturbances that could be Mirai?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you're not too sure what's happening at the moment. You thought you were sure, of course, but that was before THINGS started happening, and OTHER THINGS started happening right after.

To cut to the chase, you are now standing in the middle of your father's ramen restaurant, with a talking mutant cat sitting where he should be sitting, and two people who you are pretty sure are both the same person and yet not are talking about STUFF behind you. STUFF that seems to involve the best way to manufacture white phosporous grenades in the comfort of your own home, or the applicable use of incendiary thermite in a social situation.

It needs to be said, of course, that you are in a Witch's Barrier, the nightmarish realm that tore and bled into reality whenever a Magical Girl went afoul of the terms of her contract. Strange things happen inside one, that much you remember from your training, and stranger things happen to the Magical Girls that step voluntary into said barrier for some fool's errand (such as saving their boss and unrequited crush, nonsense like that).

You've certainly heard some stories about the things that happen to Magical Girls inside barriers. Some go insane, others...change, coming back completely different yet completely none the wiser, as if they'd been like that all along. Very few come back the way they came in.

Some never came back at all, but that's not really unexpected, in a sad depressing way.

In any case, the mutant cat - which is, funnily enough, wearing a mutant cat-sized version of the shirt that your father wore all the time, I AM BOSS emblazoned on the front in large letters - just asked you if there was anything wrong. If you had a problem with the current situation (which, of course, you do, but you're not quite sure how to put it just yet). It's tilting its head to the side, in that very catlike way.

...Heh, the shirt's even got that rip in the collar, to the left.

"Well, Hanegawa? Is there anything you'd want to ask?"

How do you respond?

Guys! GUYS! GUUYS! I HAVE THE CRAZIEST PLAN EVER TO SAVE FUCKING EVERYONE

First off, we contact Souji/Misaka and ask about Madoka`s Location ("The giant Witch signature sou felt near me sometime ago, where is it now?!")

Then we sent Murderface with Moemura to defend/look after the injured Pinky, after explaining Murderface that the pink-haired girl is our Ally for now and she can trust her for now and she should keep Moemura and Madoka safe.

Meanwhole Midori goes to meet Timetravlerhomu/Ribbonhomu who may or may not try to kill us but who will obviously reconsider if we tell her that we know where Madoka (Pinky) is. In case it doesn`t poke Ribbonhomu`s interest we bluff like a motherfucker and tell her that we don`t actually mean Pinky, but the girl Madoka("Pinky`s past self that she seems to hate for being weak") and that she is also in this barrier.
This will bait her like an underage thaiprostitue baits american tourists but we will tell her that we will only reveal the location to her if she helps us to find Mirai.

Tl;dr:

1. Check Pinkys Location
2. Send Murderface & Moemura to protect the injured/weakened Madoka
3. Locate Ribbonhomu
4. Talk her down via BLUFFSKILL
5. Bait her with Infos/Location about Pinky and coerce her into helping you find Mirai.
6. Should Step 5 not work, bait her with Infos/Location of True Madoka and coerce her into helping you find Mirai.
7. Rescue Wakaba Mirai
8. ???
9. Happy End.

Remember guys we are a Callidus-Meguca, that means we have to be sly instead of running into things without thinking and right now we have enough Infos to talk Ribbonhomu down and recruit her for just enough time to save Mirai.

So why not try it with a Xanatos-Gambit?

Weren't there two Godokas? One being the one that constantly harrasses Chiaki, which would be Godoka Actual, or Pinky, the other being the one Chiaki saw when going into the Secret Chamber, which is Faust.

Murderface killed Faust and escaped post-Meduca Homura. Pinky fought IBRS and we have Moemura with us. That accounts for three Homus. What happened to the fourth?

"I didn't catch their names," Kyuubey says after a moment, tilting his head the other way, the long secondary ears drooping out of his primary ears shifting with the movement. "But they were quite the characters. One of them was dressed rather...lightly. Too much skin showing. Very big hair, though, looks like someone's been spending their savings on perms. The other was in this black biker outfit, chains and spikes and a skull on their helmet. Didn't even take the thing off when she stepped in." A sigh. "That's young people for you, no manners at all."

..Wait. Permed hair? Lightly dressed? That...that sounds like someone you know. Mirai. Wakaba Mirai, right? That means she's somewhere around here? And you've just missed her?

"Yes, by a couple of moments. She practically stepped out along with the other girl, and then you came in along with those two." Kyuubey blinks. "More like dragged out in any case, the other one sounded like she really needed to be somewhere. They did say they'll be back any moment now."

Huh. Well. That's...strange, but you'll play along.

It's good news, at least. If Mirai is around - wherever she was - that meant that she hadn't witched out completely. Maybe there was a chance you could bring her back. Yes. That means Chiaki should be okay, too, right? Even with her in four different pieces, there should be a chance for you to save them both, right?

You ignore the niggling thought at the back of your mind; that traitorous thought that reminded you about what Madoka had said, earlier. About this being someone's barrier.

You continue to ignore the other thought that snidely reminded you that you had wished there and then that the barrier belonged to your best friend, not the girl who would never really love you.

The other girl, though...was that the Malal person you've heard Kharn and Chiaki talk about? From Kyuubey's description, it sounds like a Culexus. You've never really encountered one when you were in Jyuubey's employ.

"It does sound like her," Chiaki replies from behind you, and you turn to see Homura fussing over your boss - the bespectacled girl doing her best to wipe off the dried blood on her other self's face with a purple handkerchief. "That's Malal. She'd be able to tell us Something Important." A moment's hesitation makes her pause. "I'm not sure what, but we should keep in mind to ask her."

"S-stop fidgeting, I've nearly got it..." Homura murmurs. "That's...that's a huge cut, doesn't it hurt?"

"Nothing I'm not used to," Your amnesiac boss replies, almost cheerfully.

"The three of you should probably stay here for a while. It'll be raining soon, and you don't want to be outwhen it does." Kyuubey says, now studiously licking the back of his paw. "You can set off and do what you're supposed to do when it stops pouring."

As if on cue, thunder suddenly roils from above, followed by the rumble of a million raindrops crashing into the ground at once, followed by millions more. Hammering on the tiled ceiling of the restaurant.

You nod at this, glancing out of the restaurant's exit. Kyuubey wasn't kidding about the rain - it's falling down hard and fast enough that you can't see the neon sign of Charles' Bar across the street.

You have a question for Kyuubey, though, and you manage to ask him without your voice shaking too much. It takes him a moment to respond.

"You did have your Soul Gem attuned to hers, right? Maybe something happened. Maybe your memories are starting to bleed into hers. Maybe not." He shrugs. "Anything can happen in a Barrier, that's what makes them so dangerous."

That...that didn't really explain anything.

"Frustrating, isn't it?" You could almost hear the smugness in its voice. "Well, anyway. Do you want to stay here and wait for a while? I'll have some ramen on the boil for you girls if you are." He nods towards the restaurant's exit. "If you want to set off right now, though, you should probably check out the Deli Heal Agency. Heard the girl with the helmet talking about it. Well, no use to thiking about what exactly Pinky is right now since we know it anyway.

And by that I mean:

All the events here are obviously post-ending.
But instead of Akemi Homura accepting what Madoka told her she turned back the time once more after Madoka made her wish what witches never existed in the first place.
I you remember the Meguca Madoka ending the wish itself was kind of a paradox since the wishes feed on the girls karma. Madoka`s wish was pwoerful enough to fade all witches from all dimensions out of existance yet to balance the scale off this positive wish she briefly turns into this huge witch before her wish actually overrides what with "No witches exist".

Homura`s last timejump somehow fucked that up horribly what basically means that what we have to deal with is something that is neither witch nor world`s most Powerful Magical Girl with god`s powers. Or it is something inbetween.

Actually the encounter in the elevator indicates that this.. megucagodwitch is split in two with Pinky being her.. uh.. "good & sane half" and the other thing being the Gigawitch.

There's still no indicator there was actually a split. I'm reasonably certain that Pinky is the only Madoka and she's just very, very messed up right now, what with suddenly becoming an omnigod then having Homura try to impossibly undo that.

There are two more, possibly cute, drenched, and unconscious Homuhomu out there.

Also if Chiaki dies Midori dies with her due to soul gem attunement, supposedly. If Homuhomu lives she gets to be with Chiaki for longer. But reasoning is hardly reasonable for someone lovestruck.

You know, the more I re-read that elevator scene, the more I think there was something seriously off about it.

For one, stuff was happening while Pinky was there, like the elevator running, when everything should have been frozen in time. Then there was the whole Kali-MA thing without actually dying.

The first time Pinky tore her hear out, HomuChiaki nearly died and was out of commission for over a week. Then the elevator scene she's fine not even thirty minutes later?

Something's really weird about that scene.

This is a tricky situation. Trying too hard to save everyone could lead to a DEAD END.

Not to mention that the reason why our Black Rock shooter friend doesn't just charge us is that because it doesn't want to harm the Homura's. ~~I think its because our BRS friend is proto-Homulilly~~

She could be. I'm not saying she is, but maybe? Malal is a techie sort and when we asked Coobie to check for "Akemi Homura" he couldn't find anything. Odds that she simply erased all traces of herself?

Also, the first thing that Malal wanted to name Girl A was "Akemi..."

Alright. You'll...you'll stay here, for now. In this weird, Witch-borne representation of your father's ramen joint. With a talking mutant cat wearing his shirt standing in for him, and with two personifications of your sempai's broken psyche, one of them now teaching the other how to field-strip an AK-47.

"No, no, this goes here. That thing goes there. ...Maybe I should've started with nuggets first."

"Nuggets...?"

"Nevermind. And that's a magazine, see, that's not a clip. Don't call it that, or people will get angry."

"O-okay."

You tell the mutant cat your decision, and he nods sagely, as if he'd been expecting it all along. "Very good. I'll have three bowls up in a little bit. Seafood ramen for the both of them, and miso ramen for you? No vegetables, extra meat, just how you like it?"

You pause at this. That was, indeed, how you liked it.

"You're not my real father," You say suddenly, without even thinking it. Kyuubey blinks at you, before nodding.

"No, of course not. Your real father loves you very much, though." A moment. "And he wishes that you'd work out a bit. You're getting soft around the middle. Are you lifting three times a week, like he made you promise before you left? Weight training is important for a young woman's growth, you know."

...Goddamn bastard cat.

"Ah, here we are." Kyuubey nods as a tray of three ramen bowls, each one steaming hot, seems to materialize out of nowhere in front of him. The scent tickles your nostrils, reminding you of home. "Does a body good to have a hot meal inside it in this kind of weather. Be a dear and take these to your friends, there's a good girl."

You nod, still a bit stunned at this turn of events, and make your way towards the table that Chiaki and Homura seem to have settled into. Homura seems to be admiring the now-assembled AK-47 in her hands, turning it this way and that.

"You can have it if you want." You hear Chiaki say, with a smile in her voice that you might never hear from your actual sempai. "I have spares. Lots of them."

"I-if it's not too much, then...!" Homura replies in an awed, breathy sort of way. It's then that they notice your arrival, and the girl with the pigtails hastily moves the rifle from the tabletop, cheeks reddening as she rushes to help you.

"Having fun?" You ask them, working up a smile you're having trouble feeling.

"Y-yes!" Homura says happily as she helps pass out the chopsticks. "Chiaki-san is teaching me all about firearms, a-and..." It's then that she falls silent, face screwing up slightly in hesitation. "Well, um...i-isn't it unfair if I freeze someone in time and then shoot their soul gem out?" She turns to you as you sit beside Chiaki, your boss moving with a grunt to give you space, a chuckle escaping her lips. "Isn't it, Midori-san?"

"It's not an issue of whether it's fair or not, if someone's trying to kill you." Chiaki interjects here, before you can respond. "Better you than them, in my opinion."

How do you respond? Seems that you can chat for a bit while you wait for Mirai and Malal to come back, and the rain to stop.

You blink at Homura, the girl's face open and innocent and seemingly waiting on bated breath for your answer. You want to sigh in exasperation at the matter at hand, but then again - it's just like her, isn't it? Brutally direct, to the point, showing no consideration at all to the usual finery and rituals that you've seen the Pleiades Saints perform whenever fighting another Magical Girl. There'd be declarations of titles, of oathes, of sweeping and elegant salutes and all that. Always respectful and graceful pugilism, never direct and brutal murder.

You look down at your ramen bowl, at the mass of noodles and meat and pork fat swimming in miso broth - before clearing your throat. Managing to mumble someting about how...how it's better to shoot someone's legs off, first, rather than going for the kill right away. Yesterday's enemy might be today's friend, and...and all that.

The reactions you get from both girls are truly striking, a testament to how different they are from each other, despite being the same person. Homura, paling, seems to shrink back from you. "B-but that's cruel! A-and it sounds like it'd hurt a lot!"

Chiaki, on the other hand, grins, leaning closer to you. "I like it. It's not as cool, but it's got style to it." She nods at Homura, who is busy looking quite horrified. "Yeah, do that instead. The second bit's good, too." The grin fades into a rather sad smile. "You can't have too many friends. I wish I figured that out before..." She waves a hand at herself vaguely.

"Before?" You can't help but ask.

"Before I screwed up." Chiaki murmurs. "Before I screwed everything up."

An awkward silence follows, one that's broken by your boss herself.

Yeah. You nod in agreement, and Homura does as well.

Both of them murmuring thanks for the meal, all three of you start to tuck into the ramen, one made by the mutant cat who seems to be your father but not really.

Murder Mayumi suffers a terrible injury during a fight, and goes into a coma. After a month, she wakes up and has an entirely different personality, being very shy, bashful, and clumsy. While Miracle Midori won't admit that she likes this incarnation of Mayumi quite a bit, she resolves to get down to the bottom of things and starts investigating.

As Midori sleuths, she finds damaged records that tell of people matching Mayumi's description from over a hundred years ago, with all of them disappearing after a set amount of time. There are also cryptic clues scattered throughout random places, each of them written by a different Mayumi. When read as a whole, these clues insinuate that a powerful entity has been maintaining a careful cycle of Mayumi protecting a certain green-haired girl.

But just as she's about to recover the last piece of the puzzle, she's ambushed by a mysterious, malevolent entity intent on letting these secrets lie.

But by all the signs that Chiaki saw, she was regarded as a celebrity amongst the Officio. Midori's manga probably had a lot do to with that, but it probably wouldn't rescue her from universal revile amongst all of the megucas.

She wasn't actually reviled though
Most the girls kept their distance because she is so prickly, Sayaka hates her, beartiger admires her because she survived training under her

Outside she is somewhat of a dark legend among the meguca and sort of a folk hero to the downtrodden ones if Midori is anything to go by

The manga helped her popularity by making all the girls think that maybe that was real

You let the two continue to eat in silence and gusto - not that you could have done anything about it. It's the first time you've seen your sempai eat anything other than pancakes with such relish, and you can't help but stare. Homura's eating a bit more carefully and peckishly, but even you can notice how her cheeks are flushing with the kind of pleasure you get from eating good, tasty food. Food that warms not just the stomach, but the heart and the spirit.

...It'd be worth it, wouldn't it? Waking up early in the morning every day to make her breakfast, despite being the worst at mornings. Just to see her eat something you yourself made, with your own hands. It'd be quite nice, to see her smile like that. Maybe, just maybe...

You shake your head. N-no, now's not the time for any of that. You need to focus.

Closing your eyes, you try to reach out to Madoka again. You're not too sure how it works, but...maybe thinking about the girl as hard as you can would work? It seemed to work the last time, anyway, when you were replying.

The reply you get is soft, muffled, and...not really Madoka at all. Or maybe it is, you're not too sure.

It's not a spoken message, for one. It's a memory, one tinted in red. As if the vision itself was being seen through eyes filmed with blood.

A tall, slender figure, long black hair trailing behind it, grasping a massive, golden double-bladed chainaxe in one clawed fist. The other is held out towards the viewer, in what seems like an offer for help.

"T-thank you." You hear Madoka breathe out in a strangled, broken whisper. "I knew you'd come save me."

"Of course." The figure comes into closer view, her face now visible. Not as if you wouldn't recognize the voice anywhere.

Valnikov Kharn's smile is at both kind and terrible at once, her sunless eyes pinned crimson boring into yours.

"I am at my Blessed Lady's service."

It's with a start - like the jolt you'd get when you dreamt about falling flat on your back - that you are suddenly snapped back into the real, waking world. Well, as real as a Witch's Barrier, anyway. A numbing cold stealing any and all warmth afforded by the familiarity of the restaurant and the ramen you've eaten only moments before.

Kharn? Miss Valnikov's with Madoka?

"Oi." Chiaki says, and you feel her nudge you with an elbow. "You alright? You looked like you fell asleep there for a moment." A grin. "You shouldn't sleep in a Witch Barrier, you know. There's a chance you might not wake up."

That's...yes, you'll remember that.

"Are you alright, Midori-san?" Homura asks, concern clear in her features. "Chiaki-san is right, you shouldn't--"

Her words are cut off by someone entering the restaurant, coming in out of the rain.

Two someones, in fact.

The other being your best friend, Wakaba Mirai, in her Magical Girl costume. Sopping wet, the both of them. Dripping with rainwater, and something else besides. The tang of blood coming from them both, and you could see small cuts in Mirai's arms and rents in the Culexus' armor.

"No good," The Culexus grunts. "Can't get through to her. She's far too gone this time." A weary sigh tears its way from her skulled helmet's vox speakers. "Stupid child."

"We should make another attempt when the rain subsides," Mirai says, in that slow, composed diction that you had always considered polite and elegant. She carefully wrings water from her thick, matted hair, the once bright-crimson tresses now darkened ichor. "The rain seems to have an effect on her mental state. If we try again when the weather's clear, maybe she'll be able to listen."

"Thank you kindly," Mirai smiles, bowing despite...well, despite being completely drenched and looking quite miserable. But she could always make herself look dignified no matter what.

You very nearly duck as she glances around the restaurant - and the moment your eyes meet is the moment your breath catches in your throat.

"...Midori-chan...?" Her eyes widen in complete surprise. "I...w-what are you doing here?"

Your friend. Your best friend, ever since you started this entire thing, with the Magical Girling and stuff.

You couldn't help yourself. Even though you made a promise that you'd always try to look and act professional in front of your sempai. Even though you promised yourself that you wouldn't get carried away anymore, not with her around at least.

You barely hear Mirai calling your name as you all but tackle her into a hug, hugging her as tightly as you can, hugging her with all the strength your tired, sore body could muster. Admittedly, it isn't much, but you're much too relieved to care. You don't even realize you're already crying - only that you're much too busy telling her, over and over again, how relieved you are that she's okay.

It's only after a few moments that you manage to recover just enough to draw back - and you look up to see that your best friend is crying too, tears trickling down her own cheeks. You can tell that she's happy too, but...there's something wrong, isn't there? Something unsaid, brimming underneath. Something she's sad about that she's not saying.

"M-my, what a sight we must look." Mirai says after a moment, giggling a bit weakly. "Um, Miss Malal, may I ask for some tissues? Midori-chan and I need to stop embarrassing ourselves in front of everyone, here."

"...Midori, huh?" The Culexus pulls a small pack from a zip-up pocket on her suit, the sort people give out near the train stations and such. "The friend you were talking about."

"Yes. My very good friend. ...You have my thanks." Mirai sniffs, carefully tearing the pack open, and handing you a few sheets. You wipe your eyes and blow your nose with them, just as she does. You share an awkward smile after a few moments, and you both giggle again, at just how...well, ridiculous everything has been, so far.

She'd been sent earlier to kill you, after all. Then you saw her murdered by Kharn. And then...well, here you are.

"I'll have a talk with the two idiots over there, then. You look like you need to catch up with each other."

"Thank you, Miss Malal." Mirai murmurs softly, bowing, and the Culexus walks past you with a curt nod.

You watch as she walks up to the table where Chiaki and Homura are still eating - a steaming bowl of ramen in her hands as well - and she takes up the empty spot beside the pigtailed girl. Both girls stop and look up at the stranger in their midst - before all three of them nod in complete and perfect unison. They resume eating a moment later - or at least, two of them do, with Malal simply unclipping a smartphone from the front of her suit and tapping at its touchscreen.

"I'm...I'm glad to see you here, but you shouldn't have," The first words that Mirai actually says to you is in hushed, rather worried tones. "Pleaes, don't feel guilty with what happened. I...I know what I did. I know what happened. And I'm trying to make the best out of it as I can. While I still can."

...What? What is she talking about? You're here to save her! You're going to pull her out of this nightmare, back out into the real world, where things can be okay again!

How do you react?

So maybe Homu has a similar trick.

Also, has it actually been explicitly confirmed that Culexus can only pulse amongst themselves, and can't contact non-Culexus if they want? I was under the impression that the thing that was unique about Kyoko was that she could pick up the Culexus "channel" even when they're only talking amongst themselves.

After all, QB communicates by pulsing all the time. If Culexus pulsing works the same way, it stands to reason they could talk to others outside their own ranks, though perhaps only one-way if the person they're talking to can't pulse back.

Kyubey was surprised that Kyouko could pick up on it since it isn't something normal meguca are supposed to be able to hear

The culexus are the only ones who can do it between each other which is why they are doubly creepy to normal meguca because aside from being unsettling due to their powers they don't speak

I think it implies that whatever Kyouko wished for in this world was dangerously close to a culexus wish or had the underlying similarity of one

Well, yeah, that's what I mean by picking up normal Culexus pulsing when most non-Culexus can't.

What I'm asking is, is it simply a matter of Culexus pulsing NORMALLY being a Culexus-only thing, but they can choose to pulse to non-Culexus if they want, or is it strictly limited to Culexus (and the odd anomaly like Kyoko)? A question of "do not" vs "can not". I don't recall seeing any explicit clarification, but the impression I got was the former.

I got the impression it was can not after MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS when Deculture mentioned that she trained to do it in secret which would imply that normal meguca can't pick up on it or pulse and that being able to is an aberration

That still doesn't preclude what I'm talking about here.

Yes, normally non-Culexus can't pick up on normal Culexus pulsing, nor can they pulse themselves. What I'm saying is, do we know for sure that normal Culexus pulsing (the sort which typically only reaches other Culexus) is the ONLY kind of pulsing they're capable of? Or could they, if necessary, send a pulse on another "channel" (so to speak) that other megucas can receive, like how QB pulses to megucas? Obviously if it's the latter then this open-frequency pulsing isn't something they do very frequently, but if it's a possibility then it would explain the apparent synchronization between Malal, Moemura, and Murderface just now.

You shake your head at her. Of course, everything's complicated! This situation is the most complicated you've ever been in, but that doesn't matter, because you'll save everyone! Including her and your sempai! That's why you're here!

A stricken expression clouds Mirai's face, before it clears up with another smile as she clasps both your hands with hers. Her smile, simple as it is, is so heartbreakingly beautiful that you can't help but feel your cheeks crimson at the sight of it.

"...If only I saw that kind of Midori a bit more back then, I would've fallen in love with you right away," She murmurs in a gentle, if regretful tone. You blush even harder at this, but even your embarrassment at her words - such as they are - can't hide the unspoken meaning behind them. No, you refuse to believe it. It can't turn out like that--

"I know what you're doing," Mirai says suddenly, squeezing your hands. "You're trying to help your sempai - Murderface-san - get herself back together again, right?"

Y-yes. Yes, that's what you're trying to do. How did she know?

"Miss Malal told me everything." Mirai nods towards the Culexus. "Well, mostly everything. Some I had to figure out for myself. That's what we stepped out to try and do, earlier, until this...blasted rain came down and made a mess of everything." She shakes her head, her hair still matted wet against her scalp, her skin, her cheeks. "I have to admit, your sempai knows how to fight, even when she's in the grip of madness, screaming and roaring about the flesh of fallen angels."

...Who? Does she mean...she and Malal had been fighting another fragment of Chiaki?

"Since I got here, yes." Mirai nods. "Miss Malal presented a very convincing case." Another smile. "Her blade is mine, as well as any familiars I can summon. Although, come to that, it's probably best if I don't summon any bears here." She frowns. "I'm a bit uncertain as to what form they'll take in this environment, or if I'll be able to control them at all. I'm...still getting used to everything."

...Right. Well. She's...fine, that's the most important thing. Anything else you can probably take care of later.

"Midori-san, you look like you need a few questions answered." Mirai murmurs, reaching out to take your hand again. "Some I can't answer, obviously, but anything else I'll try. You can ask Miss Malal too, if you want. We're just waiting for the rain to stop before trying again."

What question do you ask?

"..." The Culexus stares at you in silence, as if considering whether or not to answer you. The vox unit at the mouth of her helm crackles briefly with static, as if preparing to broadcast her words - when Chiaki herself cuts the black-clad girl off with a reply of her own.

"Her name's Malal, Midori. Didn't you hear her?" Your boss - or at least, the fragment of your boss that's the most recognizable at this point of time - turns to grin at you. "And she knows a lot because, well, she's--"

"M-mortally challenged," Homura murmurs, a rather cheeky smile curling her lips. "T-that's what she was going to say, right? Malal-san?"

"...Yeah, that's what I was going to say." The Culexus nods, standing up. "You might have heard about me from the former Warmaster. I was her aide. Things happened. I'm as they say I am," she waves towards the two Homuras still in the middle of their meal. "..and for the benefit of everyone present, I'd rather not go into the events that got me here in the first place. What's more important is us getting her back together. Or at least, together enough that when this entire barrier collapses, she'll be sane enough to continue."

You stare at the Culexus for a moment, before shaking her head. ...Her dodging the question so suspiciously aside, is Chiaki going to be okay with just three fragments? Shouldn't you aim to have all four of them instead?"

"Ideally, yes." Malal nods. "But we're trying to work with what we've got, here. If we can rein in the fourth, all very well and good, but..." Malal shakes her head. "Three will be close enough. It's better than nothing, which is what we'll get if the crazy one gets her hands on the other three."

Crazy one? You mean the one she and Mirai just fought?

"Oh, no. Hardly." Malal laughs. "That one was angry. Not crazy. The one I'm talking about is completely fucking insane."

Outside, the rain continues to pour. It's a miracle the streets hadn't flooded yet.

Finally off work and managed to read the thread properly. Throwing out some thoughts, even if it's over at this point.

RibbonHomu is a post-canon Homu that decided she was no longer happy with Madoka becoming a goddess of hope and erasing herself from physical existence. She once again tried to "save" Madoka and ended up putting in motion the events which led to Madokami falling and becoming Faust, setting up the quest proper.

Now, early on in Midori quest, Pinky grumbled something about "time lines converging" as she analyzed the barrier. This, combined with RibbonHomu's plan to kill one of herself, makes me think that she's trying the same thing as Archer: erase herself from existence by forcing a paradox.

Since this barrier is a "convergence of timelines" any version will do, but she'll probably be gunning for Moemura harder than any of the others in hopes of creating the biggest paradox possible. RibbonHomu is probably so messed up right now that she's probably thinking that if she can't "save" Madoka, then at least she won't put her through several timelines of misery by erasing the catalyst, herself, from ever making any changes to begin with.

Witch-wings, gold shield, her own version of Madoka's bow, who knows how many timelines of experience in combat, and a single minded determination to save Madoka no matter what...

Midori is in deep shit.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/10/13(Thu)20:45 No.22516506

You are a Magical Girl, and you're trying to rescue your own boss from...herself.

A supercharged version of herself, complete with a ribbon and wings and golden weaponry. A supercharged version that's also super insane.

The things you do for love.

>>22516506

That's what it sounds like, after her dead colleague started telling you THINGS from inside a Witch Barrier. THINGS that you possibly couldn't have made up even if you tried, and you're supposed to be the one who thinks up of contrived situations to put your own self insert and the exaggerated expy of your boss through, in the name of LOVE and ROMANCE.

Your best friend, Wakaba Mirai, is there with you, along with two fragments of your sempai's broken psyche (original flavor and extra moe). With Malal, the Culexus who seems to have a strange connection with your sempai, your group comes about to five Magical Girls, all trapped inside a Witch Barrier. A Witch Barrier that also harbors an insane eldritchian horror in a pink dress and a metal-limbed maniac with a gigantic golden chainaxe hungry for skulls.

You have a way out, yes. It's right there on your wrist, a bulky digital watch. One press and you can leave this nightmare and everything else. Safe back in the real world. But doing that...that means leaving your boss here to die, and that's something you're not prepared to live with.

You are going to save her no matter what. Whatever it takes. Even if it kills you in the process.

Even if you don't know if things will work out the way they should.

You'll drag her kicking and screaming back into the real world. Back to the place where she can smile again, even if the reason she's smiling isn't you at all.

Your sempai is a broken thing, that much is clear. And you're not going to let anything get in the way of her having the tiny scraps of happiness the universe can spare broken things like her.

She deserves that much, at least.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/10/13(Thu)20:47 No.22516528

>>22516512

So, what are the THINGS that her supposedly-dead friend told you?

1.) One of your sempai's fragments is angry. Not the usual kind of angry where she simply frowns and goes quiet and glares at you until you apologize, but the angry where she seems to have grown teeth and claws and and other sharp things and can tear someone and half with them. Apparently, that's what they tried to fight earlier, and you can see from their tired, wounded states that it didn't go so well.

3.) The bad one is all out-and-out insane, with a "ribbon in her hair", "wings of pure hatred" and "a golden shield clasped around her arm". The fragment of your sempai that wants to kill herself - which probably means that she's after her other fragments as well.

4.) To save your sempai, you have to get at least three of her fragments together, in the same place. You don't know what'll happen when you do. Neither does Malal or Mirai. You just have to, for some reason.

5.) Your shit is well and rightly fucked. No, Malal didn't tell you this, but from everything she's said, she might as well held up a sign that said so.

There are a few things that she's not telling you, however. Mirai is keeping back a few things as well.

What do you do?

[]Ask them something else.
[]Let this be, and try to come up with a plan.
[]Ask the two Homuras about the other fragments.
[]Try to reach Madoka again.

The Kyubey with the BOSS shirt said something about this restaurant being here due to my soulgem being attuned or something. What does that mean, and can that help us in any way?

Also... one of the support guys outside of the barrier mentioned that Kharn has also entered the barrier. How are we going to deal with her?

Some random thoughts on RibbonHomu from the last thread:

RibbonHomu is a post-canon Homu that decided she was no longer happy with Madoka becoming a goddess of hope and erasing herself from physical existence. She once again tried to "save" Madoka and ended up putting in motion the events which led to Madokami falling and becoming Faust, setting up the quest proper.

Now, early on in Midori quest, Pinky grumbled something about "time lines converging" as she analyzed the barrier. This, combined with RibbonHomu's plan to kill one of herself, makes me think that she's trying the same thing as Archer: erase herself from existence by forcing a paradox.

Since this barrier is a "convergence of timelines" any version will do, but she'll probably be gunning for Moemura harder than any of the others in hopes of creating the biggest paradox possible. RibbonHomu is probably so messed up right now that she's probably thinking that if she can't "save" Madoka, then at least she won't put her through several timelines of misery by erasing the catalyst, herself, from ever making any changes to begin with.

Witch-wings, gold shield, her own version of Madoka's bow, who knows how many timelines of experience in combat, and a single minded determination to save Madoka no matter what...

Midori is in deep shit.

You turn towards Kyuubey, who seems to be busying himself with counting the money from the money-box. The way he shuffles the notepaper around with those secondary ears that he has, before slapping the wad of bills against the edge of the counter, making a solid cracking sound, reminds you starkly of how your father did the same thing.

You shake your head at this, and ask him about what he said earlier. Something about the attunement of your Soul Gem to Chiaki's? What does that mean, and can it help in any way with what you're trying to do?

"You've forgotten already?" Kyuubey blinks at you. "Remember how she took you in instead of having you executed, back in the Silent Room? Your contract with your former Incubator was rewritten. Your Soul Gem is now linked to hers. Something of a one-way connection, granted, but in situations like these..." He shrugs, a tiny lift and fall of his small shoulders. "One of the advantages of attunement is being able to coerce the girl whose Soul Gem is linked to yours. Maybe, and this is just supposition - you may be able to get through to that fragment they're talking about. The berserk one, anyway."

...Well, yes, but what about the other one? The insane one, with the wings and all?

"It could possibly have an effect on her too. Or maybe she'll mistake you as another fragment, and use it to track your movements." Another shrug. "Again, I'm just making educated guesses, here. I'm not real, after all, but maybe the real me should think about getting into the food service industry, hands-on like this." Kyuubey makes a satisfied grunt as he slaps the wad of money again. "It's a refreshing change of pace from the drudgeries of dealing with frustrated young women."

...Right. Okay. You'll keep that in mind.

You turn back to Malal and Mirai. The latter has picked up her own bowl of ramen, picking through its contents with a pair of chopsticks, eating only the vegetables. You hide a smile at this - even in this kind of place, she still is rather conscientious about what she eats. She explained to you once that the Pleiades Saints, with their exacting choice of uniform...you can't really be careless with your food choices, unless you suddenly wanted a wardrobe malfunction in the middle of combat.

"You're hiding something, aren't you?" You say as...calmly as you can, despite the fact that you want to throttle the truth out of them. Especially Malal - the fact that you can't see her face makes it doubly annoying. "Tell me everything. If we're to save sempai, I need to know everything."

Malal and Mirai share another pointed glance, before the former speaks up. "We've told you everything necessary for us to complete our objective. Anything else we've excluded isn't worth talking about, because there's nothing that can be done about them." She taps the screen of her phone. "There's such a thing as knowing too much, you know."

Mirai turns to the Culexus with an expression approximating...well, distaste, before swallowing and shaking her head. "It's...that's not quite the way I'd put it, Miss Malal, but..." Your best friend gives you an apologetic smile. "...she's right. Let's focus on getting your sempai back in one piece, Midori-chan. We'll worry about the other things later, when we can catch our breaths."

...These two. Nngh. Fine. They're right, but you'll ask them later, after you've rounded up the other two fragments. You won't settle for anything less.

In any case, Souji needs calling. If what you saw earlier was in fact true, and not another hallucination afforded by this stupid barrier, then he'll want to know about Kharn.

You hold up the Telebort Beacon and press the button to initiate the call. Everyone, including Kyuubey, seems to fall silent as they hear the beacon trying to connect to the outside world, the only sound remaining being the rain falling outside. A sharp buzz of static, a couple of beeps, and Souji's voice comes on. Crackly and a bit weak, but it's there.

"Midori?" Souji's voice sounds tired, but relieved. "Christ. We thought you were already dead. What the hell happened? We've been trying to reach you for the last three hours. Listen, we've been tracking your position, and something huge is coming your way. Way, way bigger than the ones we saw earlier. You need to get out of there now."

...Ok.

I do have some sort of tentative plan for our next step.
Thinking about it, our next step should be RibbonHomura, not berserkHomura. Because I am sure at this moment Kharn is beating up BerserkHomura.

Also I do have an idea how we could get RibbonHomura to stop being suicidal. I am not sure how good it is, though.
1. Approach RibbonHomura disguised as Madoka, ask Moemura for hints into impersonating Madoka.
2. If RibbonHomura doubts we are actually Madoka, don't deny it, but mention that we are actually a fragment of Madoka who can't stand seeing her in pain or something. That will explain our 'amnesia'.
3. While we got her attention, and she doesn't try to kill us, descretly cast a nightmare barrier so she can see only us and her surroundings.
4. Before the disguise attempt, give murderface the hypogun. She is the better shot, and devise a signal for her to shoot RibbonHomura. Also take a syringe for ourselves incase something goes wrong with murderface.
5. If we do somehow manage to calm her down, we will need to break the illusion sometime. When we do this, we pretend that the sane 'fragment' of Madoka 'possessed' us so she could give RibbonHomura hope or something.

That...that wasn't quite the news you were expecting to hear from Souji, but then again, what were you expecting? Something good?

You close your eyes for a moment, willing yourself to be calm despite the fact that he'd just told you to haul ass - and then tell him to slow down, that you need to tell him a few things, and ask him a couple of questions. There's a moment of silence, here, before he replies.

"Yeah, yeah, okay. Go ahead. Sorry, it's..." Souji seems to be doing the same thing to himself, trying to focus despite the temptation to panic. "...Right. Go on. What did you want to tell me?"

And you tell him. About what you saw with Kharn, and who she's with, and what you think is up. You also tell him that you've found Mirai, and she seems to be okay for the time being.

"...Right. Right. Yes. Kharn. Um." You're a bit disturbed at how Souji seems to be...well, going to pieces, here. He didn't even bat an eye earlier when a Witch suddenly exploded into existence in his base, nearly taking his fiancee out along with your sempai. You remember him being all cool as you like as Kharn started crying blood, trashing around and screaming gibberish until he gave her something to calm down. You had wondered if there will be anything that would really shake the young man, and it seems that now you've found it.

"...Forget about Kharn." Souji finally says after a long, painful silence. His voice sounding much more tired and strained now. "She's...she's compromised. Just focus on bringing Murderface out of there alive. She's more important."

You pause for a moment, blinking at this. He...how could he say that? How can he just consider Kharn gone? Surely there's something that can be done--

I'm going to reregister my objection to impersonating Madoka. Too easy to go painfully wrong. We desperately need Homura/Chiaki to trust us.

At this point I think we need to coordinate with (and/or re-coöpt) Faust, for several reasons -- because she knows more than we do, to have a real Madoka to calm RibbonHomu, and to get Malal close enough to Kharn to bap her on the head with a rolled-up newspaper.

You decide to face the approaching fragment head-on, instead of hiding away and letting her pass. You're not sure what it is, but having Malal in your team - or just simply being around her, anyway - makes you feel as if you could actually succeed. Even if the one you're about to face is the kind of thing that made even someone like Madoka cringe and whimper and sob in fear - and that's the best case scenario. If this turns out to be the insane one with the wings and shit, well...it's not looking too good at all.

Malal looks at you silently for a few moments, before nodding, as if confirming something herself. "Right. Same decision I would've made, too. Wasn't at all that confident, really, when Mirai and I tried it, but with five of us, we should have something approaching a fighting chance."

...If she wasn't confident at all, then why the hell did she try, then?

She looks at you, amusement clear in her vox-corrupted voice. "Because I had to. Someone had to. Especially when the stakes are huge. Even if you've got less than a single percent of success, you have to try." She shrugs. "We actually came close to getting there, anyway, until the rain started. That sent everything to shit."

The rain. What's so special about this kind of rain, anyway? Does it mean anything inside this barrier? Does it attract familiars or something, or what?

Another glance, between Mirai and Malal, before Mirai herself replies. "Miss Malal believes that it's a representation of Miss Murderface's memories, or an aspect of it that elicits a reaction on her fragments. She remembers the rain, and she dreams about it, and it reminds her of a very traumatic event in her life. The trauma has its obvious effects, of course."

But what about Chiaki and Homura? How come they're not going crazy?

Malal shrugs at this. "Probably because they haven't experienced the event itself, or can't remember it." She turns towards the two Homuras. The one you're more familiar with, Chiaki, shrugs at this.

"Probably. I remember something with rain, but it's all in bits and pieces." She grins in a tired sort of way. "Not going insane here, though. Don't worry. Takes more than a little rain to do that." She nudges Homura with a gentle elbow, making the poor girl squeak in surprise.

"I...n-no, I don't remember anything bad about rain," She murmurs, shaking her head. "I like the rain, actually. It makes it nice to curl up in bed with a good book." She smiles at this. "A-and a cup of hot chocolate."

"There you go." The Culexus nods. "Anyway, if we're going to do this, we should aim to subdue. Hit her hard enough to drop her or render her harmless. Then we bring the other two to her, and..." Her voice trails off in a rather hesitant silence.

And...then?

"Then something...happens?" Malal answers after a moment. "I don't know. But something will. I'm sure of it."

How? How can she be so sure?

Malal's skulled helm turns toward you, before replying in a voice that's neither smug or snide - just a quiet statement, an affirmation.

"That's a secret." A moment more. "But it'll work, whatever it is."

Christ. More secrets. Are all Culexus as annoying as her?

"No," This time, Malal chuckles. "I'm the most annoying. There's one you should meet, thouh. She's got a pet tortoise--"

The bestial roar from outside exploded with all the volume and force of a thunderclap. The glass windows that allowed customers to enjoy a view of the street while eating their ramen cracking, then shattering, then blasting into the store in sharp, cutting shards. You would've shouted out a warning, had it not been for Chiaki diving from across the table and knocking you to the floor. You immediately catch her scent, an earthy one of sweat and blood and gunpowder, distracting you from her warm weight as it settles down on top of you. A half-squeak, half-sob, and you realize that Homura had also borne you down as well, the pigtailed girl covering your face with her own body.

It's then that you hear Malal swear, the furious, scathing hate coming across her helmet's vox speakers. "Fucking hell, she's here! Get up, all of you! SHE'S HERE!" A rasp of static. "MIRAI!"

"Here," You hear her reply breathlessly, and you catch a glimpse of silver coming alive in her hands. Her broadsword. The sword that she'd used a lifetime ago, in the Jyuubey's service. The sword that she'd used only a few days ago, when she was trying to kill you. "We're engaging, Midori-chan. It's her, she's here, and she looks angry." A moment. "Try not to enjoy yourself too much, alright?"

A flurry of footsteps. Another roar. A shouted challenge from Malal's helm speakers. And finally, the deafening noise of metal crashing against metal, again and again and again.

What do you do?

Before you could even gasp out a reply - or to kindly ask the two Homuras to get off you so you could get up - they do so automatically, with disturbingly near perfect synchronization. Chiaki rising to her feet, a tarnished pistol in her hands, aiming at something outside the store while Homura herself helps you get back to a vertical base. Both of them showing nothing but disciplined, hardened determination in their eyes, on their faces. Yes, even Homura-chan, the whimpering, simpering young woman who looked like she couldn't hurt a fly even if it threatened to murder her entire family.

"Are you hurt, Midori-san?" You hear Homura ask, quietly, clearly, as she takes your arm to haul you up off the floor. You shake your head no, still a bit stunned from the sudden turn of events. You need to join that fight, before something bad happens. You need to get there and help Mirai and Malal, before--

"Holy shit. Is that what we're fighting?" The shock and surprise is clear in Chiaki's voice. The gun shakes slightly in her grip. "Is that...do we turn into THAT?"

You follow her gaze as you finally get your feet steady underneath you, and you couldn't help but echo her sentiments. Beside you, you hear Homura gasp, followed by a helpless whimper.

Bearing no wings of pure hatred nor a golden shield, or even a ribbon in her hair - the fragment that Malal and Mirai are currently fighting is a monster.

It's Chiaki, that much is sure - but turned into something that no Witch could ever match in hideousness. Her arms and legs encased - no, TURNED - into the same black, jagged fleshmetal that formed Kharn's feet and hands. But where they still somewhat vaguely resembled something human with the former Warmaster, here they looked more like weapons, part of a flesh-tearing automaton created by someone deliberately perverting the human form.

Mere scraps of her original Magical Girl costume, threadbare and crusted with blood, is visible from the gaps of the armor encasing her chest and most of her upper torso. Even the scarred shield is not spared - clamped to her right claw, it is tarnished, turned nearly crimson in rust, violet gemstones sparking in the exposed and infected machinery within.

But what gave you pause the most was her face.

Where both Homura and Chiaki looked quite like the sempai you left behind, perfect copies - this fragment resembled Chiaki like a statue resembles the subject it was modeled after, except reaved by a thousand blades and left in the rain to crumble. A network of scars cleaves her features, here and there, some already healed, some still healing. One particularly nasty one bisects her face from her chin to her scalp, the cut slightly veering off diagonally once it reached her lips. Her irises of her eyes, a cold and murderous purple, is pinned crimson, the pupils blazing red. The purple flame lashing and licking from her left eye, hotter and larger than you'd ever seen it before.

Her hair had also grown long, unruly, nearly feral, sprouting from underneath a crown of black thorns from her scalp. A semblance of sentience- or was it merely her trying to keep it out of her eyes while she fought? - is evident by the mass tied into one long ponytail, trailing behind her as she moved.

The sword in her hands is...it's less of a sword and more a jagged, serrated tool, easily as tall as her, made to rend flesh and crunch through bone. A thing of brutal simplicity, singular and sadistic in its purpose. A sword to kill and murder.

Chiaki - or the thing that looked like her - roars again as she crashes her sword against Mirai's, her mouth opening to reveal teeth much too fanged, much too sharp to be human. An undecipherable snarl, and you see Mirai being thrown aside with another crash, the Magical Girl landing hard on the muddy street with a pathetic splash. The monster moves in for the kill, limbs clanking - before it's stopped by Malal throttling it backward, pulling it away with a crowbar shoved against its unprotected throat.

"ANY DAY NOW, HANEGAWA!" Malal screams, her vox-snarl nearly lost in the roar of the rain. "WHENEVER YOU FEEL LIKE IT!"

Right. Right. You...you need to reach her, somehow. Yes. That's the main thing. You need to get through the anger, the hatred clouding her senses. Even you could feel it eminating from this one - so thick it left the taste on the tongue.

Without needing to say it, you run forward - out of the safety of your father's restaurant, into the rain, right into danger. Without even needing to tell them, the two Homuras follow you, their movements once more paired, synchronized. A buzzing sensation, an itch in your teeth, tells you that Homura herself had transformed, the same familiar costume materializing on top of her uniform. The golf club in her hands.

All three of you crash into the berserk fragment all at the same time. Chiaki braves the clawed arm bearing the sword - you hear her spit a curse that wouldn't have shamed your original sempai as she tries to pull the iron limb back with her entire body. A hammering noise, and the sound of something precious being ruined, tell syou that she's trying to disarm the fragment by slamming the butt of her pistol against its claws, again and again and again.

"You stupid idiot," You hear her rasp between bloody lips. "Calm...the fuck down..."

Homura had done the same with the fragment's other arm, clasping it with her entire body, while using her feet to brace against the monster's armor herself. It's almost humorous to look at, if you didn't consider the fact that you've seen another Magical Girl do the same thing, but to a human being. It tore his arm completely off the socket, which the Magical Girl then used to beat the man to death while he still screamed.

What did you do? Well...you did what you thought would work. You hugged her. Held onto her for as long as you could. It worked with Madoka, didn't it? It worked that one time, didn't it? Surely...surely it'd work now?

Righht. Right. You need to--

You close your eyes. Holding on tight. Ignoring the cuts in your arms, in your hands, the armor jagged enough and spikey enough to wound by touch alone.

+ SEMPAI. + You think this with as much force and volume as you could. + SEMPAI, PLEASE. CALM DOWN. I'M HERE. HANEGAWA MIDORI. DON'T YOU REMEMBER ME? +

The answer is immediate, abrupt, and bone-jarring. With another deafening roar and a frightening surge of strength, the fragment throws all of you off of her. You hear Chiaki yell in hurt triumph, and you turn to see her sprawled on the muddy ground, but with the sword in her hands. Homura lies facedown in the mud, unmoving, and your breath catches in her throat - but she moves again, pulling herself up to her feet shakily. Tears of hurt anger in her eyes. Malal is...well, she's up on her feet, already, the crowbar bent but still in her hands. Beside her, Mirai is once more preparing to strike.

It's then that you feel it. A reply, pulsed back, weak but angry, helpless but enraged, made jagged by desperation.

+ NO. MIDORI IS DEAD. I KILLED HER. KILLED EVERYONE. LOST CONTROL. YOU ARE FAMILIARS. TRYING TO TORTURE ME. TRYING TO TRICK ME. ALL ALONE. +

"Again," You hear someone say, and it takes you a few moments to realize that the one who spoke was you. The monster in front of you is wary, her eyes wide, the purple flame sputtering and flickering in alarm as she looks around like a cornered animal. And she is, in a way - all five of you surrounding her in a loose circle.

"We have to try again." You repeat, tasting blood in your mouth. "I know what to do."

"Sure," Chiaki grins as she tosses the wicked, curved sword over her shoulder, the weapon spinning end over end before stabbing itself into the ground quite a bit away from the group. "But we'll have to think of a new plan, because I'm pretty sure I'm not that stupid to fall for the same thing twice."

"You'd be surprised." Malal says dryly. "Homura? Are you alright?" She calls towards the pigtailed version of your sempai, who is...well, she's looked better, with the lens of her glasses cracked, and the front of her magical girl costume covered in mud. Despite this, however, fierce determination has her face in a quiet scowl, and she gives a nod to the Culexus. The same query, posited to Mirai, is replied with a silver broadsword cutting air in quick, practiced swoops.

"Right." Malal breathes out the word, causing a strange-sounding digitized sigh to rasp from her vox speakers. "Hanegawa, get ready to pulse once we've restrained her. Stand your ground until then."

What? N-no, you'll charge with them. You're not--

"I said stand your ground. Now, on my mark. Ready, set--"

There was no GO. Malal burst forward, and the rest moved into action, just like that. Once more charging the armored Magical Girl in front of you, seeking to restrain her again.

She is prepared, this time. With the alarming speed and strength usually given to those fighting against superior odds, fighting in a corner with no hope to escape - the fragment lashes out. Without a weapon, she uses her claws, her feet, her armor, her teeth.

Chiaki is the first to reach her, and the first to fall. The claws raking across her entire front, tearing through cloth and skin and flesh. Blood mingles with the mud, a dirty sludge, as the fragment that most resembled your sempai fell at the monster's armored feet.

Malal is the second. Blasting her hate across her helmet's speakers, she flies at the monster once more. You hear her words cut off in a garbled rasp of static, overwhelmed by the sound of plexiglass cracking and steel wrenching as a clawed fist smashes right into the mouth of her helm. She rocks on her feet, before falling on her knees. Blood dripping from her shattered mouthpiece, a rasping breathing broadcasted by a clearly damaged vox.

Both Homura and Mirai attack at the same time, in a strange, almost unexpected synchronization - and fall at nearly the same moment. Golf club and sword hammer and slice and pound and cut at the monster, Mirai's cold grace matching Homura's clumsy, but eager rage. Your best friend crumples with a bladed kick to her stomach, her sword wrenched out of her hands, and she falls to her knees in the same moment that Homura is knocked unconscious by two meters of heavy silver slamming against the back of her head.

There's a sharp sound, of metal being forced to SHATTER, as the beast breaks Mirai's sword over her knee.

The entire ordeal lasted no more than a few heartbeats. You knew, because yours was thudding in your ears the very moment Malal signaled the attack, lending a strange backbeat to the carnage. But you stand your ground, just like you were told to.

You stand your ground.

But you stand your ground, and pulse your message to her, clearly and strongly, your arms spread out to welcome your death.

+All Alone? ALL ALONE! You have never been all alone, you have had people do everything they can to get close to you, and they're still trying no matter how hard you push them away, I'm still trying. I love you, you saved me and I will love you until the day I die. +

There's a sharp whining sound as the weapon's edges seem to glow a furious, hateful purple, and various chambers and sections unfold from its chassis with a mechanical precision. It seems to be charging up for something, but you ignore this.

+ The only one you're hurting is yourself. I know you're still there, you know that it's the real me talking to you.+

Steam starts to hiss as rain continues to fall, the drops that fall on the weapon evaporating even before they've kissed its harsh metal surface. Behind it, the girl you love, deformed in the most cruel of ways, stares at you, the flame licking from her eye all but blazing.

+I know you won't kill me, and even if you did my life has been yours all along. I love you, so let me save you this time.+

Silence. Nothing else but the roar of the rain, and the whine of a charged weapon about to be unleashed.

It's then that the purple flame sputters. Once, twice.

Before suddenly dying.

The weapon ceasing its teeth-itching whine, before being lowered slowly, until its blade-tip is no longer aimed to end your existence in a single thrust.

And it's then that the monster utters something. A single word, mangled by lips unused to speech, murdered by a mouth too full of sharp teeth. It comes out slow, painful, and colored with a hope too weak and injured by crushing despair.

"Mi...dori?"

What do you do?

Yes i am, because i know Deculture wont do it because it will upset his fanbase greatly. "It's me." You say now, saying it with your own voice.

"Just me. Took you long enough."

The monstrous lance deactivates with a series of metal clicks - the sections that had opened up earlier closing and sliding shut - before the entire weapon itself is dropped to the ground in a wet crash. A look of pale, abject shock gracing the monster's - no, your sempai's - face.

+ SAW. SAW YOU DIE. SAW EVERYONE DIE. KYOKO. SAYAKA. MAMI. MISAKA. KILLED THEM. TRIED TO SAVE THEM BEFORE CORRUPTION. WAS ALONE. TRAPPED HERE. + She looks down at her hands, each claw already stained by fresh blood - before she looks back up at you, again. + IS IT. REALLY YOU?+

The answer you give her, then, is a hug. An embrace that you step forward into, your movements slow, careful but deliberate - and you feel her stiffen at this, the pieces of her armor clanking together as she shivers.

+ It's me. Midori. I'm here, sempai. +

A moment more, and it's then that you feel her move again.

Her arms moving slowly, carefully, to...return the hug. Tears springing in your eyes as she does so.

+ MIDORI, I--+

Her message is rudely cut by a noise loud enough to tear through the roar of the rain. Chewing through it in a loud, guttural roar. A noise you've heard before, back in Siberia, while your sempai and her former colleague hunted Mirai. You heard it again, louder and from twinned weapons, when Chiaki and Kharn fought in that training room.

Valnikov Kharn, wearing a black greatcoat and a cap with an skulled emblem, smiles at you as she stands behind the fragment of your sempai that you'd risked death trying to calm down. The double-bladed chainaxe resting on her shoulder, its motors idling, teeth chewing air.

And she is smiling. Not maliciously, not terribly, but smiling sincerely.

"M-Miss Valnikov?" You gently and slowly pull away from Chiaki - and she turns around as well to meet the newcomer. "What..what are you doing--"

"Ah, see?" Kharn, cutting you off, gestures to both of you. "That is what an aide is all about, Midori. You are there for your Warmaster, even if it means death. Even if it means suffering." She glances towards the still-kneeling form of Malal, and she freezes for a moment, seemingly stunned, before shaking her head and continuing. "You...you will make an aide worthy of Murderface yet."

She takes a step towards you - no, towards Chiaki - just as she levers the giant chainaxe off of her shoulder. A click, and a loud mechanical noise, and the chainaxe breaks apart into two. Gorechild and Gorefather. Each one now revving harder, revving faster. Their combined noise loud enough to rouse the ones knocked unconscious by the fight earlier.

"Miss Valnikov, please, you don't have to do this--" You try, your eyes wide, your throat dry.

"Kharn," Malal's voice, now muffled through her helmet, no longer being broadcasted from a vox, sounds...familiar. Terribly so. "Kharn, don't be stupid."

"Ah, ah. No more lectures, Malal's Ghost. And no pleas, loyal aide." Kharn's smile is sharklike. "I am the Betrayer, am I not? It is my role. It is what I am chosen for. The Blessed Lady decrees it. Her will be done. She wants this to happen."

Cold purple eyes glance back at you, crimson-pinned, before the armored fragment of your sempai's psyche moves to interpose herself between you and the approaching russian.

"And I want my last swordfight."

While incapacitating Kharn is an adequate interim solution, it doesn't solve the whole problem; Kharn might just go straight for ANGRYface the moment she wakes up. Keep diggin that hole. Regardless, your writing style is nearly the complete opposite of noir. It might have something to do with the quest-necessitated use of the second person, but the lack of any introspective narration and general flatness to the narrative does not make for good noir.

Obviously a decent number of people like it and will call my opinions trolling, but the to put noir in the name is highly misleading.

Honestly, I think the lack of Noir at this point is less due to Deculture's writing style, and more because of player choices. I mean, we started off a chain-smoking, heavily alcoholic gun-for-hire that got drawn into a mess involving famous TV idols and gangs.

It kind of went downhill from there once choices got involved.

That alone doesnt make noir. Noir is about narrative and style as much as mannerisms. Roger the Negotiator was noir as fuck and I'm not sure he ever once touched a cigarette. Hell, someone wrote some noir about a hard-boiled Hedron Crab for /tg/ once. I might have to go thumb through the archives to see if it was really all you cracked it up to be, but right now it looks like his writing is indeed in part to blame.

I don't consider you a troll, sir. Noir is what I've always wanted to write, and Max Payne was my favorite game ever since the first game came out. MGNQ is my attempt to try and capture even a tiny bit of that, and I've been trying as hard as I can.

You're not the first to say that how I write isn't Noir enough. But as I've said, I've been doing my best to try and catch all the notes and mannerisms. It's a learning process for me, made even slower because I know that my writing style isn't fit for it. I'm just lucky that some people seem to like it even then.

I do hope that one day I'll be able to write something that's Noir enough. Hopefully not going down the path of Frank Miller because that's just much too Noir for me that it's almost ridiculous.

I think, on the whole, you'd find it easier to write Noir works without the need to also take consensus choice into consideration.

I mean, I love the story and all, and this is in no way a criticism of your writing. It's just that the overall /tg/ mindset of 'boner boner white-knight boner romance 40K boner lesbians grimderp awesome boner why aren't there more lesbians' isn't really conducive to writing Noir.

I have a hard time picturing you as something other than a raging autist.

I mean, there is feedback, I know how it looks, everyone knows how it looks, heck, I also gave Deculture some threads back about how I feel that the 40k gets a bit much.

That what you do, however, is no giving feedback, its walking straight into a room full of people you don`t like, enjoying something you also don`t like and then raging at them for their shittaste.

So, please, just let me ask you one straight question: How much of a fucking autist do you have to be to not notice that?
If you are trying to bamboozle us, it worked, then again its not very hard to troll /tg/ but if you are really serious about what you say, you should probably reflect on yourself, your behaviour and the things you said so far.

There is criticism and then there is being a ragging cunt trying to tell people to stop liking what you don`´t like.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and...you are about to be betrayed.

You never really thought that the title meant anything. The first you've heard of it, you thought it was just a colorful moniker, something to make the bearer appear to be more intimidating, more dangerous. More unpredictable. A codename of sorts, one that never really had any bearing on reality, or spoke of anything about the owner's history. Surely...surely someone never carried the title 'Betrayer' without a sort of irony to it.

Of course, it's not that Valnikov Kharn needed help in being more intimidating, to look more dangerous than she already is. The mere sight of her, even when you thought she was playing for the right team, was enough to send alarm bells ringing in your head. You always had to take a second to calm down and force yourself not to bolt in her presence, to suppress the natural instinct to run and hide. ...Yes, there was a point in your life that you'd have been ashamed to admit that, but at the time, you didn't think someone like Kharn could exist.

It wasn't her unnatural eyes. It wasn't just her smile, which always seemed to be on the wrong side of bloodthirsty, even when she was obviously pleased. It certainly wasn't just her hands and feet, and you were even getting used to them, seeing them more as crude steel prosthetics rather than the...instruments they were.

It was her eyes and smile and limbs, all wrapped around a killing intent that didn't so much as choke the breath out of you but strangled it off with a handy loop of piano wire. She was the knife snuck in between ribs so you'd drown in your own blood as you died. She was the bullet through the spinal column to let you watch your hands and legs get pulled torn off and still remain conscious enough to scream about them. If there ever could be anyone who could exemplify the concept of dying with terror filling your veins, then Valnikov Kharn would certainly come as close to it as humanly possible. Not even the armored berserker that was the third fragment of your sempai's broken psyche could even compare, and she was a broken, jagged, spiteful thing of hate.

"Kharn," Malal tries again struggles to get back to her feet, managing after the third try. "Kharn, no, you don't have to do this. Don't listen to the Blessed Lady. Remember your promise--you promised ME--"

"I am the Betrayer. Promises mean nothing, oaths mean nothing. All except one. All except the one I made her." Kharn returns smoothly, although even you could see that she's pointedly trying not to look at Malal. "And I do not keep promises with a barrier-born phantasm meant to play upon my most cherished memories." A sigh. "I am not that simple."

"IT'S ME, YOU RAVING LUNATIC," Malal roars hoarsely, her damaged vox distorting her voice even more than when it was whole. She takes a stumbling step forward, trying to intercept the approaching Betrayer. "FOR FUCK'S SAKE, KHARN, FOR ONCE IN YOUR LIFE, THINK ABOUT--"

>> ☐ Deculture 01/18/13(Fri)05:56 No.22656364

A plume of crimson fire flickers into life in front of Kharn's left eye, a mirror to the armored fragments - and Malal's entire form simply BURNS, causing her roar to end in a harrowing scream. You step back in horror as the Culexus is nearly incinerated in evil, crimson fire the scent of sulfur and brimstone - burning the image of a skulled helm grinning amidst the flames licking around it.

The sight, disturbing as it was, didn't stop you from hearing both Chiaki's and Homura's screams twinning into Malal's vox-distorted pained one.

You make to yell at Kharn, to try and stop her from killing the Culexus - before the flames suddenly dissipate, just as quickly as they'd come alive. Malal, her suit ruined and still smoldering in certain places, falls facedown in the wet, muddy earth, steam hissing where the cold rain splatters against her ravaged body.

"I said be silent." Kharn spits, her sharklike eyes cold. "There are only two souls here that should be talking, and with their blades." She stops a few feet away from the Chiaki that you'd only calmed down earlier - a pleased smile curling her lips once more. "...Ah. I am...jealous, somehow, Murderface. Such an instrument of war the Blessed Lady has made you. Perfect in every way." The chainaxes in her hands rev once, twice, three times, chewing air and rain, Kharn's intent clear. "Now, let us see who of us falls here, eh?"

It's then that the Betrayer looks at you with something approaching condescension and disgust. "Now, Midori, please step away. Give the Warmasters a proper space to fight in."

How do you react?

We are in a very bad situation. While our attempt to calm down IBRS Homura is successful, all our fighters except for her have been incapacitated. While IBRS Homura can take on Kharn, she will be afraid to use her full strength because she could go FOFA again.

First thing we should summon tiny pete. However on a one on one I'm guessing that Kharn can run circles around him and hack him apart. So we need to IBRS Homura to fight in a support position.
Second we will have to deal a lot of damage to Kharn. She is not going to listen to anyone screaming at her to stop, not us, not Malal, not even Souji. The point is that we shouldn't be afraid of smacking Kharn around, she can just take all we can dish out anyway.
Third, the question on subduing Kharn, this is going to be the big problem and something we will need to but thought into. I am not sure the Hypogun is going to work, Kharn might just go "NO! I WILL NOT FALL ASLEEP" and power up, which will nullify the sedatives… somehow. Or pinky just granted her unusual biology. There is one guaranteed way we can incapacitate Kharn bloodlessly, and that is taking her Soul Gem over 100 m away from her. But then again, that asks the question of where is her Soul Gem? How can we take off her Soul Gem without being bisected or decapitated for our effort? How can we cover the 100 m distance before being hunted down and carved up?

To be honest think that Kharn is too far gone, she is determined to die a traitor's death. We might have to kill her

"This isn't Murderface, this isn't even Chiaki or Homura. Even if you fight now, win or lose, you will not be fulfilled, the battle will be ashes in your mouth. You fight a fragment of your foe, that'll be a great fight won't it, something you can really take pride in. Pathetic, choosing to fight only a portion of Sempai.

Oh, and I have a phone call to make. I figure since you're going this far and being this much of a fucking idiot I ought to call Souji. You can tell him yourself what's going on. You can tell him how little you value what you built together, you can tell him that you're going to destroy every single friendship you painstakingly made, your love for him, everything, because you made a promise to a pink haired bitch. I don't see Kharn the Betrayer, the only Magical Girl to return from being a Witch, I see a dumbass throwing everything away because independent thought is too hard for her.

Tell me Kharn, are you going to pull your head out of your ass and stop being a self absorbed cunt or am I going to have to bitch slap you first."

Can we utilize her relationship with Souji?
Get him on the radio and hope she'll hesitate enough for us to do something, maybe subdue her, once she hears his voice?

Just reasoning as to why her betraying us is a terrible idea isn't going to work, at least that's the feeling I'm getting here.

We have talked down Pinky, we have talked down Chiaki going crazy multiple times, we should at least try to talk Kharn, too, or use our BLUFF-skill.

"Don`t you get it Kharn, Kharn? This was never about you. The Blessed Lady doesn`t give a single shit about you, unlike the people you`ve hurt and are still hurting.

It was always about Homura. It still is about Homura. About Homura and Madoka. I know the truth. Because of the letters left behind by Akemi Homura. Not cool, Kharn. Not cool.

At any rate, Kharn is midboss for this section. RibbonHomu is final boss. We don't want to use up everything we have in reserve just yet, cause we might end up needing it later on.

Have Midori move out of the way. She's not a front-line fighter and if Kharn was willing to burn her best friend, what'll she do to poor Midorin?

Move out of the way and appeal to her reason, that this fight is meaningless, it's not a whole Chiaki. And what about her happy end with Souji? Bring up everything you can think of to make her hesitate.

In your entire career as a Callidus, you've never been...mad. Angry, yes, miffed, most definitely. But you're positive you've never felt as mad as you did now. Never felt as incensed, never felt as...frustrated. So much tension, so much hate, welling up inside you, a strange warmth that coursed through your veins and pounded in your ears and colored your vision with a red haze.

You couldn't remember the exact moment that you transformed. You didn't even feel it - all you felt was that white-hot anger as you pushed past the armored frame of Chiaki, ignoring the surprised growl from the third fragment of your sempai's shattered psyche. All you felt was that anger burning even hotter as you saw Kharn's smile, toothy and thirsting for slaughter, faltering for just a moment.

What you remember - and most probably will for the rest of you life - is the sensation of your palm coming into contact with Kharn's cheek in a blistering, open-handed slap. One that, even with the transformation enhancing your physiology, stung with a rifle-crack of pain shooting up your arm. It was akin to slapping concrete - but again, you were much too angry to feel that.

You, Hanegawa Midori, a no-name Callidus, formerly of the Tenth Incubator, had just slapped Valnikov Kharn, the Betrayer.

"How dare y--" Kharn began, her eyes completely wide. The chainaxes in her hands immobile, idling. The spot on her cheek where you'd hit her already reddening.

You cut her off by slapping her again, this time hard enough for her hat - her symbol of office, of rank, of being a Warmaster - to fall off of her head, the gilded black cap tumbling into the mud.

"Midori--"

"SHUT UP!" You scream at her. "SHUT UP, YOU STUPID SELF-CENTERED BITCH!"

If being slapped twice by you didn't stun her, then being screamed at right in her face seemed to do the trick. She even...she even took a step back, the joints in her fleshmetal legs clanking. You take advantage of this by stepping forward. Offering her no respite, no way out.

"Don't...don't you get it, Kharn?" You all but snarl at her, curling your hands into fists. "This isn't about you. This was never about you. Your Blessed Lady doesn't give a SINGLE SHIT about you - unlike the people you've hurt and are still hurting!"

"ALL YOUR FUCKING BLESSED LADY CARES ABOUT IS HER, KHARN!" You take another step forward just as you point towards the three fragments of your sempai - the lost, the broken, the shattered - behind you. "It was always about her! IT IS STILL ABOUT HER! NO ONE ELSE!"

"I--"

"Did you think your Blessed Lady had a place in her heart for you, Kharn?" You couldn't help but be snide here, despite the sudden hurt look on the Betrayer's face. "I've been running from...from pieces of their past, pieces of their memories together. You have no idea. You have no idea how...everything..." You spread your arms wide, in emphasis. "...here, is about them. Of what they shared back then." You felt a grin curling your lips, despite the tears now trickling down your cheeks. "Did you think you had a chance? I wished I had. None of us do. So stop...stop being so fucking self-absorbed and think about what you're throwing away."

Kharn is finally silent at this, and you take this as her capitulation. You hold up a hand - the hand that wore the bulky Teleport Beacon - and make to press the button that would connect you to the outside world.

"Wait--" Kharn tries again, now seemingly desperate. The chainaxes silent now. But you take another step forward, merciless in your advance. You all but shove the Teleportation Beacon into her face.

"Tell him that," You growl, now mere inches from Kharn. "Tell him that right here and now. That you don`t give a shit about his feelings for you nor yours for him. Tell him that yourself, because I sure a hell won`t tell him why we had to put his retard of a loved one down because she only thinks with her fucking adrenaline glands. Go on. He deserves at least this much, you selfabsorbed bitch."

Silence, once more. Kharn, wide-eyed, looking down at you, face completely pale.

"TELL HIM, GOD DAMMIT!"

More silence. The moment of tension stretches taut between the both of you, between everyone in this sordid scene, stretched thin as glass.

And it's then that Kharn steps back. Another step. And another.

Before turning around and walking away.

Disappearing in a sudden blast of crimson flame.

Leaving behind her hat, a group of injured and near-dead Magical Girls - and a Callidus very tired of flighty broads and their horseshit.

"...Midori?" Souji's voice comes over from the Teleport Beacon. "Midori, are you there? Do you need Tiny Pete? Midori?"

You've...you've made the Betrayer retreat. That's...that's new.

"Midori?" Souji tries again. "Midori, are you there--"

You lift up the Teleport Beacon to your face to reply - and you blink slowly as you see your fingers twitching. No, your entire hand is trembling. Shaking. You clasp it with your other hand, before carefully forming your reply.

You're here, you tell him. Everything's...alright, for the most part. You've found the third fragment. Everyone's just a little bit beat up, but alive. Mostly in one piece.

A glance towards Malal, who is being helped to her feet by both Chiaki and Mirai - the two looking quite miserable on their own, bloody and encrusted with blood - confirms your lie. You turn away, and go on to tell him that you won't be needing Tiny Pete just yet.

"That's...that's good, then. Great." A moment's hesitation. "Did...did Kharn...? Is she--"

No, you cut him off. You tell him that his girlfriend's still alive, too, and in considerably better shape than your little party. Well, you slapped her around for a bit and called her names, but she's still intact. He should try and track her again, if that's possible. And you'll need the location of the last fragment, too, if that's not too much.

"No. No, it isn't." A sigh of relief. "...Thanks, Midori. I owe you."

You shake your head, and tell him that no one's keeping score. You also remind him to call you as soon as he got the coordinates.

"Alright--"

You kill the connection before sinking to the ground, your legs unable to hold you up any longer. Your costume flickering once, before completely erasing itself from existence, leaving you back in your drenched clothes.

The anger, the frustration, the sheer mad audacity that had made you physically assault one of the most feared Magical Girls in the world and scream verbal abuse in her face leaving cold, hollowed out.

"Midori...?"

The realization of just how close you've come to being torn apart hitting you cold in the gut. Even your breath is leaving you in short, feathery gasps, and you feel much too faint to even call for help.

Your vision blurs, then dims. You hear someone calling your name, but whoever it is sounds too far away.

You feel yourself fallling backward, and the last thing you see is the stormy gray sky, rain slashing down at you from above.

And then, nothing.

You wake up to the scent of freshly-cooked ramen. You open your eyes slightly, and in that half-asleep daze, murmur something you don't exactly hear. A faint giggle, from somewhere above you, is your only reply, followed by faint whisperings. A bit weird, okay, but at least you're home, right...?

Your head is resting on something really comfortable. Just the right kind of soft, and quite warm, too. It felt so good to be finally out of the rain at last--

Wait. Rain?

Siberia, you remember. Kharn. Chiaki. Her operation. Mirai. The Interrogation. The barrier. Madoka. Kharn, again. The fragments--

Your eyes snap open, rising to a sitting position - before feeling yourself suddenly pulled back down by a pair of gloved hands. Your head resting once more on that comfortable, warm softness - which you now realize is a pair of thighs. ...Mirai's thighs.

You look up to see your best friend's face above you, a finger held to her lips. Beyond her is the familiar ceiling of your father's restaurant.

"Hush. You'll wake them up." Mirai whispers. "I know time is of the essence, but they need rest." She gestures to the side - and you see both Homura and Chiaki, curled up against each other, lying on a blanket spread on the floor. The tables and chairs seem to have been cleared away to make room. At the counter, Malal seems to be making repairs to her suit - as well as she could with what looks like tape and a soldering iron, anyway. Kyuubey is talking to her while she does so.

You make to ask why, but Mirai shushes you again. "You passed out after the confrontation with Kharn. Malal wanted us to press on, but Homura was too injured to continue. We've been healing enough, but you can't heal fatigue. So we've decided to stay in for now, at least until the rain subsides."

Well. Yes. Alright. That's...good to know that it wasn't just you, then.

"Of course not." Mirai clicks her tongue at you. "I...I've never seen you in such a rage, Midori-chan. You were positively incandescent. I doubt even Saki-san could have done the same, and you know how she is." A moment, before your best friend smiles. "You should have been a Saint."

You feel your cheeks heat up at this. But it's then that you remember something, and you make to sit up again. Where's the third fragment--

"At the entrance," Mirai whispers, pulling you back down again, and you turn to see the armored form, silhouetted as it stands sentry at the doorway leading into the restaurant. "She hasn't said a single word since we got here. Well, other than...asking me to make sure you were warm and comfortable."

To be absolutely 100% honest, this is a pretty retarded scenario. Madoka can incarnate in this world, incubators allow magical girls to at least go into their death-contracts with both eyes wide open, and knowing their friends can take care of them after they pass on, and Homura can be with her best friend, her love, after she incarnates.

You try to let yourself relax for now, despite...well, despite the current circumstances. Sure, you're dry at the moment, you're on a comfortable reclining position at the moment, and...well, you ARE enjoying your best friend's soft lap for a pillow. All three - and the last one, most of all - can certainly make up for the fact that you are indeed relaxing inside the nightmare of a Magical Girl gone completely insane.

It's after a few moments of somewhat awkward but very comfortable silence that you ask Mirai about...well, how she got here. Why was she here, in Siberia? What was she looking for, and...what did Jyuubey do?

"Oh. Um." Mirai suddenly seems sheepish at your line of questioning. "I...I was flown over here for reconnaissance. Jyuubey wanted me to investigate the Ninth Incubator's Research and Development Base. I believe it was a couple of months ago when I got here, and I've been staying at Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky while...going incognito as much as I can. Ski trips, hiking, everything." You nod at her to continue, and she does so. "I couldn't really find much about it as a civilian, so I tried talking to...the bears...oh, I knew you were going to laugh, Hanegawa Midori! Please be a bit more serious!"

You manage to stifle your giggling long enough to clamp a hand over your mouth, and nod for her to continue again. You knew about her affinity with the grizzly murder machines, but it never stopped being funny to hear her talk about it with her default serious facial expression. It was quite the contrast from Satomi Usagi, the Pleiades Saint who COULD talk to the shiny-coated beasts of God's Kingdom like a Disney Princess - and you remember her as always talking about her conversations with critters in a dreamy, loopy sort of way.

"I-In any case, I...I tried to talk to the bears, here, but..." Mirai shakes her head, her poofy crimson hair bouncing as she does so. "...the bears here are strange, really. They weren't just bears...or rather, they stopped being bears. Something has corrupted them. Their minds, at least. They couldn't even talk to me anymore, they just blindly followed my instructions. So much aggression, so much hunger, so much rage in every single one. And pain, so much of it." She closes her eyes at the memory. "I felt them driven mad by the pain. I...I believe they thought that eating human flesh would somehow cure them. Or alleviate the pain for a moment, at least."

Another moment. "I...I was about to make my way towards the base when I felt Jyuubey take over. He...he asked first, of course, and I thought it would be nothing, simply him temporarily borrowing my senses to get a look for himself, but..." She opens her eyes again. "The last I remember was a pulling sensation, and being flung into the dark. After that, nothing. And then...well. I found myself forced awake, my eyes pulled open, unable to close against a stream of letters lighting up the darkness in front of me. I felt the pulling sensation once more after talking with your sempai, and..." A sigh. "...here we are. That's all I remember."

How do you respond?

Man, this Manga could have been great. The premisse is interesting, the thing about reverseenegineering a witch into a Mecgua is interesting but.. holy shit it has some of the most retarded plottwists ever printed in paper.

Plottwists on the level of:
>HAHA! IT IS I XY WHO WANTED REVENGE ON YOU FOR YOU WRONGDOINGS
>No, you`re not! Because in reality.. I am YOU.

Another idea.
Jyuubey can clean up soul gems, however it is found out later that he can only clean up the surfaces of the souls gems leaving the despair inside to build.

Perhaps here the saints found out, before they turned witch and linked their soul Gems to Jyuubey... somehow so he could clean the insides as well.

That could explain how he could take over them.

Mirai blinks at this. "My...my soul gem? I..." A shadow flits over her face, before nodding. "Yes, here it is." She lowers a hand near your face, palm upward, and it's then that a bright amber jewel manifests into reality on top of it. You're...not quite the expert on Soul Gems, but it does appear to be alright, for the most part. You reach out to touch it, but a curl of your best friend's fingers makes it disappear before you could. She lowers her hand, placing it on the floor beside her.
k

"I'll be fine," She says, just a bit tightly. "I...remember enough to know that I was slain by Miss Valnikov before I ended up here. It was not exactly the way I wanted to go, but one makes do. Cremation by your opponent's weapon is hardly the most ignoble way to die." A small lift and drop of her shoulders, causing her hair to bounce slightly again, tempting you to reach up and just touch it.

Well, if...if it's a body she's worried about, then you're sure that Souji could do something.

"Souji? The...the young man you were talking to earlier, am I correct? The one with the slightly-naosally voice and the uncouth accent?"

The very same. He's pretty smart, and he owes you, so...maybe there's hope of all of you coming out of this in one piece. That's what you're gunning for, anyway.

Mirai is silent for a few moments, before she nods, smiling down at you. "I'd...I'd like that. Yes. All of us, whole and safe, out of this nightmare. Let's all work towards that goal, Midori-chan."

You feel just a bit more closer to Mirai, now. It's a pity it had to happen here, of all places.

Wait, what about her sword? The last you saw it, it was being broken in half.

"Oh, don't worry about that. I can magic up a spare." Mirai waves your question away.

What do you do next?

You decide to talk to the third fragment - the angry piece of your sempai's shattered psyche, the one roaring and snarling about the flesh of fallen angels (or so Mirai had described her). It's with a regretful sigh that you leave the warm comfort of your best friend's lap, thanking her as well as telling her to get herself some rest as well. She blinks at this, before blushing slightly and nodding. She remarks that she'd been patiently waiting for you to do so, because she couldn't really feel her legs anymore - being someone's lap pillow will do that to you if you do it long enough. You leave her just as she stretches out on the blanket you've left, curling up beside Chiaki, close enough to share what little warmth there still was.

Your legs are still a bit shaky, various aches and pains flaring up with every move you make - but you manage to make it across the restaurant without limping too obviously. Malal, who's been having a silent conversation with Kyuubey - the both of them nodding to each other in silence - turns to you and nods in greeting just as you pass her by. You nod back, uncertain of what to say, and forcing yourself not to look at the burned ruination of her suit - Kharn's flames seemingly having burned right through at some spots, exposing charred skin. Besides that, she seems to be okay.

It's only then that you spot Kharn's hat, clean and dry, on the counter in front of the Culexus, just beside a steaming bowl of ramen. Giving you a rather snide little reminder of what happened earlier. You avert your eyes away from it, and continue walking forward - towards the lonely sentry guarding the door, the rain lashing at the armored silhouette, bringing the spiked form into sharp relief.

A sudden leopard-wet growl - low and slow, the rumbling of a predator on the hunt - makes you freeze in your tracks.

A moment's hesitation, and you see the third fragment turn slightly towards you, one purple eye with the blood-red pinprick pupil gazing at you from a mop of matted purple hair and a network of scars.

Another moment, and she turns away, facing the outside once more. The wickedly-serrated sword in her hand, gripped tight enough to stress the metal.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/23/13(Wed)06:28 No.22750613

You are a Magical Girl. Earlier, you managed to drive off an insane Magical Girl wielding twin chainaxes with nothing more than two spirited slaps and a hefty dose of harsh language. Of course, you passed out moments afterwards, but no one else will be able to say that they managed to send Valnikov Kharn packing with a strongly-worded lecture.

No one else will be able to say that they stood up to the Betrayer and lived.

But of course, you still have to get out of the Witch Barrier you've willingly had yourself thrown into, before you get a bit too proud of your achievements.

The Barrier that is slowly, but surely, starting to make sense, despite everything. The strange, surreal, and mostly downright horrifying barrier that, you were told by a sickened, insane god, belonged to the girl you're supposed to be rescuing.

Madoka. The pink-haired monster that haunted your dreams as well as your sempai's.

Homura. The former name of your sempai, her previous self. Before the amnesia. Before everything.

Both of them, together, forced apart by something that happened. Something that...so defied description, something so incredible that it bore two shattered, broken minds that had no hope of recovery. Whatever it was, it gave birth to insanity that destroyed the barriers between time, space, and whatever lay beyond those two constants. It gave rise to duty that endured injury, corruption and betrayal. It created determination that kept burning even through failure after failure after monumental failure.

And, of course, love. It created love, a love that withstood pain, withstood death, withstood even oblivion.

Love like that comes but once an eternity.

Maybe you should've wished for it when you had the chance.

But nothing will be done if you stand there dreaming about lost chances. You've lost yours, and you must accept it. You still have a duty - a debt to repay the young woman that now stood before you, with a network of scars corrupting her visage and black armor covering most of her limbs and torso. Her eyes, the only aspect of her devoid of corruption - except for the pupils, which blazed crimson in the midst of cold purple irises - looking into yours, desperate hope and jaded disbelief warring in them.

Her question earlier was to question if you were, indeed, real. That you were not simply another fevered hallucination or a mimic hewn from the corruption that tainted the very air you breathed inside the barrier. Her sword - an ugly black thing of wicked, serrated murder - was held loosely in one clawed hand, not en garde, and that made it all the sadder. As if she had given up, that in case should you answer in the negative, it would not even surprise her or alarm her. She would not even defend herself.

You told her that yes, you are real. You even dared to touch her - a brief period in which you placed a hand on her vambrace. Her armor felt cold, inhuman, and seemed to shift in an almost biomechanical manner under your touch, like metal scales. You kept your hand there, however, and she seemed to allow it.

A few feet away from you, Malal is still talking to Kyuubey in muted tones. In the middle of the cleared restaurant, Chiaki is sleeping, with Homura and Mirai curled up on either side of her, restful in their own dreams.
In any case, it seems that this fragment of Chiaki is willing to talk.

What do you ask her?

"Who was Madoka to you?"
>>22750687
What was the last thread you were here for?
We're currently playing as Midori inside Murderface's Witch barrier after Jyuubey did some bullshit with Mirai's soulgem that fucked everything up.
Murderface herself was split into four fragments rather than go full Witch, and we've collected three of them in the hope that we can put them back together to get our Senpai back.
The four fragments represent Moemura (pre-contract Homura), Murderface Classic (pre-quest Homura), Despair Homu (pseudowitch Homura) and RibbonHomu (post-series Homura, but with the added fun of wanting to destroy her other fragments out of some misplaced desire to punish herself for her mistakes).
Apparently, canon Madoka Magica plot happened, then Homura got sad that nobody remembered Madoka and undid her wish, bringing Witches back into the world and turning Madoka into Faust, The Most Powerful Witch Ever.
Also, Mirai (who didn't turn into a which like we expected), Malal (who seems to have not actually died completely), and Kharn (who is slightly [x] FLESH OF FALLEN ANGELS at the moment but we told her off so she ran away) are in the barrier with us.
Souji and Misaka are waiting for us to return, and Tiny Pete is on standby for orbital drop.

While waiting for this to kick off, I'm idly wondering about the cosmic hierarchy here. Is Godoka/Faust the most powerful thing in the verse? QB chapter mentioned some of his brethren never waking up from their voyage, probably eaten by some idling gods. I wonder what's their standing in the verse.

>You were never the sentimental kind, but sometimes you wondered what kind of fate befell those who never resurfaced. Those who never took up the call when you finally shook off the teleportation sickness, when the fumes of warp-matter thinned enough that you finally stopped choking on your own bile. Those who never pulsed their response back after the cackling of sleeping gods had finally faded from your ears.

Or maybe if this was closer to Lovecraftian works, Godoka could be trying to keep their attention anywhere but on the humans. So if Homu ever succeeds in getting her to descend, everything suddenly goes to shit because no Godoka to keep everyone relatively safe.

Think in the question section a few threads back, Decu said that her powerlevel was "pretty much maximum". So, either she's the most powerful or very close to it.

In any case, as the personification of Despair, she's pretty much unkillable, though she can definitely be hurt.

You have questions to ask, but her lack of reply worries you, just a bit. Trying to lighten the mood, you tell her that you'll be upset if she keeps wondering if you're actually real or not. This makes her blink in surprise, before she inclines her head in a slow nod.

+Sorry+

Her pulsed apology is fainter, weaker than before, but you think that it's just her way of....trying to sound more human. To be more gentle than the jagged, barbed words that actually hurt to receive earlier. Your head still ached from them, despite how relieved you were that she could talk to you at all.

+Not used to talking for so long. Usually no need to.+ The armored fragment lowers her gaze in an almost sheepish manner, before looking back up at you, her words blossoming carefully in your mind while her lips remained motionless. +Only hunting, only killing. Surviving. No talking+

+I missed you+

You very nearly broke down at that. Even if you didn't hear it with your own ears - the words made known in your thoughts instead, delivered by a mind so wracked and weakened with agony that each word felt like the fragile, half-forgotten memory of a dream - you were told by your sempai that she had missed you. It was one single ray of hope amidst...well, everything that you've known here, everything that you've seen and been made to understand in this barrier. Even when the fragments of her broken psyche seemed entwined to Madoka by sheer fate alone, a part of her thought about you. Remembered you.

This wasn't the time to break down, though, and you collect yourself after a few moments. It's time you asked her some questions. Questions that would hopefully help in getting everyone out of this nightmare.

You ask her, then, about what she remembers. How...she became like this. How she ended up killing everyone.

She looks up at you, uncertain, the corners of her lips twitching slightly, as if fighting the impulse to speak. A small growl leaves her throat, before she pulses her words again, directly to you.

+Procedure. Siberia. I can still remember it.+

The words come painfully, slowly, and her eyes narrow with the effort. +Failure. Procedure failed. Woke up screaming. Souji tried to stop me. Killed him.+ She looks down at a clawed hand. +Was trying to push him out of the way. Slammed him into equipment. Neck broke. Kharn tried, Tiny Pete tried. Killed them. Killed you while you tried to protect Misaka. Tasted flesh of fallen angels, then.+

A sharp inhalation of breath through a mouth of too many teeth. +Killed everything in base. Failsafe there activated, locked down inside. Must have alerted Kyuubey too. When I got out, the entire Officio had mobilized. Sent to kill me. Kyoko. Sayaka. Mami. Everyone. Met them on the snow after I dug myself out.+

Another breath. This time accompanied with a growl. +Killed them. Ripped bodies apart. Crushed soul gem underfoot. Didn't stop. Made snow red.+ The fragment smiles, a tired, weary thing of a smile, and waves a clawed hand in front of her scarred face. +Sayaka's handiwork. She took the longest to die+

But...but the procedure was a success, you tell her after a few moments of silence. It worked. She woke up, although she didn't exactly remember anything. The procedure worked, and she didn't kill anyone upon waking. She even sparred with Kharn and interrogated a Magical Girl directly afterwards. That's the reason you're here. Why everyone is here.

+I don't even know where here is.+ The fragment replies. +I remember...I remember my shield clicking, and then I was here. I was here...years ago.+

How do you respond?

>>BerserkHomu has been in the Barrier for years.

Trust Homura's barrier to do weird things to time.

Hold her hand. Ask her if she met anyone else in this barrier. Explain, as gently as possible, that this Pinky told us that this barrier is a "convergence of time lines" and ask if she saw another version of herself with a ribbon in her hair.

Moemura might still be pre-wish Homura. I mean, it's a slim chance, but it's possible. Her turning into a magical girl here could just be her sort of merging with the base Homu a bit and getting the abilities she might not personally remember getting yet. So she might not actually have the exact knowledge of her own magic yet, even though she might sort of be able to use it.

Hell, the fact that all their shields still have the scar might be indicative that her memory of her exact wish and access to her strongest powers might be sealed away, or damaged.

Not this one.

She obviously is a magical girl since she remembers the golf club on barrel incident. And Moemura only contracts after the death of the first timeline's Madoka. That means she has at least crossed over at least once.

I just can't see a pre-contract moemura talking about bombs and admiring the AK-47.

She will have at least SOME details about her life to offer. Even that would help.

i also believe that we are somewhere at a crossroad now in this quest. It basically depends on how we handle this situation that will determine the ending.

Will Chiaki Matusuda accept her Memories and the Truth about what she pulled as Akemi Homura, embrace what she felt for Madoka and work to undo it?
Will she bury her past as Akemi Homura, accept that she is a different person now, refuse the feelings of Madoka and live her life as Chiaki Matsuda until she expires eventually?

And independently from that stuff above, will she decide to spare Pinky despite all the people that Pinky got killed with ther golden weapon shit and help her fix things?
Or will she actively try to destroy Pinky after all the she pulled once and for all?

1. RibbonHomura, I don't think she will have timestop but she has knowledge of what is in her shield and the experience she has gained in all the thousands of lifetimes.

2. Madoka. Remember she is a still insane goddess-witch, she might be putting Homura back for other reasons.

3. Kharn, bitchslapping her will not work a second time. Madoka might show up with her "To make sure that someone does who they set out to do" or "I see your sanity is whats holding you back, how about I get rid of it for you"

4.The pink haired girl who tired to rip Murderface's heart out". I think its a shard of Godoka who hasn't been assimilated into Faust yet.

That's...you don't know how to reply to that. You know you've only been here a few...hours at the most, you're not that sure, but every moment had been horrifying to say the least. You don't think you'd last an entire day, or even an entire week. But for her to be trapped in here for years...it's not even something you could imagine.

+Not so bad, after the first few months. When you finally give up looking for a way out.+ That smile, again, one of resigned defeat. +Was afraid at first. Then started hunting. Demons. Witches. Monsters. Ghosts. Other things I don't know what to call. They hunt when it's raining.+

She pauses to look at you. +This...this is a Barrier, isn't it?+

You nod. It is.

She nods in return. +I. I always suspected it was. It changes often. It never stays the same. It shows me the Mitakihara I remember one moment, and a ruined one the next. It shows me the people I killed, monsters with their faces, chasing me. Trying to kill me in return.+ It's then that she turns towards the trio of sleeping girls at the center of the restaurant. +This is the first time I saw them, though. Fragments of myself. Or. Am I a fragment of them?+

It's carefully, then, that you explain to her what you think this is. Yes, this is in fact a Barrier. Whose, you're not too sure, yourself. But you believe that it's one that contains her past, her present, and her possible future. You've been told that the only way to solve things is to gather all four of her in one place, and...somehow, things will be fixed. A second chance, where she can see Kharn and Misaka again. Mami, Kyoko, everyone. Even Sayaka.

The armored fragment is silent for a few moments, before her armor creaks as she nods again.

I know how to find her. She will be a hard fight, but I have killed things more. Dangerous than her.+ A grin, this time, showing rows of sharp teeth. +We should wait. Till the rain stops.+

You have no argument about that. Another moment of silence, before you tell her about...well, how she could ask her other selves about her past. About what her life was, before everything happened.

+I will. Perhaps when I am sure. Of what I can ask.+ It's then that she gives you one last look. +A second chance. Thank you, Midori. You met me. At a very strange time in my life.+

That's...that's alright. She doesn't need to thank you. Besides, you...owed her, right?

+I never kept score.+ Her armor creaks as she gives what seems to be her equivalent of a shrug. +It only seemed. Like a good idea at the time. I'm glad. I did.+

That's your sempai for you.

It seems that she wants to spend some time alone for now.

You give the armored fragment another pat on her vambrace - the gesture creating a dull, iron sound as your fingers met cold, black steel - and it's then that you decide to leave her alone for now, to stand sentry at the entrance. She has a lot to figure out, after all, and you didn't want to overwhelm her by asking too many questions in so little time. If she has anything to tell you, she'll tell you herself - that's how your sempai is like, no matter what form she took.

You walk towards Malal, the Culexus still in the middle of repairing her suit. She's still got some repairing to do as it is, with the black leather outfit having quite a number of scars, scorch marks, and other evidence of combat. Her helmet is the worst of it, you reckon - the 'lower jaw' of the skulled headgear all but dented in, with the tinted visor showing hairline cracks on its once-flawless surface.

She's...well, she's doing her repairs with black electrical tape. Maybe that's all it needs, or something? You've seen her glance towards the Warmaster cap on the counter in front of her, an unsubtle movement given away by the helmet she wore.

"Hanegawa." She says just as you approach, not turning to look at you. Taping what appears to be a very serious rip in her suit's left sleeve with a generous amount of tape. "Either you're going to ask me something very stupid, or something very useful. I'm not in the best of moods, so I'd like it if you stuck to the latter."

How do you react?

Malal grunts at your question. "That's not something Hanegawa Midori would usually ask, is it? You've been hanging around with Murderface for too long." A rasp of electrical tape being ripped from its roll, to be wrapped around a split shoulderpad in a crude bandage. "Anyway, I don't think it'll help much. Kharn stopped being a Magical Girl back when she had her accident. Not too sure if she'll be affected with it breaking. If you really want to know, though..."

The Culexus finally turns towards you, before pointing a gloved finger in the middle of her suit's chestplate. "She keeps it in pendant form. Should be right around here." She taps that spot a few times, before going back to her repairs. "That's what I remember, though. Kharn's a careful soul, so she might have hidden it somewhere else. Or maybe she doesn't even bring it around with her anymore, who knows." A moment.

...Alright. That's useful to know. You keep this information tucked away, making sure to remember should it come in handy.

But what about the fragments? They don't seem to be merging at the moment. Does she actually have any idea how this defragmentation of your sempai works? When does the Murderface Voltron start putting itself together?

This time, she snorts at you, the damaged vox-speakers of her helmet turning it into a digitized snarl. "I wasn't kidding when I said that I didn't know. But the reason why they're not merging is clear enough." She jerks her head towards the three fragments. "They don't want to. Not yet, probably. I have a few educated guesses of my own, but they're just guesses, and probably worse than anything you can come up with." She shrugs. "But I suppose that's where you come in, too."

Huh? But you're just here to--

"That's the thing. Do you want to try your luck here with only three fragments? Mind, I'm not so sure of the risks. But you don't want to bother with the fourth fragment, well...you can try convincing them that it'll be fine with just three, rather than all four. I'm sure they'll listen to you. They like you quite a bit. The third one likes you the most, come to that. Funny thing, huh?"

Really? You feel your cheeks heat up at this. Yeah. That's sort of...f-funny.

"If anything, the logic is sound," Malal murmurs as she examines another scorch mark on her other arm. "The ones you've gathered here are distinct enough that they seem to be sentient on their own right. They could end up a good result. On the other hand, well, you get someone worse than the one you first had. If you decide to go with only three, then I'll see what I can do in trying to convince them. If you decide to try and get all four first, well..." She pauses here to glance back at you. "...it's going to be hard, but you'll have a better chance of getting her back in one piece."

The Culexus glances back down at the cap, placing the roll of electrical tape on the counter and picking up the symbol of office with something approaching reverence.

"I made this for her, you know?" Malal says, her damaged vox robbing her voice of its wistful tone. "Had to look up the pattern myself, and everything. The original got lost in a firefight that we nearly didn't survive." She shakes her head slowly. "I told her I found it again, after digging through all the rubble and the bodies. I think she believed me up until the time when she tried to put it on." A chuckle. "It was a perfect fit. The original was a bit too big for her. Sort of loose. The reason why it was lost in the first place." She sighs."She still thanked me for it, though. And wore it since."

Malal places the cap back on the counter. "What do you think, then? Just the three of them, or do you want to gun for four?"

"This is her barrier. Maybe, maybe not." Malal shrugs. "I'll try a full blast if we're really fucked, but I'm hoping it won't come to that." A moment. "But yeah, if you get them to merge, then all you have to do is have the amalgamation ported out. I'll do what I can to get Kharn out of here, and then I'll collapse the Barrier on whatever's left so it dissipates when you're back in the real world."

But what about her? What about Mirai? Aren't you getting out of here, too?

Malal seems to blink at you from behind her helmet's cracked visor. "And go back to what? We don't belong out there anymore. You do. Murderface does. Kharn does." She shakes her head. "It's how it works."

You pale at this, and turn back to where Mirai is busy cuddling up with a faintly-snoring Chiaki.

There...there has to be something that you can do, right...?

PLANNING TIME!

We've got three main issues here:

1: Recombining Homu (either 3/4 or 4/4).
This is the trickiest one. As far as what Malal has said, "They don't want to. Not yet, probably."
We need to get the first three to talk to each other, and get them to rejoin, if they want to, as well as the fourth. The easiest way to get it to work is to start with "you'll probably die if you don't do this." and add "it'll be painful for her and you to be left out." And go from there. After that, the EXTRA hard part is getting RibbonHomu to go along with it. I think I want to rely on Pinky for that to talk to her, since she's the only one who'll last more than two seconds. Asking Pinky to bring RibbonHomu to returning, so she can have one last chance to fix things? That would work. "If you don't rejoin the others, you won't be able to fix everything."

2: Rescuing Kharn
This is the unknown factor. If she jumps in ??? probably someone will die. I say throw Souji at her, and then move away. If she goes to kill him, just teleport her out while she's attached to Tiny Pete. (hopefully this shouldn't fuck the teleporter). Other than that, if that fails, just stay out of her way and leave her for dead, or take her out.

3: Rescuing Mirai/Malal
This is probably the easiest bit. Ask Mirai if she wants to escape, and just teleport her soul gem with us, get a spare body to go. Malal, if she doesn't want to come, screw 'er. If we really want to be darstardly, we'll nick her soul gem before we teleport out.

Anyone see any problems with these plans so far?

>>22754085
>2: Rescuing Kharn

>>22754085

We shouldn't really count on Pinky being our ally. While she will want to recombine Homura, she might recombine her as another goddess-witch like herself. Not to mention that she can easily kill us and take the fragments with her. Then again Berserk Homura is going to give pinky pause.

Kharn, I doubt getting angry and bitchslapping her is going to work a second time. The reason why Kharn didn't just chainaxe us the first time was that she was surprised at the gentle, shy Midori getting angry. Not to mention that Pinky might be accompanying her when he see her the second time. However I have no idea on how to rescue Kharn.

Finally, I am not sure if it is going to be that simple with just taking Mirai's soul gem. But if we do rescue her, what would we do with her? I doubt she is as eager to which incubators as Mirdori is.

1. I don't think bringing Madoka into this is a good idea at all. While she cares deeply for Homura, she has her own agenda, and that involved getting into a fight with BerserkHomu and sicing Kharn on us. I still think using Midori's illusions to calm down RibbonHomu is our best bet.

2. I think she already left.

3. Sinking feeling that this side mission cannot be accomplished. Malal and Mirai are nothing more than echoes.

>Finally, I am not sure if it is going to be that simple with just taking Mirai's soul gem. But if we do rescue her, what would we do with her? I doubt she is as eager to which incubators as Mirdori is.

It's that or die here. If she's not succumbed to despair, hopefully she won't be suicidal.

All we can offer her is a second chance, after all. Up to her to take that chance.

>We shouldn't really count on Pinky being our ally. While she will want to recombine Homura, she might recombine her as another goddess-witch like herself.

Eh. If she was able to do so on her own, she wouldn't have asked us to come along. I'm banking on she'd prefer an intact Homura to persuade - if we rely on Malal's comment that the fragments have to WANT to rejoin, all the force in the world won't do it, only someone who can reach out and touch her without clawed hands.

What I meant is that Mirai is more loyal to the saints then Midoiri was. If she does change from Jyuubey to Kyuuby can she face the prospect of fighting and possibly killing her former friends?

>Eh. If she was able to do so on her own, she wouldn't have asked us to come along.

Given that Jyuubey literally puppeted Mirai, got her butchered, and then flooded her gem with despair as a last ditch self-destruct attack, I would not be to surprised if Mirai was willing to ditch Jyuubey. The only problem is making sure she ditches Jyuubey for Kyuubey rather than just dying outright. We just need to convince her that continuing to live is better than dying pointlessly, perhaps via power of friendship or something.

She can do that at any time, though. Everything you suggested here seems stupid to me.

>2: Rescuing Kharn
Too many IFs. While it might be a good Idea to get him here I somehow think that it will end in "Nuuuh, then I shall die with my love in here, durr"-Moment and we still might need Souji later alive.

Should Kharn appear again we will need to try to talk to her again.
Either that, or merlin ourself to look like Souji and BlackRockHomu to look like TinyPete so we might bullshit her that Souji came here himself. This might either end well or utterly horrible.
On one hand Kharn is a complete utter retard that will fall for such an Illusion, on the other hand, maybe Pinky-Powers might allow her to see through it.

>3: Rescuing Mirai/Malal
If her Soulgem exploded like we think it did that plan goes down the drain.

If there is no way to somehow magically store her into our or Chiaki`s Gem for some time the only alternative might be to contact Madoka and ask her if she can do something about it, being a powerful cosmic Meguca/Witch/God-Abomination.

> She's way into friendship, crazy as she might be.

This was pretty much the Idea.
I know Pinky is bad stuff. I know that relying on Pinky is also bad stuff. She is crazy, she is unpredictable and all the shit Midori and especially Chiaki`s been throught is partly her fault.

But at this point we don`t have any alternatives. We can try to save Malal and Mirai in a way we don`t like or we can leave them to die.
Midori might be a somewhat slefish person, especially if you remember her interactions with people other than Chiaki but I don`t think that she would leave her friends or friends of her friends to die here.

Isn`t it said that love brings out the best and worst in people? Maybe this is it? Maybe Chiaki managed exactly that with Midori. Midori was saved by Chiaki from a rather unpleasent fate, so, who knows, maybe that influenced her to also try herself a bit more.

At least since she`s stuck in this barrier she`s been more of Miracle Midori than ever before.

And Miracle-fucking-Midori does not leave anyone behind.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/31/13(Thu)20:32 No.22905526

You are a Magical Girl, and you're being asked to make a choice. One that's...well, you won't say it's the biggest one that you're being asked to make, so far, but it kind of up there. You're not sure if a bigger, more important one will come along in the future.

Do you cut your losses now and go home, or risk everything to go for the last fragment of your haunted, broken friend?

You've gathered three of her so far, each one found with a lot of running, a lot of fighting, and a lot of shouting. You've dodged death more times here than you've ever had in your entire pathetic career as a Callidus. You're not sure if you've got enough luck left to dodge more.

But then again, you didn't exactly luck out, did you? You've managed to calm down an insane, tearful Witch from tearing everything apart in a tantrum. You've managed to bring an armored berserker out of her rage while she had you at bladepoint, with the rest of your allies dying or unconscious in the mud. You've slapped a bloodthirsty maniac armed with gigantic chainaxes into seeing sense - for what could be the first time in her life (and that was quite satisfying to do, if you'll be fair to yourself).

Three fragments. You've been told by a Culexus - who should, by all rights, be long dead - that three would be enough to bring your sempai back into relative sanity. Out of this nightmare. Out this this nested barrier that you've grown not only to hate and despise, but also to pity. No twisted landscape formed out of a ruined Magical Girl's hopes and dreams, this was a graveyard of memories, of hope desperately clung to before being torn away by bloody claws.

Of course, leaving with all three...that means leaving behind not only the Culexus, who seems to be cheerfully resigned to her fate, but also your friend, Mirai Wakaba. A friend that you've thought had Witched Out - but she was still here, still whole. At least, that's what she tells you.

"Come on, Hanegawa." Malal says to you. "Decide. This shouldn't be that hard of a choice."

[]We're finding all of them, including the crazy one.

Now, how do we talk an insane, homicidal, and just-shy-of-witching-out despairing meguca into not killing her other selves and to cease to exist?

Pinky hinted that she may have seen her pure self in this barrier somewhere. If that wasn't a familiar created to torment Madoka, she may be key to persuading RibbonHomu to not go apeshit and try to kill everyone.

We might want to think of a way to talk ribbonhomu down. Wanting to save them all is well and good, but if things go south and she starts gunning down fragments, we'll have even less than we started with. You didn't even need to think about it. You're going to find the last one and bring her back along with the other three, no mater where it takes. Sure, it's a safe bet, but...without every single one, it just won't be your sempai, anymore. All her parts need to be there, even the ones that make you want to slap her sometimes.

"You...you're not really smart, are you?" Malal says after a moment, but the smile is evident in her words, even as the ruined vox of her skulled helm steals all warmth from her voice. "Then again, we're not meant to be smart, aides like us. We're supposed to be there for them when they need us the most. Smarts never really figure into it." She looks down at the hat in her gloved hands, turning it around. "We're not supposed to abandon them even when common sense tells us to. It's just that simple."

She turns back to you in a slow nod. "We'll set out as soon as the rain stops. I know where the last one is." The Culexus glances at the broken fragment standing guard at the entrance of the ramen restaurant.

"If my suspicions are correct, we'll have a horde waiting for us. It's a good thing you managed to calm that one down enough to see reason - she'll be key in getting us a clear shot at the fourth without too many casualties."

A horde...? She means familiars, right?

"...Maybe. Who knows." A chuckling sound, rasping and bitter, erupts from the depth of her helmet. "It's going to be a bloodbath, but maybe you'll get the good ending you want."

How do you respond? The rain seems to be ebbing for now, but it'll be a while until you can go. You can ask a few more questions, or try and get some rest before you set out.

[]Ask about something else.

How can we get the fourth fragment to merge with the others if she doesn't want to co-operate? Do we just knock her out and have the other three pick up the slack, or something?

Also, would it be a good idea to convince the three fragments that merging together would be the best idea here before we set out for the fourth fragment? If worse comes to worse, we may have to make do with a 75% clear.

The question seems to fall on deaf ears as the Culexus continues to examine the hat in her hands, gloved fingertips tracing the gold-thread braid at the rim. As if trying to memorize the entire thing down to its tiniest detail by mere touch alone, for fear of forgetting them once she'd let go of it.

You make to ask the question again, but she replies before you could speak.

"Once." Malal replies, not looking up from the hat. The confirmation making your heart skip a single beat. You keep quiet, hoping that your silence would be enough of a request for her to continue.

The contemplative Culexus seems to catch on easily enough. "I wouldn't call it much of a meeting, anyway. But I was there, along with Kharn and Murderface. I was treating them to some after-work ramen. We were all sitting here, at the counter." She taps a gloved hand on the wooden countertop. "You were helping your father with the tail end of his shift. Kharn was making a racket, as usual, and Murderface was keeping to herself." Another chuckling sound. "You couldn't keep your eyes off of her no matter what you tried. Your father had to pull you to the side to talk to you, get you to focus."

...Well, you remember that, but...you don't exactly remember seeing her...

"Don't feel bad. That happens whenever you meet a Culexus the first time. Sometimes your mind glosses over it, erasing us from the background. Not your fault, and certainly not intentional on our end. It's just one of those things." She shrugs. "Never met you after that."

...Right. And what about Mirai? What about her Soul Gem?

"She showed it to you, didn't she? That should be enough. Any way, it's not my place to talk about it." A seemingly uncomfortable clearing of the throat. "If you want to get her out of this too, then you've got your work cut out for you. All I'm hoping for is getting those two idiots out of here before too long." Malal shakes her head. "Being in a barrier for far too long tends to do nasty things to your perception."

She turns away from you, placing the hat back on the counter, and resumes her repairs on her suit.

It seems like it's time to leave the Culexus alone. You do so, questions still unanswered, but nonetheless unforgotten.

You make your way quietly back to the three sleeping girls - Mirai now all but curled around the fragment that most closely resembled your sempai, one arm resting across Chiaki's waist in an almost possessive hug. Homura is hugging Chiaki's arm to her, seemingly for warmth, face buried in the other girl's shoulder.

It's almost cute, if you try to forget about the current circumstances.

You sink down into a nearby chair, leaning your tired frame against the back rest. You might as well get as much rest as you can, and something tells you that this could be the last chance to do so.

It's fine, you think to yourself. Just as long as you can save everyone. You won't mind.

You wake up without any memory of falling asleep - and strangely enough, you're moving. Or rather, being carried by someone moving. Someone who smells faintly of whisky, and fire, and hate, and blood.

You open your eyes after rubbing out the grit that had gathered in the corners, and manage to get your bearings after a few moments.

You're...being carried by Chiaki. While you were sleeping, she'd picked you up and hauled you onto her back, piggyback style. Even when you were a couple of inches taller than her, and...well, just a bit heavier (although you'll be quick to correct anyone who implies anything bad that it's just because you've a healthier diet than cigarettes and whisky).

The restaurant seems to have been left far, far behind you. You seem to also be heading towards the outskirts of the city, from the looks of things. Your hastily-assembled party traversing the empty highway on foot, with you at the center. The armored fragment is at point, each footstep clanking heavy with armor. Malal and Mirai on either side of you, the former twirling a crowbar absent-mindedly with one hand, the other resting her silver broadsword on her shoulder. Homura, grasping a shotgun, is bringing up the rear, and she brightens up considerably as she notices you looking at her.

"A-ah, you're awake, Midori-san," She chimes. "We...we set off while you were still asleep. The rain had already stopped, but we couldn't wake you up then, so we decided to go ahead. We didn't want to leave you behind, though, so...um...." She gestures with a free hand towards you, cheeks reddening.

"Kinda heavy," You hear Chiaki grunt. "Maybe cut back on the instant ramen a bit, eh, Midori-chan?"

How do you react?

You find yourself paling at your sempai's words, and it's with your cheeks positively burning that you all but hop off her back, nearly stumbling in the process of getting your legs back underneath you. S-she should be ashamed, you blurt out in an embarrassed stammer. You've never touched the stuff, and you will never as long as you live! Besides, you're not heavier, you're just more well-endowed--

You manage to slap a hand over your mouth moments before you could say anything more humiliating. The party, as it is, had already stopped in its tracks, with Malal looking on in quiet silence, and Mirai hiding a smile behind a gloved hand. Even the armored fragment was smiling, showing too many teeth in a scarred grin that almost looks cute.

"No argument about that," Chiaki chuckles. "Checked it myself, after all. I hope you didn't mind. You were sleeping then, and I was curious."

...Wait, what? She checked...?

She nods. "Well, the me before did. At the base. After Mirai. Our room." She pauses for a moment, grinning. "Just like Mami-san, right?" She turns towards the armored fragment, who nods.

"Bigger," She lets out in a rumbling avalanche of syllables. "Softer."

Despite your mounting embarrassment, you manage - just barely - to ask Chiaki about her remembering. When you came upon her at the restaurant, she barely remembered you, didn't she...?

"Things are starting to trickle in, I think. Some are coming up. Like how you remember dreams. Pieces, all of 'em jumbled up." The girl you consider your sempai smiles again, awkward this time. "I think I might've been a bit too harsh to you, back then. I'm sorry. I think I'm still...hung up on Iori at that point."

It's then that you feel a tug on your sleeve. You turn, and look at a nearly tearful Homura.

"M-Midori-san? Do I...do I really turn out to be that much of a pervert...?"

How do you respond?

A...a pervert? N-no, not a pervert. Just...honest, you manage to reassure the distraught fragment of your sempai's shattered psyche. Someone honest and not that all concerned about what people may think of her. Yes. That's it.

Besides, you've only seen her read a single book of debatable repute, but that's more due to the subject material than anything. A-and at least she doesn't know about the anime, right...?

"A-anime...?" Homura looks up at you tearfully. "What anime...?"

LET'S GET GOING! YES. You need to get going. Fourth fragment and all that. You shouldn't be dilly-dallying like this!

"We know," Chiaki chuckles again as the party once more continues on its way, with you and your sempai at the center of the loose formation. "Um. Well. We may be a bit angry and disappointed at you, but it's more flattering than anything. Just don't bring up when we're drinking." She pauses. "Oh, and probably stop us from drinking so much, too."

You'll...you'll try your best. Yes.

"Thanks." The smile, again, and you can't help but...want so badly to take this particular fragment home with you. Somehow. Wishing that she'd stay like this when you finally get her out of here. "You're...someone special, Midori.

The skies above you turn darker as you and your group finally make your way out of Mitakihara. The road ends and turns into what looks like a well-beaten path, up to a grassy hill - and the moment you take the first step into the path that all sound seems to disappear. A funereal silence blanketing everything, muffling it.

You look forward and see the graves in the horizon. Jutting out of the grassy ground like broken teeth. Some of them shattered, some of them rendered unrecognizable by weather and time, others seemingly just erected moments before. Beyond them lie actual mausoleums, housed graves, clustered around each other like low-income housing.

You were walking into a graveyard. A veritable city of the dead.

"Well, if this isn't dramatic." Malal grunts. "She's close. Stay alert, everyone, and look out for--"

The roar of chainaxe motors cuts her off, the mechanical growl making every one in your group reach for their weapons. You found your hand straying to the Teleport Beacon on your wrist, thumb nearly pressing down on the button that would summon a spiked giant with a really big hammer.

"Idiot's still here," The Culexus grumbles underneath her breath, as the roar idles into silence. "No one attack her when you see her. She's mine."

"No," The armored berserker growls in reply. "Mine."

"Don't you be an idiot, too," Malal snaps back. "You've got the rest to worry about. Everyone else protects Midori until we can take the last one down."

You shake your head at this, before calling Souji up once more with the Teleport Beacon. Trying your best to keep your voice in a reasonable level as your ragtag party continues to venture deeper into a mass graveyard. The air so thick with the promise of an abrupt, violent death that you couldn't help but hold your breath.

"Midori? What's going on?" Souji's voice is nearly unintelligible from the static rasping all coherence from his words, but you manage to understand him all the same. "Do you need Tiny Pete now? He's been ready three hours ago. Set for maximum fear and awe. Misaka's spent the entire morning fitting him with this huge autocannon--"

Right, well, that's good to know. That's very good. And you'll be sending for him soon enough. But you may be facing Kharn again, and you're not sure how to get to her this time. You doubt a couple of slaps and some harshly-worded advice will work a second time.

"...No, it won't. If I know Kharn, she'll be smarting right now, and she'll want to get back at you the one way she knows how. Pride thing." A sigh. "You want me to get in there with you, right? I can...I can do that, sure. Tiny Pete can take one passenger. His controls aren't too complicated, actually, even Misaka could--"

He does realize, though, what happens to normal people when they're stuck inside a Nightmare?

"I do. That doesn't matter." He chuckles, lamely. "I shouldn't have bought into that sacrificial bullshit Kharn fed me. She's getting out of there even if it kills me." A moment. "We're getting married right away if we survive this. I don't care what she says."

"When, not if." Malal barks, amusement clear in her vox-ravaged voice. "Idiot."

"I heard that." Souji laughs. "A-anyway. Er. Anything else you want, Midori? I could--" It's then that his words seem to cut short. "...Holy shit, where the fuck are you? You've just disappeared off the radar. The beacon's active, but it's telling me that you're dead. Gone. Wiped off the face of--"

If he's trying to scare you, then he's not doing a very good job of it.

"N-no, I'm not! Christ, I'm not--"

You tell him to just get ready as soon as you need him. You kill the connection, and you turn to see Malal nodding at you, seemingly impressed.

"He'll be handy once we're in the thick of it," The Culexus replies. "Summon whatever Tiny Pete is, get him to grab Kharn and then port out of this mess. That leaves us with one less idiot to worry about."

That's the plan, you reply, before transforming again in a brief flash of light. Your costume once more replacing your clothes, falling into place. The arm dagger resting heavily on your arm in its leather housing, its blade snapping out when you make a fist with your hand.

You've just had quite enough of this place, you grumble.

You want things back the way they were.

The path leads you into a clearing. A wide clearing, almost arena-like, surrounded by a ring of prominent black gravestones. Twenty of them, each marked with a roman numeral in golden lettering. No names, just numbers.

And in front of those gravestones - Magical Girls. But silhouettes of them, completely black, from their faces to their clothes. Shadows transposed into reality. Each one of them grasping a golden weapon, the only offset to their forms. One of them, seemingly wearing something with too many frills, holds two golden scythes in both hands. The shadow next to her holding two golden revolvers. Another, a tall, well-armored form, is holding a large golden hammer, easily bigger than Tiny Pete's. A pair of massive gauntlets. A katana. A broadsword.

A flawless costume, untouched by dirt or grime, nor sporting the usual bloodstains you sometimes had to point out to your sempai or else she wouldn't even notice them.

Skin smooth and perfect, unscarred, unmarked by injury or abuse.

Eyes devoid of corruption, a cool clean purple, hard as shards of amethyst.

Black hair, long and straight, spreading out behind her like two backswept raven wings, in subdued mimicry of...well, her real wings. Angel's wings. With golden feathers that shone with such ferocity that they were almost blinding.

And her shield. Unscarred, whole. And also made with the same gold that armed the shadows around you, that sprouted from her back in two massive feathered projections.

Kharn is...well, Kharn is there, too. But as a ruined, bleeding thing. Facedown in the dirt, in a rapidly-expanding pool of her own blood. Her chainaxes on either side of her, inactive, dead. Her severed arm - torn directly from the shoulder - is still holding onto Gorefather, the black fleshmetal fingers still locked around the handle.

"She's still alive, but not for long." The fourth fragment says, her voice barely above a murmur, but still managing to carry. "She tried to live up to her name one last time. Useless thing."

A ripple of movement courses through the three fragments, as if in sympathy. The armored one narrows her eyes, a leopard-wet growl rumbling in her throat.

"Thank you for bringing them all here, Midori." It's then that Chiaki - no, Akemi Homura - gives you a smile - a cold smile, a murderer's smile. One that never even reached her eyes. "It makes it easier to dispose of them, this way. I apologize if I had to make you go through the trouble of herding them all into one place."

If there is anything I have learned in my travels across the barriers, it is that many things may change the nature of a magical girl. Whether regret, or love, or revenge, or fear - whatever you believe can change the nature of a man, can. I've seen belief move agencies, make magical girls stave off death, and turn an insane-with-grief fragment's heart half-circle. This entire barrier has been constructed from belief. Belief damned a girl, whose heart clung to the hope that another loved her when she departed for the stars. Once, it made a girl seek godhood and achieve it. And it has made a posturing fragment think it is something more than a part of sempai.

Are we doing this? Is this happening?
>I don't see how [stoic determination in the face of seemingly suicidal odds] fits Midori's character.
Putting aside that time she slapped Kharn the Betrayer in full on murder mode, or when she held on to Chiaki during a Flesh of Fallen Angels episode (while getting carved up for her trouble).

While we're at it, out to ruin "everyone's" fun. Responses. Midori's character, with a lower-case C. No need for a `, or even a ', for that matter, in "BadEnded," which should probably be two words. You fail to see many things.

In light of that, let me clear something up: I cast the vote for saying "you're getting a happy ending whether you like it or not," and I didn't cast it with the intent to ruin MGNQ or everyone's fun. I cast it because I felt it was in Midori's character, appropriate to the moment, appropriate to the setting, appropriate to the story.

Many people, many shares, many directions. It's a big boardroom.

As someone who hasn't voted yet, I would like you to think of it this way, and keep "And Miracle Midori doesn't back down." in mind.

Midori loves Homura. Even though she knows she can and will never, ever have her love returns. Right now, she is facing Homuras darkest parts, and has already tripped ALL of the death flags. Right now, Miracle Midori needs to fucking shine as brightly as possible, because otherwise, the one she cares about so much will end up completely offing herself. It's Do or Die, right now.

On the subject of voting: Midori has illusion powers, yeah? Might want to start thinking about using them extremely subtly, to the point where nobody notices they are being used. Or at least, make sure RibbonHomu doesn't notice until it's too late.

You're missing the point. You have every right to disagree with me. You could believe with all your heart the one true path through this problem is Midori taking a scrunchie out of her hair and flicking it menacingly at Ribbon Homura. You can vote for it, defend it to the last, fight tooth and nail to say your vote is the best vote ever.

But the moment you start telling me I'm trying to ruin the story by voting for what I believe is best, you're just being an asshole. This is the point: We can disagree. We can disagree vehemently. That doesn't mean I'm trying to run the story into the ground.

You have also missed the v key for "have." And in that context, situation is lowercase.

"Get fucked." You spit into her face, and everything went to hell right then and there.

No arguments. No negotiations. No speeches.

None of those. She'd made her case clear enough, leaving Kharn there for you to find. For you to see. For her to die slowly, face down in the dirt, with her weapons just barely out of reach. Your sempai - your real sempai - would have killed Kharn outright. It wouldn't have been a clean death, but it was a quick one, a good one. She'd never prolong it just to make a point.

You wanted to ask her why - why she needed to resort to such murder, such callous disregard for life - but the question died in your throat as you saw the utterly heartless, soulless conviction in her eyes. No spark of hope or warmth left in this fragment. Not even despair. Only a hatred, as pure and as cold as sharpened steel, honed into weaponized malice. A determination that didn't so much as burn but blazed, burning everything else in sight. No mercy. No kindness. Not even the merest illusion of her former self.

This was your sempai, twisted into something...despicable. Terribly beautiful, breathtaking in her elegance and grace, but coldly inhuman. Not even the armored fragment was this much of a monster.

It was here, then, mere moments after you've spat the acid-laced epithet, that the shadows moved from their graves. Each one lifting their weapons of golden murderous insanity and stepping forward, their purpose obvious.

The fourth fragment simply smirking as she stepped back from Kharn - and wings flaring, turned around to leave. But not after saying something that echoed in your ears, despite how she only murmured them in a breathy whisper. Something that made the other members of your ragtag party form up around you, weapons drawn, teeth bared, each one ready to murder.

"Kill them," she'd said, in a voice with the patience and calmness of a saint. "Kill them all."

You've never been in a full-out, mass engagement. The ill-fated encounter with Mirai, that was the first time you've even gotten into a firefight of that magnitude. And it was you, your sempai, and Kharn against Mirai and her familiars. Nothing compared to this in scale or in ferocity.

An explosion of concussive force. The roar of the armored fragment, loud, wet, and hungry. Malal screeching from her vox-speaker as the lines of her suit glowed a flickering crimson, filling the air with a teeth-itching whine, nearly drowning out the gunfire. More roars, bestial and deep, the death-scent of the graveyard briefly muffled by the smell of wet fur, anger, and blood. Mirai and her bears, each one chained to her will, driven by her own anger. Driven by her own hate.

You would have heard all of this, if you hadn't been screaming Chiaki's name as you yourself charged forward.

Towards that last piece of your fragmented sempai's psyche. Wanting no more to punch that arrogant smirk off her face, and get her to see sense, get her to see what kind of madness she herself had wrought.

It's then that something smashes into your side - the crunch of your ribs all too obvious above your racing heartbeat - and you hear Homura scream your name as everything goes dark once more. Your senses leaving you - first sight, then sound, then everything else.

You tried, right? You tried your best. Maybe it wasn't meant to work out. Maybe...maybe someone else will pick up where you left off. Surely they can't just leave your sempai there, can they? They can't.

You feel tears pricking at your eyes, but you can't even lift your hands up to wipe them away.

You can't even shout for help. For someone to help your sempai. To save her from herself.

And it's then that you hear it. In the inky blackness, you hear a voice.

+ Midori? +

...Madoka?

How do you respond?

Frankly I agree that we should be trying to work our illusion mojo while we call for Madoka's help, at least so we can FIND a way to be more helpful in the fight. But just going 'Ouendan! Ouendan! Ouendan!' and hoping Midori will suddenly become a combat badass isn't going to do much.

The darkness is getting heavier, just as you feel yourself growing colder and colder by the moment. Your breath leaving your body in ever-shortening gasps. You're dying, that much is clear. But you force what is left inside of you into that one last plea for help, putting everything in that last burning, searing pulse. Hoping that Madoka would be able to hear it, wherever she was.

+ PLEASE HELP ME HELP SEMPAI +

And the moment you let it loose is the moment that the darkness is interrupted by a single orb of light. Warming you against the cold, banishing the inky blackness away.

The orb takes a shape. Formless for a few moments, nebulous. Before solidifying into the familiar form of Kaname Madoka - her gloved fingers bloody, along with the front of her dress. But where her eyes was once a sharklike black, from pupil to sclera - they were now amber, the color of honey. A soft, saintly smile curling her lips as she carefully takes your hands and pulls you up into a sitting position.

"This...this is one of my good moments," She says, each word whispered but reaching your deafened ears clear as a bell. "It won't last. But we can save her. We can save everyone."

It's then that she lets go of your hand to draw her own up, palm skyward. Your own crimson Soul Gem, slightly darkened, manifesting there with a small chiming sound.

"I'll...I'll need to borrow this for just a few seconds." You look at her, and she's crying. You briefly wonder why, before it dawns on you. And strangely enough, you don't...mind too much.

It's for her, isn't it?

Look at this nigga, thinking sheer will and the power of love mean jack shit in MGNQ.

Midori shouldn't have told the boss of this game to fuck herself, and she definitely shouldn't have run into a pack of golden murder shadows. This is not a universe where you just 'get up'.

Unless you're a Homura. Which is what we're fighting. Think about that.

Either way, not doing the one thing Midori was there for, that nobody else could do - that is to say, not even trying to talk her down - was undeniably retarded, yep, and we definitely should have jumped on the illusion train. Maybe this is salvageable, though.

I, I honestly doubt this is salvageable. I think the moment you all chose to confront the final fragment, the killer without any mercy, that it was probably sealed.

Even coming in with illusion ready to go and opening up with the first shot? Might've only made the fight longer.

Now, Deculture could throw us all for a loop, he could not, and well, either way is fine by me. But honestly, I think Midori was a dead girl walking when it was chosen to confront the fourth fragment.

Mind you, I didn't vote, have only been reading, so this is just speculation and musing on my part.

It was the attitude we established toward the whole thing by giving Midori a...well, wildly out-of-character line to start with. Decu had to write a reason for Midori to act that violently and that was the logical extension of it.

Well I think this is kind of fitting after so many trials and tribulations, we have done well to survive this far and minority was originally a bad guy of the week, so she went beyond it and yes while she may die it is also noted that some people wanted more noir, and while this is bitter it kind of make sense. Though I agree going get fucked was extremely stupid but who knows there is a chance of her surviving maybe?

Some speculation on the despair transfer, if that is what Madoka has in mind:

If Chiaki still has the link to Wally from the procedure, it may be possible for her to try to siphon off any corruption from Midori's soul gem and reroute it. If what Kharn said earlier about soul gem attunement still holds, this may not be so crazy of an option, if the merging can occur quickly enough.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You've imagined worse, certainly.

You imagined pain, lots of it, the searing sort that took out your legs from underneath you and reduced you to a crying, pleading mess. You imagined that old cliche coming true - your life flashing in front of your eyes - before everything came to an abrupt and sudden stop, your own internal universe shutting off. And while you were never the religious sort, a tiny bit of you hoped that you would open your eyes afterwards and see someone to...guide you to wherever you were supposed to go. Eternal paradise, fiery damnation or simply oblivion - you wouldn't mind.

Just so long as you wouldn't be alone when it happened.

It would really, really suck dying alone.

Well, it's a good thing Madoka's here with you.

You just wish she'd stop crying.

"Midori," You hear her call your name again, hervoice tickling your ear, her breath warm against your face. The pinprick sensation of her tears plinking against your own cheek as she tries her best not to cry too hard, like kids do whenever they're trying to be brave.

"Midori, stay with me. I need you to focus. I need...I need to use your Soul Gem for a few moments. Midori, don't close your eyes--"

It's not like you haven't accepted death, or the fact that it'll come to you sooner than most people. You knew what you were getting into when you took that contract.

When Juubey came up to your room's windowsill and offered you the wish, you couldn't have accepted the contract fast enough.

You wanted to make a difference. In your own way, you wanted to be just like the girl you always fantasized about being. You didn't want to simply BE a ramen chef's daughter. You didn't want to simply BE Hanegawa Midori, future owner of Hanegawa's Ramen Restaurant, with flour on her hands and the smell of meat broth in her hair.

You wanted to be special.

You wanted to be Magical Midori, and you wanted to be loved.

Well, your wish was granted, for what it was.

Two out of three isn't all that bad.

>>23043093

You desperately want to close your eyes and sleep, but...something doesn't want you to. You were doing something, earlier, and...it's important. It's important to you. You don't remember it, but it's very important...

"Midori, please. I...I need you. Homura-chan needs you." Another sob. "N-no, not Homura, not anymore. Chiaki needs you."

Chiaki. Matsuda Chiaki. Your sempai.

Yes. Yes, you need to...you need to save her. From herself. From the nightmare she'd put herself in.

"I need your permission." Madoka murmurs. "I can't...I can't do anything otherwise."

...She doesn't need to ask. Doesn't she?

OK, this is one hell of a situation we got ourselves into. Anyway, there is nothing we can do about it now and I am not going to give up on getting Midori back alive until Deculture writes something to the effect of “Midori Hanegawa is dead” Well right now everything is in Madoka Kaname’s hands. She is the one with the power to make this a happy ending, or a bittersweet one.

We will have to give her a good reason to keep up alive, better reasons then “We are party members” or “I hugged you and stopped everything from going to shit”.

There is one thing we have gained while travelling through Homura’s memories that Madoka is going to be interested in. And that is knowledge of Madoka and Homura’s combined past. While we don’t have complete knowledge; we don’t know about Homura’s timetravelling, we don’t know how Madoka and Homura were separated, we don’t know how Madoka became a goddess witch, and we don’t know how Murderface came to be. However we are the only person who knows Madoka’s true name, we are the only person who knows that Madoka cares deeply about Homura, and we are the only person who knows that Homura sacrificed everything to bring Madoka back.

So I propose

>[x]We make a deal with Madoka for our life.

“Isn’t there another way? Homura would be sad to learn that I gave my life to save her. Just like she was sad when you had to go and she was forced to live on.”

That will grab Madoka’s attention. Next we need to put forth the deal.

“Sempai has amnesia. She might not recover all her memories even after we put back together. She won’t believe you when you tell her that you shared a past with her. But she will believe me. Please, if you can make it so I can live to see my sempai recombined, I will make her remember the bond you once shared. I will not let her forget you, Madoka. Nor will I let her think of you as only her enemy"

+ Do what you need to + You pulse to her, unable to say the words yourself, feeling your ability to even breathe recede with every passing moment. The cold heaviness in your chest spreading out further, deeper. + Do what you need to save sempai +

"I'll...I'll do everything I can, Midori-chan, I promise." Madoka manages a smile through her tears, as she brings your Soul Gem close to the glowing amber one pinned to her throat. The bauble shining warmly, even with the dried blood crusting over it. "While I still can."

You work up a smile of your own, although it amounts to a mere twitching of the corners of your lips. You squint slightly as both Soul Gems begin to glow quite brightly, as if trying to overwhelm the other - and it's with what little left of your consciousness that you pulse out what should be your last words to her.

You open your eyes once more, and all you see is fire.

Not the usual amber flame you're used to, though. Nor is it the unnatural crimson fire, red as blood and as hot as plasma, that you've seen Kharn coat both Gorechild and Gorefather with.

No, they were purple. The same color as your sempai's eyes, the same flame that gouted from her left eye when she willingly held a golden weapon against the Betrayer in a training session that seems so long ago, now. The same flame that sparked from the armored fragment's glaring, scarred visage, and the same fire that now seemed to fill the entire sky above you.

The fire dissipates with a predatory roar from the heavens - and it's only then that you could finally see what's in front of you. And what you see is a war - a war with two sides doing their level best to murder each other. One side fighting with grim, silent determination usually reminiscent of machines - the other fighting with tears in their eyes and acid in their hearts, uncaring of how much they hurt, how much they bled. Fighting because there was nothing else but to fight and make the other side suffer just as much as they are suffering now.

Complete and utter bedlam. To your left, Mirai is screaming as she decapitates a caped shadow wielding a massive golden broadsword, the weapon easily dwarfing her own. She splits the remains in two with a downward stroke a heartbeat later, before disappearing once more into the burning melee. Her familiars forming a ring of snarling, roaring death around her, blood frothing from their maws.

Malal - her suit now all but burned right through, showing scorched flesh and even bone, the visor half-shattered - barely dodges the crescent-moon blades of twin golden scythes, before pouncing on the shadowy wielder and driving the tempered prong of her crowbar where its mouth should be. A ragged cry and a horrible wrenching sound, and the top of the shadow's skull comes tearing away with a wet, juicy crack.

She is screaming something as she points towards you - and it's then that you see something break away from the melee. A towering, spiked behemoth, awash in flame, its armored plates blackened by gunshots and carbon scoring. The oversized barrels attached to its arm with screaming bronzed demon-mouths glowing red-hot, while the massive hammer in its other hand crackled with a deadly force. With barely a grunt of effort, the hammer is heaved up and over its shoulder - before it is tossed forward with a roar of servos. The towering maul spinning end over end, before smashing right into the horde of shadows, scattering some and pulverizing others.

It turns towards you, the eyeslits of its tusked elephantine helm blazing with an inner crimson light - and with heavy, earth-shaking footsteps, the giant makes its way toward you. Completely unconcerned about the gunfire pinging off its back, on its pauldrons. It is just as unconcerned of the shadowy corpses it's crushing underfoot with every tread, even deigning to kick one to the side, one that looked like a shadow with blades for legs and hands.

It comes to a stop in front of you, and you look up at the behemoth with idle wonder. It reaches down with its free hand, reaching for something past you, scooping it up with a gentleness that should have no place in a machine made for war.

You blink as you see what it cradles in its brutally-armored arm, and you can't help but take a step back.

A limp, lifeless form, shattered beyond recovery. Strands of green hair half-drowned in crimson.

You look down, and you see another corpse, one that had been embracing the one Tiny Pete now carried in its arms. Its once pristine white costume now absolutely filthy with blood, making dirt and grime stick to it. Her shield, now a completely broken and shattered thing, is a burning useless disk of metal, still attached to the severed arm that bore it.

Homura-chan...?

"There we go," You hear Madoka murmur, and you turn towards the voice - and you see her crouching beside the body of the girl who only wanted to save her friend. But instead of the pink dress, however, she is wearing a gown of the purest white, elegant and luminous, without a single drop of blood on it. The black ribbons that once tied her hair into two ponytails have also been traded in, it seems, for their chromatic opposite. A bride, blushing and happy, trying to smile beyond her tears.

In her cupped gloved hands, she cradles a fragment of a purple Soul Gem, nearly blackened, but still glowing.

"It's alright," Madoka murmurs again, and it's only then that you realize that she's talking to the lifeless girl on the ground. "Midori-chan isn't angry. You tried your best to protect her. Things will be okay now, Homura-chan."

The soul gem fragment seems to glow in reply, and Madoka smiles.

"I'll make sure to pass the message on, Homura-chan."

She closes her silk-gloved fingers over the fragment, before standing up and turning towards you. "Three more to go, I think," Madoka smiles, her amber eyes shining wetly with unshed tears. "Let's get this horrible business done, shall we, Midori-chan?"

How do you react?

What's...what's going on? This...this isn't real, is it? If you're...you saw Tiny Pete carry something, b-but...you're still here--

"It's...I don't know how to explain it in so many words, myself," Madoka replies, a frown passing over her delicate features. "I mean, no, I know what I'm doing, it's just that the concept of it isn't something you can easily explain. Incubator technology is already as complicated as it is, and going into the metaphysics of it will take us days, time we don't really have at the moment." She winces slightly. "It's hard enough to stay like this when you've got someone like Faust festering in the back of your mind."

...Can't she simplify it for you, then? Something for you to understand, to latch onto, shouldn't be too hard for her to give. The corpse Tiny Pete was carrying, that couldn't be you...can it?

"He was carrying the body of the bravest Magical Girl ever to accept a contract from an Incubator, yes." Madoka smiles, smoothing out her skirt. "She jumped into two overlapping Witch Barriers without even so much as a second thought. All to rescue a stupid girl who couldn't leave things well alone, and just be happy about how things turned out."

You must have looked a bit angry at this, as Madoka herself seems to giggle, despite the situation. "Well, no. Not stupid. She's...she's not Homura-chan anymore, not like I know her. She's someone else now. I've accepted that." The pink-haired girl looks at you oddly, head tilting slightly to the side, before smiling again. "And she belongs to someone else now, at that."

You could feel your cheeks burning - or at least, you felt them tingle slightly - as you open your mouth to try and protest. She holds up a hand before you can speak. "Yes, I know. An explanation. One you can accept." She looks towards the melee, of the flash of golden weapons among the gunfire and the carnage and the violence. Letting out a sigh before turning back to you.

"Um. Well. The long and short of it is...I borrowed your Soul Gem, for a bit. Put a bit of myself in it, the part that doesn't giggle at the idea of making Homura-chan suffer for everything she's done. The part that wants to set things straight." She places her hand on her chest, gloved fingers splayed across the rather tasteful amount of cleavage afforded by the bridal gown-like dress.

"It's me, as you see now, and with the help of your Soul Gem being here, where I'm needed the most...I can do just a bit more good for poor Homura-cha--" Madoka stops as she catches herself. "...I mean, Chiaki-san."

Okay. But that doesn't explain why you're here too.

"Well, it does. A bit. I think. I..." She looks at you, then back at the vortex of violence at the center of the clearing. There is a deafening report of what sounds like battleship cannons - and it's only after a few moments that you realize that it's only Tiny Pete, firing the gigantic gun attached to his arm, sending earth-shaking blasts right into the melee. "I think it's your attunement to Chiaki-san that makes this possible." Another smile. "Well, I think you'd want to be here for Chiaki-san. To say goodbye, and everything."

...Yeah. That's...you'd like that.

"Don't look so sad, Midori-chan. You did your best." Madoka steps forward to take both your arms. "No crying. Not now. You have to be strong for Chiaki-san. Besides, you helped gather three of them, here! All in one place! You didn't even flinch when Angry Homuchan aimed that scary thing at you! I probably would've wet myself then!" A giggle, forced but sincere, all the same. "I wasn't joking when I called you the bravest. Not anyone could have done what you could." A moment. "I don't think even Magical Midori could've!"

That's the kind of thinking that got Midori in this situation in the first place. We could've played the situation to Midori's strengths, yet all that was done was to do things to "trip as many death flags as possible". And it ended rather predictably.

We may be able to salvage the situation if we don't meta game and do stuff that makes sense. We won't give up, but we shouldn't be stupid either.

Possible, but the amount of magic it requires, and the resulting corruption of our soul gem, would likely cancel out any benefits from using the grief seeds to handle some of the strain of containing Madoka's power.

I voted for it, at least in spirit, and I still think if handled differently it would have been a great choice. I was hoping for a leadup rant ending with "If you think I've gone through all this just to have you undo it all, you can get fucked, Sempai," or something of that nature, but that's not the way Deculture took it and there's no point in bitching about it now.

I still stand by it, too, whether Midori lives or dies (And she's not dead yet, but everybody's given up hope already, so she may as well already be). Midori standing up to Ribbonhomu shows character growth. This whole sidestory has been more or less a huge celebration of just how much Midori has grown as a character, and this is the climax. Midori suddenly going psychic assassin and going toe to toe with fully-powered murderface wouldn't have been in keeping with her character development; having the balls to stand up to murderface and tell her to solve her shit when she's being a self-destructive idiot is.

You couldn't resist asking those questions. You're not sure just how much time you have left or if she'll even give you a proper answer, but you had to ask. It's...it's not like you have anything left to lose, anyway, right?

Madoka's smile falters, just a tiny bit, but she gives you a nod and turns towards what's left of the shy, stuttering girl you rescued from the school. "I...I gave her peace, first of all. She was in a lot of pain, but she's alright now. Then I simply took what we needed to make Chiaki-san whole again. That leaves three other pieces for us to take. After that, I'll take what's left of us, and use it to fuse them all together." She clasps her hands, as if to demonstrate. "And everything else will work themselves out!"

Is...is she always positive about this sort of thing? A-anyway, about her...what happened to her? Who's Faust? Why is she doing this to Chiaki?

"Faust is...me," Madoka says after a moment, wincing again. "She's a part of Kaname Madoka as the one standing in front of you now. Faust is not supposed to exist, my wish should've taken care of that, but...something Homura-chan did, o-or tried to do, made her possible. What she did, I'm still not sure of, but..." She shakes her head mournfully. "Faust was once just something I used to dream about. Now, she's all but taken over, and I have to ask other Magical Girls to help me manifest sometimes. Like what we're doing now. So Homura-chan must've done something really, really bad for things to get to this state."

She lets out a sigh. "Well, she wants to kill Chiaki-san, because she reminds Faust so much of the Homura-chan that started all this. But Faust won't do it right away, even though she could just as easily shatter Chiaki-san's soul gem with a thought. Faust wants her to suffer, to think that she's got a chance. And then..." Madoka spreads her hands, an expression of utter helplessness on her face.

What about the Golden Weapons, then...? Why is she passing them around?

"They're actually my idea," Madoka manages a smile, brittle and prideful at the same time. "I...I know, they're horrible, but I've put nearly everything I had left into each of them." The smile falters again. "The rest, I've used up in tricking Faust into believing that it was her idea in the first place, and whoever has the entire set would be able to become powerful enough to be a fun challenge. If Chiaki-san manages to get all of them, she'd be able to...end the cycle and turn everything back the way they're supposed to."

But...but isn't that way a bit...convoluted? What if Chiaki didn't stumble upon them as planned? What about the other girls who got the weapons? Couldn't she have done something else a bit more direct?

"I couldn't have done anything else, not without Faust finding out," Madoka shakes her head. "B-but I have friends, friends that I could still talk to from time to time, who were kind enough to volunteer, to help Chiaki-san along." She turns to look at Malal, who had just slammed her helmed forehead into the shrieking face of one of the shadows. "Friends are important, you know."

You nod at this, a bit dumbly. It's all a bit too much to take, but...you understand somehow. Yes.

One last thing, though. Madoka's using your soul gem as a temporary soul gem for herself; can you use the two grief seeds in her left pocket as a safety valve? Just to take away some of the stress so hopefully all of you can all come out of this alive?

"Grief seeds?" Madoka echoes, before blinking, and nodding. "O-oh! Yes, that would be good! I...I think I have them here, already...!" She pats the pockets of her voluminous skirt, before withdrawing the metal case containing the grief seeds from one of them. "I was wondering what this was...! Gosh, I haven't seen one of these in ages...!"

...No Grief Seeds? But--

"O-oh, um, that was kind of my wish in the first place," Madoka smiles sheepishly. "No more Witches. No more grief seeds. Just...demons, I suppose, although they're that not much of an improvement."

Demons. Well, yes, they don't exactly sound like something you'd prefer over Witches.

"I know, right? Why couldn't it have been Incubators instead?"

Well. Now that's something to think about. Kyuubey was nice and all, but you wouldn't mind having a go at Juubey yourself.

"Ah, he's a naughty one, but you should've met the old Kyuubey." Madoka makes a face. "Little bastard cat--" She starts to snap, but stops a little too late, cheeks reddening. "U-um, I meant, a horrid little thing!"

You would have laughed, if you still had working lungs.

It's then that another sound robs your attention. It's the other Homura - the one with the wings of pure hatred - screaming wordless hate as both the armored fragment and Chiaki herself tried their level best to kill her. A single downbeat of her massive golden wings sending Chiaki sprawling, while the armored one only leaned forward, a leopard-wet roar rumbling from her throat as she defied the buffeting wind. The purple flame in her eye blazing, she flings herself at the winged girl, only to be smashed aside by one of the shadows bearing a golden hammer. She hits the ground hard in a crash of metal...and doesn't get up.

"...Oh, dear. I...I think we should go to her. She won't last much longer." Madoka says. "Midori, come with me, please. I think she'll react violently if she saw me..."

How do you react?

Of course you'll follow her, but...what about about the winged Homura? She'll need to be brought down, and from the looks of things only the armored fragment could even hope to touch it--

Madoka blinks at you, before shaking her head, a small smile on her face. "Who do you think you're talking to? I know I'm not at one hundred percent, but I've got a few tricks up my sleeves." She looks at her hands as she leads you through the battlefield. "Well, no, I don't have sleeves, but--"

Alright, alright. Maybe she does have a plan. Just so long as she doesn't forget about the grief seeds!

"I won't! They're going to be a lot of help later, really! Let's just-- oh, oh my--"

Madoka stops in her tracks, and you very nearly bump into her as the gigantic bulk of Tiny Pete - still cradling the fragile, broken thing protectively in its thickly-armored hand - charges past you in a lumbering run, smashing itself head-on into that tall, armored shadow that had wielded the golden hammer with such deadly efficiency. There's a wet, sickening crunch as one of the automaton's tusks gores straight through the shadow's torso - but Tiny Pete isn't finished, not yet by the looks of things. The twitching corpse is flung to the ground with a jerk of the elephantine helm, the shadow sliding off the tusk it's impaled on with a liquid ease - before being crushed into a bloody smear into the ground by Tiny Pete's gargantuan boot.

"Where did Homura-cha--er, Chiaki-san get that, I wonder?" Madoka wonders, eyes wide as Tiny Pete disengaged the spent autocannon from his arm - the barrels half-melted, fused together by overuse - before reaching down and grabbing the golden hammer left by the shadow he'd just murdered. "It always surprises me what sort of things she can pull out of her Shield! Reminds me of a girl I met, once, but she had a bag instead!"

Well, you don't know about that. But a bag, eh? That doesn't sound as cool as your sempai's Shield, if you'll be honest.

"It's not as cool, I suppose, but it's certainly stylish!" Madoka smiles, leading you carefully past Chiaki, who seemed to be trying to rouse Kharn by kicking her a couple of times, and kicking a bit more when the former Warmaster didn't move. Covering the prone Russian with the golden Desert Eagle, firing blindly at the winged Homura's direction. Spitting epithets and curses with every shot.

"Homura-chan's always had a temper, so I suppose it's a relief it hasn't changed a bit here," Madoka murmurs, before turning to nod at you. "Um. Midori-chan, if you will." She gestures to the armored fragment lying on the ground in front of the both of you. "You're...you're the person she wants to see now, more than ever. Not me." She shakes her head, a sad smile on her face. "And call her Chiaki."

You take a step towards the fragment, before turning towards Madoka. Is she...?

"She is." Madoka nods grimly her smile gone, lips pressed into a tight line. "She's...been fighting a long while, Midori-chan. She needs her rest, too."

A few more steps, and you finally come to the heap of twisted, blackened metal and burning rage that is the armored fragment. Facedown in the dirt, she is motionless, seemingly not even breathing. You kneel down beside her, in the ever-expanding pool of blood blossoming underneath the fragment, and the moment you touch her armor is the moment you hear her stilting, broken words flicker weakly in your mind.

+ no no must get up have to fight couldn't protect midori must have revenge please let me get up please +

A string of words, almost melding together into one desperate incantation. Or a prayer.

You have just enough to pulse a reply to her.

What would it be?

But we're supposed to be encouraging the fragments to "let go" So that Madokami can fuse them before Faust takes over again. This is what Malal kept hinting at. If we encourage her to keep fighting, then that just gives Faust more time to become the dominant personality again.

I kind of get where you're coming from, but that might have more to do with the fact that I'm more like Midori than Chiaki IRL and thus can identify with her character more.

However, it really wouldn't be right not to go back to Chiaki's PoV. She is the main heroine of the quest, after all.

Mahou shoujo don't die until their soul gems are destroyed. Midori's soul gem isn't destroyed, so she's still got a very solid chance of survival, especially since it's in Madokami's hands rather than just rolling around on the ground where it can get stepped on. Though, she doesn't have her body at the moment, so she can't PHYSICALLY do anything, which puts her score a bit higher on the "fucked" scale.

No, you don't get my reference. The image I posted should have given you a hint but I guess no one but me played that game.

Sure, she's going to die. We all know that. It's right that way. But she needs to earn it first and chip in where she's needed the most and where she can do her best: stabbing Homura in the back now she's sure Insane Chiaki is down.

Purgatory is earning your Heaven, and if this barrier is not Chiakis personal little purgatory then I don't know what it is.

Without sufficient shouting-down to keep repetition in check and filter out the chaff, you wind up with a cesspool of repetition where all the humor that may have originally existed in a meme is crushed out by running the joke into the ground, and memes that were never funny in the first place take hold and fester despite having no right to do so.

And regardless, I'm not claiming to be the one true arbiter of good meme use. 4chan is a de facto democracy as far as memes are concerned, where we cast our votes by our responses to the meme. I'm simply voicing my opinion contra this particular use of the joke. Naturally, I think my opinion is correct (otherwise I wouldn't hold it, let alone voice it), but that doesn't mean I'm crowning myself king of all memes. My point with the gardening analogy stands regardless of whether the "gardener" is a single individual or a collective consensus.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/15/13(Fri)06:37 No.23178841

You are a Magical Girl, and you could feel yourself fading with every breath you take.

Of course. You're...well, you're dead. You know that much. You've accepted that much, having seen what's left of you picked up and cradled protectively by a massive armor-plated monstrosity.

It takes a strong person to deny what's in front of them, and you've never pretended to be anything but weak.

But you have to be strong. At least for a few moments more.

It's for your sempai, after all.

The fading thing is a bit disturbing, though, if you'll be honest. Not unpleasant, just...disturbing. It nagged at you, like a faint sense of danger. Or the gut instinct of having forgotten something so critically important but spiced with the frustration of the inability to remember.

If you closed your eyes and held your breath, you could feel a tugging sensation at the edge of your consciousness, pulling you...somewhere. A cold, dark place, but one that you didn't seem to mind going.

But for some reason, even when you tried to let go, tried to surrender to it - something snapped you back, your senses flaring, a luminous warmth suffusing you and driving the cold away. The same warmth that seemed to emanate from Madoka herself, the girl standing a few feet behind you in reverent silence. Looking on as you kneeled in the dirt, attending to a particular piece of your sempai that had given all she could and more, but was still found wanting.

+ Midori +

The armored fragment of your sempai's psyche, face down in the bloody dirt, is crying. Pulsing her words out to the darkness. Scarcely able to move but to breathe from all the brutally-spiked armor encasing her.

+ Midori, I'm sorry +

With what little you have left of yourself, you pulse a reply. You try to make it as loud and as clear as you can, but as soon as you formed the words in your mind, you realized that they would never come across louder than a whisper, one that could easily be dismissed as the wind, or a misheard auditory hallucination, or--

You shake your head, and try anyway.

The moment that you sent it across is the moment that a gasp leaves the bloodied frame of the armored fragment, a sharp intake of breath that made the jagged plates imprisoning it shift feebly. Another clanking of the plates, and you see this broken version of the girl you've fallen in love with turn her face towards you, eyes searching desperately but unseeing.

+ Midori? Are you...are you here? I heard you, I... I know you're here, but I can't see you, where are you + Her mouth, too full of sharpened teeth to be able to facilitate language, opens and closes as if trying to speak a voiceless plea. + I want to see you before I go +

You turn towards Madoka, and she nods, stepping forward. You feel her hand rest on your shoulder, her warmth adding to your own - and you see the fragment's eyes go wider still, unshed tears shaking free and rolling down her face as she finally sees you. A smile - a broken, scarred, twisted version of one - curls her lips.

Her shoulder armor scrapes against the side of her cuirass as she tries to reach for you with a clawed hand, but she doesn't even manage to do so. A growl of frustration, and she glares at her limp, nerveless claw of a hand - before looking back at you with what looks like regret. And fear. And desperation all at once.

+ I'm sorry for everything + She pulses, now weaker, but much more frantic. + I'm sorry I hurt you I didn't mean to hurt anyone +

You hear Madoka choke back a sob, beside you. The hand on your shoulder tightening, shivering.

You pulse to her that...that she shouldn't sorry. She tried her best. It's more than you can ask for. More than anyone can ask for. She has nothing to be sorry about.

Your own vision misting, you look down to see the armored fragment's scarred visage smile again, before her eyes slowly flutter close. Another sigh leaving her broken frame, making her jagged armor plating clank with a seeming finality.

You pulse something to the fragment, again. Three words, three words that you've said to her before, in another lifetime. You hold your breath to wait for a reply, but there is none, only silence. Her hand twitches once, a mere spasm of the claws now uncurled and limp - and you carefully reach out and take it. Squeezing the now-cold fingers with your own.

You murmur Madoka's name, and the girl sniffs loudly before taking her place beside you. Her gloved hands cupping empty air as she closed her eyes through her own tears.

"You've fought the longest and the hardest of all of us, haven't you, Homura-chan?" Madoka's final benediction to her is soft and fragile. "It's just like you to never give up, no matter how much you hurt, no matter how tired you are, no matter how lonely it gets. It's just like you to be so stubborn." She swallows back a sob, and the air between her cupped fingers seems to spark with a purple light. "Please, find...find whatever peace I can give you. You can rest now, Homura-chan."

Another spark, bright enough to make you turn away - and the soul gem fragment manifests into reality, the blackened chunk of amethyst crackling with jagged energy. This piece fades from view with a diffusing amber light.

Madoka straightens up, wiping her own eyes with the back of her glove. You follow suit a moment later, letting go of the fragment's hand. Wondering what to do from here.

You doubt you could take much more of this.

"Just a little bit more, Midori," The pink-haired girl says, a tired smile on her face as she turns towards you. Turning away from the corpse that had long died but had kept fighting until it finally fell. "Two more, and everything'll be alright again."

You nod silently at this, and turn back towards the battlefield. What had been indistinct shapes suddenly came into sharp focus, like a camera lens automatically adjusting to accommodate. The battle had been raging on even while you were talking to the broken fragment, but it felt so far away that it didn't seem concerning at the time.

Kharn was back on her feet. Bloodied and limping, her grin never looked more ghastly behind a mask of her own blood - the combined form of Gorechild and Gorefather grasped in her remaining hand. Side by side with the massive form of Tiny Pete - the hulking monstrosity wielding one golden hammer in one gauntlet and its original one on the other - they'd begun thinning the ranks of the shadows with brutal, inexorable efficiency. You turned away just as Kharn bisected a shadow at the waist with a swing, and the two halves crushed into a smear under the weight of an overhead hammer blow. An unexpected pair if there ever was one, and surprisingly effective. Of course, not that much of a surprise if you considered who was piloting the robot from within.

Malal was still on her feet, a golden broadsword in her hand - the other supporting Mirai, who was limping herself. Both of them worked in tandem as well - when one blocked an incoming cut, the other would stab forward for a blow. The pair kept relatively close to Kharn and Tiny Pete, their eyes darting towards the center of the clearing, where...

...where Chiaki was feasting on the flesh of fallen angels.

No. Not...not you, sempai.

Somehow, the fragment that most resembled your sempai had managed to take down the one with the wings of pure hatred. You have no idea how she could have done it, but...well, your sempai always had a way of surprising you. She always had a way of coming through, no matter the odds.

But it seems that she's gone too far a bit, this time.

At the center of the clearing, your sempai straddled what looked to be the corpse of the winged fragment. The golden wings, once majestic and blinding in their glory, now lay on the ground, bloodied and severed, the armored fragment's lance cannon stained with the same blood that gouted from their stumps.

The shield on her arm a twisted, flame-blackened thing, the inner machinery exposed and unmoving. Speckled and coated with blood, brain and skull fragments as it is smashed into the corpse's face again and again and again. What had been a coldly beautiful face was now pulped into a crimson mask of pain and gore.

You'd have been disturbed by the sound of flesh and bone being pulverised methodically, if it weren't for the fact that your sempai was laughing.

Her eyes completely black, dripping bloody tears.

"No," Madoka's hand comes up to her mouth. "It's...it's not possible. Not here. It's not supposed to happen here..."

You turn to the pink-haired girl, tearing yourself from the sight of Malal screaming at Chiaki, trying to make her snap out of it.

TVTropes stated mission is to record tropes used by media; with TV first and and the rest following.

Google dropped funding and the site owner convened a witchhunt to slaughter all pages with references to lolis, wiping out many man hours of work.

VNs took a very very big hit, anime as well and at one point I believe the Inquistorial board attempted to delete Lolita, itself.

As in the entry on the book, Lolita. Just think on that.

"How...how do I stop this?" You ask Madoka. "This isn't her. This shouldn't be her."

"N-no, no it isn't. I'm...I think she's trying to take control again, and Chiaki's letting her." Madoka shakes her head slowly, seemingly unable to tear herself away from the sight of Chiaki murdering her other self with undisguised, cackling relish. "I should--" she starts, but then stops as she turns towards you, grabbing both your hands.

"No. No, the cycle stops here. If I stop her again, then...everything that's happened here will have been for nothing. Midori, you have to be the one to do it."

You look at her face, the pink-haired girl's expression one of abject desperation, and you couldn't help but say yes. You'll do anything, just to get your sempai back.

"You'll be able to manifest there for a few moments. A minute, maybe less. I'll...I'll use up everything I have left to do so. Get her back. If she falls far enough, if she gets corrupted now, all of this won't matter."

A bright amber light begins to fill your vision, blotting everything out in its purity, its warmth. Increasing in intensity until it's almost blinding, almost searing. You hear Madoka's final words ring in your ears just before an unearthly roar drowns out all other sound.

"I'm counting on you, Midori-chan."

The light explodes, and then suddenly ceases. Bringing silence along with it.

You open your eyes - and find yourself standing a few feet behind Chiaki. The scent of gunfire, blood and steel stinging your nostrils. The wind on your face, blowing through your hair, when earlier it was as windless as being inside a closed room.

"M-Midori...?" You hear Malal's vox-scarred voice rasp out from her shattered helm's voice modulator. She looks towards the bundle that Tiny Pete still carried - it was still there - before turning back to you, aghast. "N-no, it's not possible--"

Madoka's voice, urging you on. Sounding pained, weak.

Right. Right. No time to lose. You turn back to Chiaki, who still hasn't noticed your presence. She was now trying to decapitate her prey, using the edge of her shield to hack away at the exposed neck.

What do you do?

I dunno about which action to take, but the only thing we have to say is that this isn't what we wanted. Midori didn't get killed just to let Chiaki go off the deep end in despair. Fuck, she got pretty messed up preventing her from going too far once before. Remind her of that.

We can't let Chiaki throw everything away now. If she wants to fix everything, she ought to start showing it rather than just throwing a Murderface tantrum because a friend died on her. ~~It's not like she loved Midori more than that, anyway.~~

You move forward, forcing fear and hesitation out of you, even when you hear Mirai screaming your name in warning. In the moment that Chiaki raises her shield once more - no doubt to smash its bloodied edge down into the lifeless corpse she'd murdered - it's then that you grab it with both hands, pulling it up and back, preventing her from completing the motion. She doesn't seem to notice at all, still laughing as she continued to tug downwards - but her cackling fades as it finally sinks in a few moments later.

"What the--" She snarls, her voice twinned with another deeper, growling undertone, reminiscient of the armored fragment that had perished earlier. "Get your fucking hands off of me--"

"Sempai," you try, not letting go, instead pulling closer to her. Your fingers are sore and bleeding from where they'd been cut by the jagged edges of the warped, dented shield. "Sempai, please. This isn't you. Snap out of it. This has never been you. Please, don't--"

"SHE KILLED YOU!" Your sempai howls. "She killed the one person who cared about us! The one person who thought we were something worth rescuing!" She tries to pull free from you, but you hold on as hard as you could, not giving an inch no matter how painful it got. "Let me go, god dammit--"

"Sempai," You try again, fighting to keep her still, to keep her from trashing around. "Sempai, I know. I know you're upset, I know you're angry, but...this is personal. This is...this isn't the same as important." You ignore the pain in your forearms as Chiaki's nails dig into your skin, trying to break your hold. "It's important for everyone that you come back. It's important to me that you come back. So please, for fuck's sake PLEASE COME BACK!"

Your last words leave you in a scream, one that echoes throughout the entire clearing - or even the entire barrier - and silence fills the void after.

A silence broken by the clang of a warped, broken, miserable shield being pulled off of an arm and dropped to the ground.

You bury your face into her back, and with what little time you have left, you allow yourself to join her.

"I don't want to go back," she murmurs finally, between sobs. "Don't want to. Not anymore. I don't want to have anything to do with everything any longer."

You shake your head at this. "N-no, sempai, you can't. It's..." You struggle for words you don't have. How do you plead for someone to go back and suffer more of this? It...it would be merciful, for sure, if things just stopped her for your sempai. Let...let someone else play Madoka's game. Let someone else--

+ She's the only one, + Madoka whispers, her voice weaker than ever. + I...I know how painful and stupid and cruel this is, but Chiaki-san is the only Homura left. Only Homura-chan can undo what she did. Anyone else will be a slave to Faust and be bound by the Golden weapons. Please, Midori-chan, tell her--+

Madoka's voice cuts out sharply, like a frequency suddenly taken off the air, and you feel the warmth in you fading. You look down at your hands, and see that you're...slowly fading from existence, as well.

"I don't want to do this anymore, Midori." Chiaki's voice is the weakest the most vulnerable you've ever heard it. "But...if you tell me to, I..."

A purple Soul Gem suddenly sparks into existence on the ground beside you. You pick it up, and recognize it as Chiaki's own. It's whole, except for one single fragment that's not quite set in place, yet. A simple push would fit it flush with the entire thing, making it whole once more.

What do you do?

Okay, so we have two choices. There are three fragments in place, one remaining. We either complete Homu..or not.

Thinking that we must find a way to have Midori live. They have their gems linked, maybe we can have Madoka transfer our consciousness into Homu's gem if ours is busted. Is it?

You bring both arms around Chiaki's own limp, shaking frame again, hugging her for all you're worth. Your hands closing around her Soul Gem - your thumb resting lightly upon that piece that just needs a gentle push to finally set into its proper place. For it to heal, to become whole once more.

Smiling through your own tears, you lean in close. Putting every ounce of your will to speak levelly, comfortingly, to make the most convincing lie you would have ever told in your career as a Callidus. Before your time ran out.

"You don't have to do this alone, sempai. Let's go home." You give her a squeeze. "Everyone's waiting - and we'll get some pancakes on the way."

A sniff from her, and a weak murmur of assent. "O-okay. Let's...let's go." Another sniff, and she turns back toward you, a small smile on her face.

Someday, you will pay for that lie.

But you won't be there when the universe comes to collect, at least.

"I love you, sempai." You murmur into her ear. "Always have. Please remember that."

You press down hard on the piece--

Darkness. A different kind, one that doesn't seem to fade even when you've opened your eyes. You look around, and see that you're still kneeling, just like earlier, when you got Chiaki to snap out of it. Except she was gone. Everything - her, Tiny Pete, Kharn - the entire barrier was gone.

A soft amber light glows from somewhere beside you, and you turn to see Madoka...back in her Magical Girl costume. Back in Faust's costume. Her eyes are still amber, but she seems relieved for the moment.

"Just in the nick of time," Madoka sighs, happy and yet clearly exhausted. "Thank...thank you, Midori. You've gotten Homura-cha--er, I mean, Chiaki-san to come back. I didn't really think a hug would work, but you just proved to me that it did."

Yeah? Well, what did she use the first time, anyway?

There's a moment of sheepish silence.

"I...I tore her heart out," Madoka hangs her head. "I-I was a bit panicking at the moment, and things were happening, and--"

You shake your head as you stand up. You didn't need to hear it. What happens to everyone now?

"O-oh. Well, um, the barrier should be collapsing any moment, so they'd be able to find themselves back in the real world soon enough. Intact and together, that's so we're clear. A-and yes, Chiaki-san will be her old self again. I used the two grief seeds you had to make sure of that!"

You smile at this, and allow yourself to breathe. That's...well. That's good. That's what you were aiming for, and you achieved that. Nothing else should matter, then. You look around, before turning back to Madoka. Is...well, is this it, then? Your soul gem's done for?

"I'm...I'm afraid so," Madoka smiles guiltily as she holds out a severely-cracked crimson Soul Gem, the bauble looking so fragile that a mere breath may turn it into dust. "I...it was already compromised when I took it from you, and I'm afraid what we did earlier burned it out. It's just a matter of time..."

Ah. Well. That's...well. At least you had a good run. At least you saved her.

"That's a brave way of looking at it, Midori," The pink-haired girl murmurs. "I'm...I wish I could be just as brave as you."

"Oh, she is," A vox-corrupted voice, harsh and angry, blurts out in the darkness. Both of you turn at the direction of it - and it's there that you see Malal, the lines of her suit glowing a blinding crimson, her helm scuffed and scarred and dented but still remarkably in one piece. "Don't presume you can talk to someone like her so freely, Blessed Lady." The Culexus all but spits the word in a curse.

M-Malal? But what was she doing here? Isn't she--

"I am. I told you this already, didn't I? Pay attention." Her voice, taut with emotion, is nonetheless twisted into something dreadful by her helmet speakers. She turns back to Madoka, taking something from one of her suit's many pockets. "You're not taking this one with you. Not yet."

"B-but Miss Malal--" Madoka tries. Even SHE called her Miss. Her words are cut off, though, by the Culexus throwing something at her, which she squeaks as she catches.

It's...it's a Soul Gem. Bright amber in color. Recognizable. It's...it's familiar...

No. No, that's...

"Wakaba Mirai-san's...Soul Gem?" Madoka finishes for you, her eyes wide. "B-but..."

"Your pound of flesh, Blessed Lady," Malal all but sneers. "Now make with the sparkles and give the Warmaster back her aide. She needed her YESTERDAY."

And the origins of her infatuation with Chiaki are not exactly the makings of a healthy relationship.

Also, I'm not so sure she's permanently lost anyway. Certainly well on that track, but there were still some hints at possible reconciliation before we left for Siberia, and I wouldn't be at all surprised to see her come back into the picture once we get back.

No. No, she can't possibly be suggesting that. You came here to save Mirai, too! J-just like you came here to save your sempai! You're not going to allow this--

"I don't remember asking you for your opinion, Hanegawa," Malal says, crossing her arms, the backlit lines of her suit pulsing in time with your heartbeat. "Pay attention, like I said. Now, once you get back, I want you to make sure Chiaki stops drinking like a fish and popping pills like candy. Ration her alcohol and put sugar pills in her painkiller bottles, that always works. And--"

She stops, and turns towards you with an almost quiet menace. You blink at her, forgetting for a moment that you're supposed to be fuming - before she lets out a sharp bark of laughter.

"Take Kharn? That's what you were thinking, wasn't it?" The smile in her voice is obvious despite her helmet's vox stealing all warmth from it. "It's tempting. Very tempting. But no. Kharn answers to what she did and what she tried to do back there. You want her dead, that's very understandable given the circumstances, but that's letting her off easy. My way, she gets to live with her mistakes, to live the rest of her life with Souji and Misaka, knowing that it was because of her being an idiot that she almost didn't get to enjoy it. And she'll have to answer to you, and Murderface, and the rest. You want to punish a betrayer?" The Culexus shrugs. "Leave her to the people she betrayed. Much better all around, I think."

"But nothing." Malal shakes her head. "You think I'd propose something like this if she didn't want it to happen? She practically threatened me with that pig sticker of hers. Yes, she wants to, and yes, she's okay with it. You'll get to talk to her later, just before this all goes down." She looks to the side, where Madoka is busy holding Mirai's Soul Gem with both hands, tongue curled up and poking through her lips in concentrated effort. "Hey, Blessed Lady! What's the hold-up?!"

"I-I'm nearly done!" Madoka stutters, and Malal shakes her head. "As for me, this is probably the last time I'm going to see you, so..." She pauses here, somewhat awkwardly. "I suppose it's nice to see that the next Warmaster's in good hands, I guess. If I can do anything else for you, ask now and I'll do my best."

She holds out her gloved hand to you to shake. After a moment, you do so.

You ask her if there's really no way of you saving her. Or Mirai. At this, she seems to scoff, but it's not with the usual venom that you've heard her respond with.

"No. There's not. Some things you can't fix no matter what you try. The only alternatives there are, really, is to make things a bit less terrible than they should be for everyone. That's what I'm trying to do now, from here, and what she's giving you a chance to do too." The Culexus gives your hand a squeeze. "Don't worry too much about her. From what I hear from our 'Blessed Lady', things are taken care of once you lose your soul gem. Something close to Heaven, but not quite. Whatever it is, I hope it has good 3G." She chuckles here.

Yes. That's...that's good. You hope so, too.

In any case, there is something you'd like to ask. If it's not too much, could she...?

"...I don't normally do this for just anyone," Malal says after a few moments. "But what the hell. My suit's on full active just trying to get here, anyway, and we've only got a bit more time left." She reaches up to the back of her head and twists a heavily-ratcheted knob there, before undoing the pressure seals on her collar, each one coming free with a small hiss.

She reaches up with both hands and pulls the helmet up and off of her head. She lowers the skulled headpiece, turning it around in her hands, a frown on her lips as she surveys the damage.

"Tch. I was hoping it wasn't this damaged..." She says mournfully, in a voice untouched by a vox speaker. Such a pure voice. Such a clean voice.

You couldn't trust yourself to speak as you beheld the pink hair. And the pupils in her eyes.

You glance at her, glance at Madoka, and then at her once again.

How. What. ...How?

WHY?!

I doubt every timeline comes into existence when Homura wakes up in it. If the universe existed before that, then that means Homura existed before it, too, but as soon as Homurambo makes the jump to a new world, she takes over the body of the local Homura, erasing the local Homura's entire personality with her own. As a result, there can't be multiple Homuras in a timeline.

But what does this say about Kyouko? Her wish has to be somewhat related to the Culexus-type in a roundabout fashion.
This theory -does- fit. Kyouko's wish was not necessarily selfish, but it wasn't altruistic, either. She did benefit from her wish, but only indirectly.

"Technically, we're the same person, but not," The Culexus, sans-helmet, smiles cheerfully. "We don't have the same name, or grew up in the same household. Yet, here we are, somehow. Timelines are strange like that, I think." She glances over at Madoka, who is still doing something to the Soul Gem in her hands - the amber turning white - and she leans over to you, conspiratiorially. "Between the two of us? I've always hated the costume. Too frilly for my taste. And those heels? Who can run in those?"

But...you always thought...but so, how did she know about all of--

"Dreams," Malal explains, tapping her temple with a gloved finger. "Always got them ever since i was a kid. Not the sort you get from eating too much before bedtime, stuff like that - but really detailed ones. Dreamed of myself in that getup, and I thought to myself how silly it is. Fighting monsters in a DRESS? Yeah, no thanks. So when the mutant cat came to me with the contract, I knew what wish to make. How to make it, too." She smiles again, seemingly full of pride.

But...but...how...

"Oh, um. well, normally I just hold it in until we can get to the little girl's room," She says, looking down at her suit. "I know it looks like a lot of stuff, but you can actually take it off really quickly, and--"

No! No, not that! It's just...well, that too, but you have so many questions now--

"Some of them we probably won't even have time to get to. But stuff'll get answered soon. I left Kharn a package for Chiaki - don't leave Siberia without it. Everything there should help." It's then that Madoka calls you over. "Right, I think it's time for you to get back." Malal smiles again, before clamping her helm back down on her head. Concealing her features once more behind the cracked visor. "Try to stay alive, alright? I don't think I can intervene for the next one."

You promise you'll try your best.

She nods, and the both of you walk back to Madoka, who looks even more exhausted than she was earlier.

"R-right. It's...it's done. Here, Midori. I...it's a bit slipshod of me, but it should be alright." She hands over the Soul Gem to you, and you take it like the fragile gem that it is.

It's your Soul Gem, that's for sure. The brass casing, however, is definitely Mirai's.

You're...you're not sure how to thank her. Or Mirai.

"Say it properly, and don't cry while you're doing it." Malal suggests. "The both of you can cry all you want when this is done."

Y-yes. Right. Um. Will your body be...?

"--healed just enough to sustain life, yes, but you'll still be in a world of pain. I'll dull as much as I can for you, but things will still hurt." An awkward smile from Madoka. "...Thank you, Midori. I meant what I said. I wish I was as brave as you."

Malal merely nods at this.

"Any last words before I send you back, then?" Madoka asks.

That's what I'm basing my requirements for a culexus wish on.
Since Kyouko isn't exactly a Culexus, but still can do things that only a Culexus can, her wish must be indirectly related to the thing that makes one a Culexus.
While the "Altruistic Wish" theory fits this, the "Save a Cat" wish doesn't really fit Malal. That doesn't render the theory invalid. Her wish might have been some -other- altruistic wish.
Or she could have gone full-bore and simply wished to be the best Culexus there ever was. Sort of a cheating way to become a Culexus.

Pfft, that's no problem at all. If it's 26 episodes, use the first half to set up the characters and relationships, and have the final arc be loosely based on true events with Murder Mayumi going nuts and Magical Midori going through hell to save her, ending with Murder Mayumi finally admitting that she loves Magical Midori.

Have it sync up with the manga version of that arc, like what happened with the second FMA anime, so that both can end at the same time without anything being spoiled. Keep the fans guessing all the way to the end.

No last words. Not right then, at least. Instead, you walk forward and hug them, each in turn. Despite...well, despite being the same person, technically, the contrast between them couldn't be stronger: Malal seemed to welcome the physical contact, even slapping you hard on the back while you did so. Madoka on the other hand stiffened slightly as your arms went around her, but she relaxed soon after and returned it as well.

You then stepped back to look at both of them, and with tears in your eyes, you bowed. Thanking them, and promising that you'll take care of your sempai the best way you can. Leave it to Miracle Midori!

"I know you will." Malal's vox-corrupted voice is strange to hear after you've heard her without it. "It's why I can take it easy knowing you're on the job."

"Chiaki-san is in safe hands with you, Midori," Madoka agrees, clasping her hands together - and it's then that the amber light from earlier starts to flood your vision yet again. Both Culexus and Goddess wave at you. "Please, take care...!"

You try to wave back, but the light forces you to turn away, right as the howling wind resumes again.

The light dies immediately afterward, but the wind does not. You open your eyes - finding it a complete ordeal to - and look up to see the unnatural sky of the barrier. Unnatural, but...clear, now. As if illuminated by some hidden sun. Not a cloud in sight.

You're lying on the ground, but it's a soft, grassy ground. Your head, too, is resting on something very soft, and very warm.

You look up, craning your neck. It's then that you spot a familiar face looking down at you.

...Mirai?

"Hello, Midori." The girl smiles. "We have a few moments to ourselves, for now. The barrier's going to break soon enough, and all this will disappear." She pauses. "Thank you for...not refusing my gift. It is all I can give for now."

No, whole cloth. It means made from scratch - the term has its origins in clothes being made from cloth directly from the bolt - cloth which is still 'whole', having not been cut yet.

But she had a boyfriend already..

Also I think we have to note something very important down.
Once we`re in charge of Chiaki again if Midori brings up her feelings for us again or tries to initiate a kiss or something we have to troll her by:

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you've been given a second chance by your best friend.

A second chance to see things through. A second chance to finish what you've started. A second chance, to make sure that your sempai, broken, haunted and perenially-suffering thing that she is, completes this...absolutely horrifying task she'd been given.

A second chance, just when you've pretty much accepted oblivion. A favor from Wakaba Mirai herself, formerly of the Pleiades Saints, formerly of the Tenth. The friend you had when no one would even so much give you the time of day. The only person who'd encouraged you to publish your haphazard scrawling when everyone else told you that it was a waste of time to.

It's a favor you'll never be able to repay.

And you have one last chance to say goodbye.

It's almost surprising how placid and peaceful a Witch Barrier is. Earlier - in the fleeting memories you can remember that didn't involve cold, numbing pain or stark, paralyzing fear - the Witch Barrier had been chaotic, nearly noxious in its disorder. It was sickening, in a way, to have everything change in your line of vision one moment, and then restore itself the next. Even the sky was never still, always in flux, always twisting, a swirling vortex of malevolence and hate.

Now, however...it was quiet. Peaceful. Almost tranquil.

You're not sure where you are at the moment, or where the others are - but you have the odd suspicion that things are being taken care of. As much as you'd want to make sure your sempai's safe - and you know she is - there is something you absolutely cannot put off. Not now.

"I...I'd like to say I was prepared for this," Mirai murmurs, her voice catching slightly in her throat, but nevertheless still spoken softly, perfectly, smoothly. "But I wasn't. I...I thought things would work out in the end. Even Miss Malal reminded me that it's much too optimistic to hope for something like that. Still, I..." her voice trails off in silence, before coming through again, a bit shaky this time. "...I'd like to think I did some good. While I still had the chance to."

You feel it, then, a drop of cold water splashing on your cheek, as you look up at the girl who'd saved your life by trading hers in.

"In the end, I...I suppose that's what's important, isn't it, Midori?"

Another one joins it on your other cheek, and you hear Mirai sniffle gently, gloved hands reaching up to elegantly wipe at her eyes.

Remember what Malal told you.

How do you respond?

[]Ask her why she did this.
[]Stay silent and let her cry it out. You don't trust yourself to speak, either.

"B-because it's the right thing to do," Mirai replies, seemingly surprised that you'd ask such a question, surprised enough that her teary eyes widen slightly at this. "Y-you're...you're my friend, Midori. You jumped in her to save me and your sempai. Was I supposed to let you die, just like that?" She sniffs almost haughtily, putting on an air typical of a Pleiades Saint. "Besides, it's uncouth for an aristocrat like me to owe a favor to a petty commoner like Midori-chan."

You look at her, faintly puzzled, before she manages a smile. "well, that's what Saki-san would've said, at least. But I'm not her. I couldn't...I couldn't bear seeing you die like that, Midori-chan. I had to do something."

You want to get up. You want to hug her, you want to wipe her eyes for her, to tell her that you're sorry for everything and that you'll promise to find a way to get her back - but you feel your body unresponsive, unwilling to move from that spot, your head pillowed on her thighs. You wonder about this - you'd been able to move earlier, with Madoka and Malal. What's wrong now?

"Oh, um. This...they've put you back in your body, I believe, and while it's slowly healing, it's still quite fragile. So you're not supposed to make any sudden movements until it's properly healed." Mirai smiles. "But I know you, Midori-chan. It's alright. This...this had to happen, and while I wish I could go back with you and be with everyone again, I...it's better, this way. I am at peace, and so should you."

She leans over and places a gentle kiss on your forehead, her lips soft and warm. Her curtain of curly orange hair falling briefly around you, blocking out the unnatural sky of the barrier for one brief moment.

As Mirai draws back, more tears in her eyes than there were before - but the smile on her face sincere, heartbreakingly-happy - the Barrier begins to destroy itself.

It starts with the Barrier's fading sun suddenly disappearing with a sound akin to glass breaking. Then, hairline cracks start to spiderweb across the sky, spreading out from where the unnatural sun once was. Light peeking out from those fissures, which start to widen with disturbing alacrity across what should be Mitakihara's twisted atmosphere. The ground starts to shake, rubble starting to hover upward - but it's done with such a lack of sound, a muted disintegration, that it doesn't even seem to shatter the nearly funereal-like peace of it.

"This isn't the scene I wanted us to part ways in, Midori," Mirai says as she helps you up to a sitting position beside her, her arm around your waist, letting you lean on her. "...but it'll do. And I have been honored to be your friend, if...I could be so presumptuous." Her other hand takes your own and laces her fingers through yours.

You turn towards her just as the world begins to shatter around you.

How do you say goodbye?

The rest of the saints didn't like Midori. It seems it was because her operating style was the complete opposite of theirs

> Brutally direct, to the point, showing no consideration at all to the usual finery and rituals that you've seen the Pleiades Saints perform whenever fighting another Magical Girl. There'd be declarations of titles, of oathes, of sweeping and elegant salutes and all that. Always respectful and graceful pugilism, never direct and brutal murder.

...And the fact that Midori is poor.

Anyway one thing does strike me. Why was Midori getting the assignments to help rapists and such? And Juubey placed value on her as well...

I wonder if Juubey was trying to desensitise
Midori so he could build her up as a ruthless Callidus assassin?

No. No, it can't end now. It's too soon. You were supposed to have a few more moments with her! It hasn't even been a couple of minutes--

The ground shakes again, a bit harder this time, as if to press upon you the need to hurry and make your parting words to a friend that you will never see again. Or talk to again. It takes every single ounce of what little strength you have left in your limp, immobile form - what willpower you could summon up making up for the rest - for you to lift and wrap your arms around her in a tight, clasping embrace.

"Goodbye," You manage to whisper, smiling so that she'll hear it in your voice, and overlook the fact that you're crying now. "I'll miss you."

The sky, completely ruined now, is pockmarked and fissured with chasms of searing, blinding light. The ground mirrors it - and you see buildings, houses, corpses of familiars being flung skyward, sucked into the gaps.

She seems to understand, and she buries her head into your shoulder, her hands clawing into your costume. She chokes out a single phrase, one that is cut off as all sound suddenly dies.

"Please don't forget m--"

The ensuing darkness is kind enough to take away your sight a moment before the girl in your arms simply ceases to exist. Leaving nothing in your embrace except air.

You pitch forward into nothing, falling, and you close your eyes.

You open them again, inside...inside the ruined Silent Room of the Ninth Officio's Research and Development Base, in Siberia.

It is a complete shambles. The desktop computer that your sempai had used to talk to Mirai is now all but plastic and metal and glass fused together into an unrecognizable shape, smoking and charred and smoldering. The walls are in a similar state, steel and cement blackened with carbon scoring as well as what looks to be claw marks. The only intact thing in the room, funnily enough, is the fluorescent lamps overhead, although one or two of them seem to have been shattered somehow.

Other people are inside the room with you, from what you can hear. You turn slightly to see in the far corner of the room the huddled, wheezing form of Kharn, her greatcoat jacket draped over her as a sort of blanket, the ragged, bleeding stump of her shoulder where her right arm had been still a fresh, angry wound. Her hair, matted and stringy, concealing her face.

Beside her, as if keeping guard, stands Tiny Pete, his armor rent and scarred and dented in a thousand different places. One of the eyeslits of its elephantine helm seems to have been put out, inactive, devoid of the crimson light usually shining from it. The other tusk seems to have been shattered as well, joining the other in battle damage.

Someone's....someone's missing, though. Someone important. You try to maneuver yourself to look around for her - when you suddenly realize that you're once more pillowing your head in someone else's lap, and you look up to see Chiaki Matsuda - Murderface, your sempai - calmly smoking a bent cigarette above you. Her glasses are surprisingly intact, and...her hair is long.

She lets the sentence trail off into silence, awkwardly, before turning away and taking another pull from her cigarette.

That was Kyoko.

That leads me to other thing.
Kyoko mentions that if a familiar eats enough people that they become a witch.

But there was a line in the second episode where Mami says that "If you're lucky, they might drop a grief seed"

This leads me to the thought that perhaps Kyoko is wrong, while familiar's can become witches. These familiar - witches do not drop grief seeds.

The grief seed contains much more energy than it took to make the girl. It contains enough to purify a soul gem as well as recoup the costs of making her, and then some. That's entirely the point of magical girls in the first place.

Mami was the type to eliminate all witches and familiars to protect the populace, so while she might have heard such a thing from other girls before, she wasn't about confirm it with an actual experiment. To her, it was enough knowing sometimes they drop it and sometimes they don't. (I doubt it's knowledge she wants to impart on her protege anyway)

Now, Kyoko if she spoke from experience it seemed like she at least had gone through with letting familiars go to farm seeds. Kyubey spoke of her having plenty of Grief Seeds in reserve, so I would at least tend to believe that she had confirmed the theory on at least one occasion while amassing them.

You stare up at her for quite a few moments, in the relative silence of the room - before reaching up with a shaky hand and pulling the cigarette away from her lips. She blinks down at you in mild surprise at this, her lips shaping a protest, but one that doesn't get to be vocalized as your vision start to mist up again. Warning you of tears that you obviously haven't cried yet.

With a surprising gentleness that you've never experienced from your sempai - at least, not from the one you've been acquainted with all this time - she scoops you up into her arms and pulls you to her, letting you muffle your own sobs into her shoulder. Her scent - a curious mix of earthy sweat, dried blood and gunpowder - all but reminds you of just what you've been through and what you've lost in the process.

"It's...it's okay, Midori. We're back. We're safe." Chiaki says after a rather long and awkward pause, nearly mumbling the words, but no less earnest in her effort. "You saved me. It's over. I'm okay. You're okay." Another pause. "...Thank you."

You cling to her with what little strength left inside of you, your shoulders still shaking from all the crying. It's all but sapped you, leaving you cold and empty and drained. And yet, hearing her say it, hearing her confirm what you've managed to do by the skin of your teeth - it makes everything all worth it.

Someday, you'll forgive yourself for letting your best friend trade her life in for yours.

They
1. Make you immune to witchdom
2. Can drive you insane
3. They suck in the welders soul when they die.

Before the reveal, I thought that they were a perversion of Godoka's duty she did in her new world. Which was collecting the grief from soul gems before the user witches out and taking the dead magical girl to magical girl vanhalla.

So these weapons could be some grief collecting thing, where all the grief from a magical girl killed with a golden weapon ends up absorbed into the weapon. The weapons take grief from the wielders so they don't witch out and they end up taking the wielders 'to another place' when they die.
The whole corruption thing could be weapons way of getting the user to generate more grief.

In this verse, Kyuubey is only abit of a dick. The support structures for the Magical Girls are present with backup personnel, peers, juniors and senior staff. Importantly, she also knows the fate of Magical Girls in the end.

I believe she has come to accept that eventual fate, instead of having it forced on her like in the original show, making her much more emotionally stable.

The obvious benefit right-off is the drastically increased fighting ability. If the corruption's effects can be offset or circumvented in some way, it would seem that coming to an understanding with the soul contained within the Golden Weapon has its perks. If not, then it would appear that too much corruption makes you batshit insane and maybe warped into something horrible (like how the Ahriman-Magical Girl got twisted into some sorta bird thingy).

Of course, in Chiaki's case, sidestepping the corruption via the soulgem circuit might not be such a great thing in the long run. Pic related, sorta.

N-no. It's not her fault, you tell her, tightening your grip on her hand. Even Madoka - the part of her that helped you save her fragment by fragment, the part of her that saved you and gave you another chance at life - said as much. You didn't set things in motion, someone else did.

Someone who stared with nothing but pure hatred in her eyes. Someone who never even thought about the consequences of what she'd do - and everyone who would suffer in the process. Someone who'd given up her humanity to become a monster, worse than a mindless witch. Witches, at least, were insane to begin with. The Homura you encountered...that was a different kind of insane entirely, the kind who would see the galaxy burn just to get what they wanted.

A completely and utterly different person from your sempai, who was thrown into this role with nothing else than an unreliable memory and a gun in her hand. Besides, Homura would have killed you even before you could have blinked. Chiaki, at least, only shot off your legs.

"...Y-yeah. I...I guess she would've." Your sempai smiles at this, again. It seems that besides the sudden change in hairstyle, she'd gotten quite a bit of the first fragment's awkwardness, too. "I, um. I never did apologize about that, I think. There's...there's a lot of ways I could've handled it differently. Taking down another Magical Girl temporarily. Um." She squeezes your hand in return, gently, carefully.

You've forgiven her for that long ago. Besides, she had something else to apologize for.

"Oh? What's that...?"

She should very well know!

"..." Chiaki blinks at you, before going very slightly red.

"I was...I was kind of drunk at the time."

You giggle at this. It...it feels good to joke around. To laugh. Things are starting to get normal, right? Things are getting better. Yeah.

A cough from clear across the room breaks the atmosphere some, reminding you of Kharn from across the room. The Betrayer, who you traded some very harsh words with in the Barrier, when she tried to challenge the armored fragment to a duel. She doesn't seem to be moving, but she's breathing at least.

You're...you're still angry with her, that much is certain. But you couldn't deny that she didn't help out in the final hour.

You turn towards your sempai, and she's looking at Kharn as well. A calculating look in her eyes.

"I remember," she says before you could ask. "I saw what happened. I've never seen anyone do that before, talking her down like that." A moment. "Maybe Malal did. Once. I'm not too sure, but I remember an instance where Kharn pissed her off, and she had her in tears. It takes someone brave to face someone like her and stand your ground." It's then that Chiaki pulls herself up to her feet, helping you up as well - not letting go of your hand the entire time. "Let's see how she's doing."

The both of you make your way across the wrecked room easily enough - Tiny Pete moving aside with a grind of obviously-damaged servos, a limp in his left leg making his usually-ponderous gait a bit unsteady. Kharn doesn't even so much as notice you walking up to her, but she looks up with blood-tracked eyes, a melancholy smile on her face.

"Midori. Warmaster." Kharn's own voice is hoarse, weak, and she turns to the side to spit a black glob of encrusted blood to the floor after she speaks. "If you are going to kill me, then please make it quick. Do not let Misaka or Souji see it." She gestures to the deactivated chainaxes beside her, Gorefather and Gorechild. "I am aware of my betrayal. The sentence is death. This I know also." She bares her throat to you - no, to Chiaki. "My only regret is that I did not die in battle like I intended to. We cannot have everything, I am guessing."

How do you respond?

"Miss Malal wasn't kidding. You ARE an idiot."

It takes you a few moments of Chiaki and Kharn staring at you in surprise to realize that it was you who said that. You couldn't believe it yourself, but now that you think about it, it makes a whole lot of sense. And Malal - MISS Malal - did tell you, and if you're taking anyone's advice, it's hers.

"Midori," Chiaki says after a moment, her voice low, but there's a hint of a smile on her lips. She reaches up to brush some hair from her eyes again. "What do you think I should do with Kharn?"

Oh. WELL. If she's asking, then--

"Now wait just a moment...!" Kharn tries, her eyes narrowed at this break in protocol. "The Warmaster is--"

"--supposed to make a decision by herself, yes." You cut her off, rallying magnificently, a smile on your face as you go full bore on who could be the most idiotic person this side of a Barrier. "But as her aide, I can make recommendations, can't I? Miss Malal did the same for you, I'm sure."

"Yes, but--"

"Then I make my recommendation to the Warmaster." You say this in a huffy sort of voice, imitating how Mirai would have said it, but with an exagerrated air. You glance down at the deactivated chainaxes, and shake your head. "Enough of dying. There's been enough of that going around, I think. No, Valnikov Kharn - you will live with your betrayal. You will live with your mistakes for the rest of your life, and it will be a long and happy one." You turn towards Chiaki and nod, the both of you sharing a knowing look.

Kharn's expression turns into one of muted horror and shock, and she looks up at Chiaki.

"M-Murderface, you cannot--"

"My name is Chiaki Matsuda, Kharn." Your sempai shakes her head, her long black hair swaying with the movement. "And as Warmaster, I sentence you to become Souji's housewife. Deal with it."

"...I do not know how to show my face to Souji anymore," The former Warmaster says dejectedly. "Or Misaka. I...I just wanted to die as I have lived. One last swordfight. I...I missed it. I missed the adrenalin, I missed the glory, the action..." She looks up at you and Chiaki, almost pitifully. "I did not mean to spit at my oaths of loyalty with you, but...I wanted to feel it again."

Oh, she'll feel things alright. Last you heard, motherhood was the most extreme thing ever. And she can easily show her face to Souji - he's in the room right now with you, isn't he?

"W-what?" Kharn nearly yelps, looking around. "W-where? I do not see him--"

"Tiny Pete?" chiaki says quietly, and the behemoth turns around to face the three of you. Your sempai nods at it, and the light in its one intact helm eyeslit dies as its chest splits open.

Revealing the pilot inside.

"Misaka...?" Chiaki says, blinking, before reaching in and pulling out what looks to be a sound-asleep Misaka. Her hands clasping what looks like Kharn's Warmaster Cap to her chest.

"But...if Souji isn't there--" Your sempai begins, looking around. There's a hiss, and the doors to the Silent Room is thrown open - a harangued-looking Souji, pressing an icepack onto the back of his head and tearing black electrical tape off of his arms, storming right in.

"I thought--" You tell the young man, who looks as though he'd been sleeping on his keyboard the entire time, with imprints of keys on his cheek.

You stop yourself from grinning and turn to Chiaki, whose arms are still full of Misaka.

"We should probably let them talk, right?" You suggest, and she nods.

Film Noir is a fight against overwhelming odds, against the bad in every person you meet, against the fear and hate driving people to do the worst things to each other. It's one man (or puella magi) against everything, one man, the best man in this world but good enough for any world. There will be blood. There will be death. It will hit your friends, innocent bystanders, the bad guys. The lines between these, they will blur and wash away in the rain and blood. There will be injustice, unpaid for in the end. There will be hopelessness. There will be no redemption for many people. There will be dying with regrets and tears in your eyes. There will be the struggle to do something, anything. There will be betrayal.

And if it's true Film Noir, there will be an end. More likely than not, it will be yours. If you made a difference before that? Well, that's all your choice to make.

You lead Chiaki out of the Silent Room, and wait for her to step through before closing the door carefully and quietly behind you. As soon as you do, however, you signal Chiaki to wait, before pressing your ear against the door's surface. Yes, you probably need to catch up on a whole week's worth of sleep - it feels like it, anyway - and you did promise Chiaki pancakes, back then in the barrier - but you're not about to step away from hearing the Betrayer get her comeuppance. It's a shame you won't be able to see it, but hearing it is fine.

"Midori? What are you--" Chiaki asks, blinking from behind her glasses, and you shush her. After a few moments, with some careful maneuvering of Misaka, she presses her ear against the door too, her curiosity obviously getting the better of her.

Just as you expected, they're talking in Russian. But it's not what they're saying that's important - you've learned that it's all in the how that matters. And from where you're standing, Kharn is trying to explain why she resorted to that kind of stupidity, stumbling over her explanations, clearly guilty but trying to explain her side - while Souji is having absolutely none of her bullshit, his words clipped, barely restrained, and terse.

It's then that the arguing becomes a shouting match, and even you could hear the faint crack in Kharn's voice in every punctuating word. Finally it all seems to come to a head, and you could hear a shudder in her voice that tells you that she's broken down. And then, apropos of nothing, a slapping sound. And another. And another.

Then, Souji's voice, low and dour. Followed by a long silence - and then Kharn murmuring something through her tears. Silence follows for what seems like an interminable moment, and it's then that you hear the rustle of...cloth against cloth.

You move back away from the door, just as Chiaki does. You've heard enough. Listening more would simply be rude. You quietly motion for your sempai to follow, and she does so.

The both of you dropped off Misaka in her room, the Warmaster's Cap still clutched tightly in her arms. You tried to pull it out, but Chiaki asked you to leave it - she'll give it back when she's ready. With the younger of the two Russian siblings tucked in, you make your way to the kitchen, where you spend a couple of minutes making your sempai pancakes while she waited. Relishing the chance to be able to do something like this again, when earlier you were all but resigned to part ways with the world of the living.

Chiaki ate them with her usual gusto, ravenously tearing into the generous pile you made for her - and while the both of you agree that it could never match up to Mami's own, just seeing her smile once more after every bite was enough assurance that you're somewhat close to it. She thanks you, taking hold of your hand, and you couldn't help but wonder if...if the gesture meant something more. Maybe you could hope, now, but it's probably too early. Give it time, give it time.

The meal ends, and the both of you make your way topside. Back to the surface. Just to...nail in the fact that you're back in the real world. Holding each other's hands as the elevator brought you up back from the subterranean levels.

It's...night time. After dark. But the moon's quite full, lighting up the sky with the stars. With the blanket of white snow all around, the quiet chill of the Siberian winter - you finally allow yourself to relax completely.

The nightmare is over. For now, at least.

"You...know I'm not really ratified yet as Warmaster, right?" Chiaki murmurs. "I can't really sentence anyone to do anything. Not yet, anyway."

[2/3]

Oh, you know. But Kharn seems to be quite convinced. Besides, things worked out, didn't they?

"Guess so." Chiaki smiles as she turns back to look at the moon. "I...thank you for saving me, Midori. I have to say that again, because...I don't think anyone else would have."

Of couse they would have. You were just conveniently there. But you'd do it again in a heartbeat.

"...Still. Thanks." She gives your hand a squeeze. "Now, uh, about that anime..."

You tell her that you should just enjoy the quiet moment. She shakes her head at this, but acquiesces, allowing you your second sigh of relief that night.

Silence. And then...

"You met me at a strange time of my life," You murmur, echoing the words the armored fragment said to you, back in your father's restaurant. Chiaki blinks at this, a questioning look on her face, and you shake your head, smiling. She probably doesn't remember it, which is a good thing, considering.

Strange indeed, you agree.

For both your sakes, and everyone else's.

"Hello, everyone! Welcome to the first recap episode of Magical Girl Noir Quest, where we try to catch up on what's happened so far in MGNQ! I'll be your host for this thread, Pinky, and we'll be trying to summarize the last eighty or so threads made! Hopefully we'll manage it before the writer croaks from stress or clinical depression, which he swears up and down he doesn't have!"

"...No, seriously, he doesn't have it! Anyway, since this is a recap thread which promises seriously zero new content, we'll try to make it interesting by having some characters come up here with me and answer a few of your questions. You'll be picking who comes on, to add a little interactivity and just have a bit of fun to what should really be just a longwinded summary!"

"Ah, in fact, let's start things off by picking someone from the current character roster, before we get into the really boring thread summaries! S-so, um, who do we interview first?"

[]Mami Tomoe, The Pancake Lady!
[]Miki Sayaka, She Who Is Always Angry!
[]Kyoko Sakura, Maximum Audacity!

"Right, let's start! MGNQ started off with a Magical Girl waking up in her apartment with no idea who she is or where she came from. She started remembering things little by little, including giving herself the name Chiaki Matsuda, which she seemed to like despite being too 'idol-like'. She remembered enough to operate a cellphone and call the people in her contact list, to remember a bit more."

"A few calls here and there and she as called to Mami Tomoe's apartment! But stuff suddenly started happening, with a Witch apparently manifesting right then and there! Chiaki, eager to get the pancakes she deserved, quickly came to Mami's rescue, getting into a slight kerfluffle with Sayaka in the process!"

"She managed to subdue the Witch, but not before the Witch calling her a strange name!"

"Directly after that, she visited an old rundown bar that was apparently the one she always went to. It was here that Kyoko - and Pinky - made their debut, harassing poor Chiaki out of the bar! She received an assignment, though, and it's to protect a very popular idol from a kidnapping threat coming from an organization of super-otaku that were really just bad people."

"Ever the professional Magical Girl, Chiaki cased the joint out, ruffling a few feathers along the way while leaving cigarette ashes in her wake! She even got into a spat with the principal, Minase Iori, for treating what seemed to be her best friend Yayoi too roughly. Sulking in her very comfortable chair, Chiaki sat guard, until she realized that she was actually in an illusion - and Yayoi was not who she seemed!"

"With a bit of help from Pinky, Chiaki managed to wake up just in time to rescue Iori and kill some people! Iori seemed to be a bit kinder to Chiaki then, and Yayoi was revealed to be a hired Magical Girl by the name of Hanegawa Midori. Midori, who was supposed to be a throwaway mook, was sent off to the Silent Room for interrogation, while Iori was taken care of by Mami and the rest!"

"This mission also saw the first instance of golden weapon corruption - or even the knowledge that they corrupt to begin with. The first golden weapon spotted in the story, of course, is Pinky's Desert Eagle - a weapon that Chiaki mysteriously ended up having after the Iori incident. The second was the katana in Kirika's possession - Kirika being the Magical Girl Chiaki was supposed to retire."

She was also identified as a Callidus, the type of magical girl much more suited for espionage and subterfuge, the sort that used their magic to blend into the environment and remain invisible. The idea of getting her into the Ninth Officio took root here."

"After that, another mission came for Chiaki, in the form of escort duty for Minase Iori. She wore a maid outfit for the duration of this mission, pretending to be Iori's servant. The mission ended in quite the bloody manner, with one of the guests proving to have a Golden Weapon in his possession. Tiny Pete, a walking suit of armor, came into play here, going toe-to-toe with a huge daemonized Kilgore. Chiaki finished him off with a few well-placed sniper rounds."

"Midori was re-contracted to Kyuubey immediately after the event, following a...certain misunderstanding between Chiaki and Iori."

You know, for all the issues I have with anon-kun, they're mostly performance (holy shit does it lag at times) and community-related - reading a quest there really shows how impractical the *chan-interface is for quest running. Simply having a vote-counter, sidelined chat (though the aforementioned performance issues makes it a pain at the moment) and that holies of holies, an ability to schedule sessions and a place for the quest runner to update if things come up in-between sessions are enormous improvements.

If only most quests weren't either /u/ or had a worse playerbase than even /tg/ manages.

I don't think you guys get it when I mention lewd things about Pinky's thighhighs.

I've been having dreams. actual dreams of being tied up and blindfolded as I feel the caress of her bloodied fingernails across my chin. Her gaze staring down at me like the pathetic bag of meat I am as she tells me to lick the uppermost edge of her stockings like a dog. Her cold hands guiding me as she makes it clear that her claws can rend me into ribbons for her hair at any moment. The flowery smell of her skin corrupted by the stench of gore and carrion. It is truly bliss.

This base was staffed by none other than Misaka's older brother, Souji, and the Ninth's former Warmaster, Valnikov Kharn, who also had the dubious title of The Betrayer."

"After making some hasty preparations and saying goodbye to Iori, Chiaki flew off to Siberia, taking along Misaka and Midori with her. During the flight, Pinky paid Chiaki a visit, telling her about the Golden Weapons and how she must collect every single one."

"Chiaki soon met up with Kharn, who seemed to know her In fact, it was revealed by Kyuubey that they've been friends of a sort, before her amnesia somehow relapsed. They were close friends along with a Culexus named Malal."

"Kharn quickly arranged a bear hunting party to get things started, but the ambush of Wakaba Mirai interrupted things. It was discovered that Wakaba Mirai was a part of the Pleiades Saints, the Tenth Incubator's elite Magical Girl squad - and she was sent to retrieve Midori. Pleasure soon quickly turned into business as Chiaki lead Kharn and Midori into Mirai's bear trap, and hell broke loose. Kharn was able to dispatch Mirai, while Chiaki ran into some trouble with Kirika's katana, the Golden Weapon that had turned Kirika into a slavering lunatic before she was retired."

"The katana turned Chiaki into something approaching that, until Midori somehow stopped her. She came to her senses soon after, although not without difficulty, and not without having already dealt some grievous wounds to Midori herself. Thankfully, they were able to get back to base, and that's where Kharn started to regale Chiaki of tales about the past."

"Chiaki learned through Kharn about how she was found in a Barrier, and that she did hang out with her and a Culexus named Malal. She also learned the antics that the two get up to quite a bit, and how Kharn saved her from execution by a bald-faced cunning maneuver that even had Kyuubey impressed. It was also here that Chiaki was given the name Murderface, a name she would be known by a lot of people for quite a long time."

"Formally attached to the Warmaster's retinue, Chiaki was taken along for a meeting with the Third Warmaster, for the sole purpose of negotiating the payment for the Eversors that Chiaki herself killed in a fit of anger (three squads worth). Before the meeting, though, Kharn met with a beautiful pink-haired young woman, who introduced herself as Faust."

"The meeting went predictably awry, with Kharn leading the attack and thirsting to mobilize the Ninth Officio into a full scale offensive. A hundred magical girls were slain on the spot - the Third's - before the trap itself came into fruition. Ahriman, the Third Warmaster, had a golden weapon in her possession, and it seemed it needed sacrifice to do its dark duty."

"Ahriman, transforming into a winged demon, then began to do her level best to kill Kharn and Malal, with the help of her equerry Erebus. Murderface was knocked out early in this match, followed by Erebus who very nearly did Kharn in. Malal took the brunt of Ahriman's attacks, long enough for Kharn to get the final blow in - with a pair of golden weapons that the Blessed Lady herself gave her. Pinky's gifts."

"After that - and a rather disturbing turn of events that had Chiaki wandering the base on her own - it was decided that the main reason for this 'vacation' was to be jumped ahead of schedule: the treatment that would render Chiaki immune to the Golden Weapons' corruption, or at least temporarily halt its progress. It seemed to go without a hitch, until Chiaki woke up with no memory of who she was."

"It was decided that Wakaba Mirai was to be interrogated at this point, so after a rousing match where Chiaki made contact with the soul of a Magical Girl inside a Golden Weapon (Kilgore's, two bracelets that turned into massive punching gauntlets), Wakaba Mirai's gem was placed in a simulacra of a Magical Girl's body, in order to be interrogated."

"The interrogation didn't go exactly as planned, with the Tenth Incubator seemingly forcing Mirai's soul gem to Witch Out inside the Silent Room where it was being interrogated in. Midori and Kharn, who were with her at the time, managed to escape. Chiaki did not."

"Without wasting time, Midori came to Chiaki's rescue, teleporting herself into the barrier."

"Stumbling through the nightmare - with only a hypogun and a teleport beacon in hand - Midori soon found herself reluctant allies with Pinky, who volunteered her help in finding Chiaki. It seemed that Chiaki was split into four separate beings, with distinct and different personalities. The first of which Midori found in a simulacra of Mitakihara Middle School. The second was found in a replica of Charles' bar. The third, they managed to subdue with the help of Mirai and Malal - who seemed to be doing just fine in a nested barrier. Mirai was her old self, although she seemed to be hiding something. Malal was her usual mysterious Culexus self. Things seemed to look up then, until Kharn came into the picture. Apparently, she'd teleported herself into the nightmare as well, looking for her last swordfight. Midori drove her away with a heated exchange of slaps and coarse language."

"They set out after a few hours' rest for the fourth - and they found her in a clearing, surrounded by ghosts carrying Golden Weapons. The encounter turned deadly, as Midori was struck down soon after it began. While she lay dying, Madoka - a benevolent Madoka, with amber eyes - helped her up and told her that she needed to make Chiaki whole again. With her help, such a feat was managed, a feat that almost failed when the second fragment - who was the most Chiaki-like of the four - went berserk on the fourth, killing her and making her the last fragment still alive. Through conviction, the second fragment was brought back, and the process was completed. Chiaki was whole again, and after an intervention from Malal - so was Midori."

We used the hypogun surprisingly little given our insistence we take it

And before we found the fragments Midori actually ran into Pinky in all her insane glory and instead of being turned into a bloody stain teamed up with her like an RPG segment and had a few adventures along the way to finding the first fragment and Midori used her powers to disguise Pinky into a form she would recognize and be comfortable with

On their way to find the second fragment however all hell broke loose when Pinky had to break off to buy Midori and the fragment enough time escape

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 03/25/13(Mon)06:17 No.23871034

You are a Magical Girl, and you're on your flight back to Japan, after a rather rough week in Siberia.

...Yes. It's only been a week. More or less. Even though it felt like half a year. It certainly seemed that way.

You even have the hair to show for it, a long thick mass just hanging down your scalp, down your back, making your neck feel a bit too warm despite the air conditioning. You probably should've tied it back, or something. You thought about getting it cut right there and then, but Midori was quite insistent that you wait until you get back to Japan, at least. She sounded like she was planning something, despite sounding very, very tired. Misaka seemed to like it, anyway.

You glance at the night sky outside the window of the private plane. Narrowing your eyes slightly at your faint reflection.

You're going back home. Back to everyone.

All thanks to a certain green-haired Magical Girl who is snoring in her seat beside you. Both her arms curled around yours, her face nuzzled into your shoulder.

...You're just not sure if you're the same person she rescued, or something else.

Or some water.

It's pretty quiet, here, inside the jet. Misaka seems to still be awake - she'd joined you in the return trip, despite seeming like she'd stay back, at first. ...It's obvious that she's not too pleased with what happened with Souji and Kharn, but you did see her give the former Warmaster a grudging hug before dashing up the stairs leading up to the plane.

In any case, she's doing work with Tiny Pete, it looks like. Or what appears to be just a part of him and his helmet - she'd said it was his AI core, where his machine spirit lived, or something. It looked much like a large silver sphere with a lot of wires, the entire thing attached to the inside of the tusked helm. The rest of the giant was stashed in the cargo bay, disassembled and packed into crates.

...Speaking of luggage, Kharn had sent you home with quite a bit. The first was a large metal case, easily as tall as her - the golden weapons, or at least the one not currently in your inventory. Her chainaxes and Kirika's sword. You found the Desert Eagle, funnily enough, hiding inside yours - even though you don't quite have any memory of putting it there in the first place. The bangles are there too, and you remember the conversation you had with the soul residing inside them. Kotaro Yuu, or something...maybe you could talk to her a bit.

The other piece of luggage was a smaller one - in fact, it's only slightly bigger than a shoebox, made of cardboard, and taped shut rather securely. It's a bit heavy, to be sure - but it's not clicking or ticking, at least.

...Unlike your shield, of course. Which has been ticking ever since you got back.

What do you do?

You glance at your phone, specifically the diary app that's proven to be a bitch to unlock the entries in. You'd expect it to be a bit more accommodating now, seeing as you've gone through so much shit in the past few days - but it's still disabled, greyed out and unable to run. You grumble underneath your breath, completely disgusted at the app's temerity, before shoving the device back into your inventory. Stupid thing.

Well, at least you can still check on something. The clicking on your shield, for one. You can do something about that, although you'll have to be careful about it.

You turn your wrist slightly to look at your shield. ...It's still got its scar with the jagged edges on it, that's for sure. Nothing seems to be new. You can still see the gears whirring and spinning inside the thing. ...Of course, you don't quite remember most of them being gold. Or maybe...maybe they were to begin with? You're not sure.

You shake your head at this, before carefully, gently, removing your arm from Midori's embrace. The green-haired Callidus mumbling slightly in her sleep as you do so, deigning to embrace your arm a bit more tightly to her before finally relenting - albeit, with a small frown on her face. You find yourself murmuring an apology, before patting her hand and then rising from your seat. Wincing slightly as various aches and pains come to the fore at the movement.

Taking care of the clicking on your shield is easy. At least, you think it should be. You just have to make sure you're in a safe place to do so, away from both Midori and Misaka. An enclosed space, where at least you'll have a chance to cancel the time stop in case it got out of hand.

...The private jet's lavatory should be alright for that, or at least you think so.

See, now i'm envisaging Midori setting up an awesome entrance for us to return with.

And it involves a hime-ponytail, and a Balalaika outfit replete with cigar and the Warmaster coat.

"Ah, Big Sister Murderface!" Misaka chirps cheerfully as you pass by her. She's sporting a couple of bandaids and bandages on her face and hands - it appears that she got a bit banged up while piloting Tiny Pete - but she's chipper as ever, sitting on the carpeted floor of the plane with tools and various fragments of Tiny Pete scattered around her. The AI core of the hulking murderbot on her lap, the various wires connecting it to the tusked helm on the floor twitching in random intervals. "Going to bathroom?"

...Yeah. Something like that, you reply, reaching out to ruffle the girl's hair, making her giggle and grin. As if she hadn't almost died trying to rescue you.

You'll talk to her later, you decide. Besides, she'd pick up on the fact that you stopped on the way to a bathroom break, and figure out that you're doing something strange instead of attending to nature's call. Misaka's always been sharp like that.

"Okay! Make sure Murderface washes her hands! Murderface sometimes forgets!" She replies, before going back to whatever she was doing with Tiny Pete's core. Immediately preoccupied with her tools, in that intensely-focused way that children can disturbingly switch to in a drop of a hat.

You get to the private jet's lavatory without any other issues. It's...a bit bigger than you thought. It even has a shower, and a small tub. Nothing like the cramped, one-person stall that you once had to hide in during one escort mission, while terrorists hijacked the plane you and your principal had switched to at the last second. You remember the entire flight crashing, and...Malal suddenly appearing to whisk you and your principal out of it before it went up in flames.

You glance at your reflection on the lavatory mirror above the sink. You...look like you've always looked like. Well, except for the long hair. And the fact that there's a tiny dot of crimson in your eyes where your pupils once were. The rest look normal at least - the irises a dark purple, the whites...well, white, if a bit bloodshot.

You take off your glasses and rub your eyes a bit. You should probably look into getting more sleep.

The shield on your right arm is clicking. Louder, faster this time.

You take a deep breath, before grasping the edge of the metallic disc and pushing.

The gears of your shield giving a grinding shriek, as if protesting loudly at the rather rough treatment - and it's then that the color of everything immediately fades into black and white. Time is now yours, free to be bent over a barrel and have your way with.

This is...disconcerting.

She's not around. Pinky - Faust - Madoka is nowhere to be seen in the small lavatory. You even checked behind the shower curtain, just to be sure. Nothing there, although you found the thought of seeing her in the shower momentarily entertaining, a small grin curling your lips.

...No. No, what are you thinking? This is Pinky, here. Get your shit together.

You call out her name, half-expecting your voice to be muted while speaking during a Time Stop - but your voice is clear, or as clear as it can be, what with your throat ravaged by too much alcohol and cigarette smoking. No response. You give everything another once-over, before you decide to step out of the enclosed space you wanted to confront her in. Maybe, just maybe, she's outside - which meant that Midori and Misaka were precisely in the situation that you didn't want them to be in.

Shit.

You all but tear out of the lavatory, nearly tearing the door off its hinges as you make to rush out of the door - when suddenly everything goes dark, courtesy of two gloved hands clamping over your eyes, slipping under your glasses and pressing your eyelids close. The smell of something cloyingly sweet tickles your nostrils, spiced with the scent of fresh blood. Sharp claw points distressingly pressing on the delicate skin of your eyelids, making them itch.

You immediately freeze in your tracks, quite unwilling to have your eyes torn out.

How do you react?

Is it Hanako-san of the Toilet? You ask this as you try to calm your racing heartbeat, quelling the compulsion to reach up with both your hands and pull her hands off of your face. You...you're not frightened, not as such, but she did get you good there, you have to admit. At the very least, you know she hadn't been messing about with Midori or Misaka, or anyone else in the plane. You satisfy yourself instead by letting out what sounds almost like a mildly-annoyed sigh, and adding that you don't really believe in any ghost who chooses to spend her time haunting school toilets.

"Hanako-san...? Oh. Oh! Hee, you're such a kidder, Homura-chan! Wrong guess, though!" Pinky giggles in her usual airy way, before mimicking the sound of a buzzer. "Buuu! You lost your one chance at a special, one-of-a-kind treat! And I was really looking forward to give it to you too!"

It's with another giggle that she removes her hands from your eyes - and you blink them open, before re-adjusting your glasses. You turn around immediately to find Pinky standing behind you, and she's...well, strange. She's holding her hands behind her back, seemingly fidgeting on the spot while studying you with her sunless eyes of hers - much like a child debating on whether or not to confess to something naughty.

"Well, um...welcome back, I guess," Pinky suddenly says, bashfully. "I...I was worried when you got sucked into that Barrier. That wasn't supposed to happen." The pink-haired horror looks away. "I...I thought I'd be able to rescue Homura-chan myself, but I needed THAT thing's help anyway." She pouts as she looks at something over your shoulder, and you turn to follow her line of sight. Midori. ...You don't have all the details from the Callidus yet, and you don't quite remember EVERYTHING about what happened, but...for Midori to work with someone like Pinky to save you, well....

"Don't worry, I didn't do anything to her," The pink-haired girl suddenly snaps at you, and you realize that you'd been staring at Midori for far too long. "I'm not that kind of person, Homura-chan. Sure, I'd pull apart anyone who wanted to steal you from me, but she helped me, too. So I'm going to fight fair with her, at least where you're concerned."

...That's comforting, at least. You're really not sure what's going on here, but--

"Ah, Homura-chan, you're stupid!" The tip of Pinky's shoe cracks against your shin, and you wince at the sudden stab of pain. "You're supposed to be put together back again! Why are you still being stupid about a girl's feelings?!"

In...in your defense, you were hoping to see her in the shower...? Was that what she wanted to hear?

"Idiot!"

How do you respond?

Well, here you are, then. You're some couple of hundred feet over ocean, inside a self-propelled flying aluminium coffin, having stopped time itself to have an awkward conversation with a pink eldritchian terror - who is blushing and pouting at the same time, in what could be in a cute way (if one found completely-black eyes and sharpened teeth cute). Sometimes you don't really get how you manage to throw yourself into this kind of situations.

...You take her pouting a bit harder at you as a sign that you should continue the conversation, and you do so - asking her about what really happened in the barrier. Yes, you're put back together. That much your remember, but everything else is a bit spotty, even after hearing it from Midori.

"...Midori-chan was really brave," Pinky says after a moment, eyes downcast, grinding the toe of her shoe into the carpet. "She saved me from the scary Homura-chan, the one with the ugly armor and teeth and spikes and all that. That Homura-chan was mean, really," She looks up at you with a child's distressed expression, both gloved hands reaching up to pat at her eyes. "Stuck both her thumbs into my face, screaming about how I should stop acting like a brat and stop making people suffer! The nerve! As if she'd forgotten just whose fault everything is, really!"

...Yes, well. You can see how that might sour her mood.

"I...I don't remember much about what happened after that, to be honest," Pinky says after another period of awkward silence between the both of you. "Well, u-um, Kharn did help me get to a safe place, but everything after that..." She shakes her head. "It's just a blank, really..."

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 03/25/13(Mon)10:12 No.23872756

>>23872743

But why go through all the trouble, then? The both of you know that...well, it was your fault in the first place, what happened to her. What happened to everything. Wouldn't it have been convenient for her to just leave you there to die?

Pinky looks up at you, her sunless eyes wide in horror. "W-what? I...I'd never leave you in a place like that, Homura-chan! A-at least, not before throwing you in there myself!" She shakes her head in abject denial, both clawed hands reaching up to clamp over her ears. "N-no, no, shame on you for even suggesting such a thing! I'd never stoop to something that low, Homura-chan! Perish the thought!"

Then why--

"Because I GET TO KILL YOU MYSELF!" The sudden scream rocks you back on your heels, and it echoes inside your mind like a screeching wail. "YOU DON'T GET TO DIE, NOT THAT EASILY, WITHOUT BEING REMINDED OF YOUR MISTAKES!"

For the briefest moment do you see Pinky's face twist into the monstrosity that you'd encountered, on that abortive elevator trip down the Siberian Base's depths - insane, murderous justice given form of a twisted, malevolent goddess. A moment more, and her visage flickers back into the smiling face of Kaname Madoka.

"Besides, you haven't gotten all twenty yet! Four is a nice number, though, very lucky!" Pinky giggles, all smiles once more.

. . . You probably should abandon this line of questioning. Yes, fine.

What about that treat, then...? What did you just miss out on?

"Oh, that!" Pinky blinks. "Um, well...I guess it's a warning, I guess? A hint of a sort! About Mami-san!"

How do you react?

A warning about Mami...? If this is about her whisky pancakes, then you don't really need to be warned away from them, no. You appreciate the thought, though.

"W-what? Whisky pancakes...? Er, no, that's not what I'm supposed to warn you about..." Pinky's brow furrows. "Wait, Mami-san can make whisky pancakes? You can make pancakes with whisky in them?"

...Sure? You mean, no, you don't really know how to make them yourself, not the way Mami makes them, but if she could do that and have you end up in the Silent Room going cold turkey for weeks on end...then you're pretty sure that they can be made.

"I'll...probably have to look up on how to make them, then..." Pinky murmurs underneath her breath, before shaking her head and stamping her foot. "W-wait! The hint! Yes, it's not about those stupid things! I'm supposed to warn you about something that'll happen to Mami-san soon, but since you didn't guess who I was earlier, you're not getting it!" She sticks out her tongue at you, which would have been cute, if not for the fact that the gesture doesn't really translate when the one doing it has blood-pinked, pointy teeth. "Nyah, nyah! Stupid Homura-chan!"

You frown at this. You're...well, you realize that you're at fault of all this, somehow, and that if you step one wrong way here, you could very well get your heart torn out. But she can give you a break, can't she? Can't things go your way just once?

It's then that you decide to throw caution to the wind and offer her a deal. What if you give her something in exchange for the treat? A treat of your own, in fact. Something she'd probably like, and something you should've given to her long ago.

"Eh?" Pinky blinks at this, suddenly puzzled. "W-what would that be, Homura-chan? I--" Her words trail off into silence as you step closer to her, a small smirk on your face, and for once you realize that you're a bit taller than her, from the way she's looking up at you, her black eyes completely wide. "Homura-chan...?"

You give the pink-haired horror a hug. Embracing her smaller, slightly-warmer frame against yours, despite feeling every cell of your body reflexively flinch at this, despite her sweet-smelling, cloying perfume filling your lungs and nearly making you choke.

You thank her for saving Midori, and...well, yourself, too. While you're under no illusions of what happened between the both of you - the heart-ripping and face-shooting and so on - that doesn't mean you can't be civil like this every now and then.

Pinky squeaks in your grasp, wriggling slightly - and it's then that you feel her hands alight gently on your shoulders. For one terrible moment you imagine her claws suddenly sinking deep into your flesh and then ripping downwards, but all she does is to push you back slightly, her shoulders shaking.

Is...is she crying?

"...Too nice," Pinky sobs. "You're...you're too sweet, all of a sudden, Homura-chan...! You're not supposed to be like this to me! You're...you're supposed to hate me! I don't understand...!"

She pushes against you, again, a bit more firmly, this time, and you let her squirm out of your grasp. The Shield on your arm suddenly clicking again, quickly, furiously. You glance down at it, frowning at how ill-timed it is - and when you look back at Pinky, she's wiping away the tears of blood tracking down her cheeks.

"The...the hint is that..." She hiccups loudly, squeaking as she did so, and she shakes her head in irritation. "Mami-san will die unless you kill the Prophet first!"

The...the Prophet? What's that?

"I don't know! S-someone! And this time, it's not my fault, too!"

You step forward to ask her more questions, to get a clearer answer - you've had enough of this cryptic bullshit, you get enough from your phone as it is - when your Shield suddenly snaps back into its original position with a shriek of metal. The world regains its color as time moves on once more - and you're left standing stupidly outside the lavatory, with Misaka looking up at you from her seat.

"Eh? Murderface, why are you back out so soon?" The girl asks you, puzzled. "Doesn't Murderface need to poop? Is...is there no tissue paper in bathroom?"

How do you respond?

>> Going through the Meguca-Database on Megucas who might have some sort of prophetic powers after contraction

>> Find out why Jyubey is hellbent on getting back Midori

>> Get revenge on Jyubey for detonating that soulgem, prdferably by killing him to death.

>>Try to prevent the Saints from going after you and/or save them from their Incubator

I still believe that an incubator being able to instantly make Megucas Witch-out by pressing the Self-destruct button might be some kind of a big deal in this setting.

"Is that so?" Misaka blinks at your rather sheepish explanation, before she nods - but not without a frown. "Mmm, okay. But, ah, Misaka does not like it when Big Sister Murderface is smoking, you know? Smoking is bad for you, even if you're a Magical Girl! Misaka says this because Misaka looked into side effects of nicotine on someone's respiratory system!"

But she didn't mind at all before, way back then. What changed her mind now?

"Because Murderface is Misaka's big sister, now! Murderface now more important to Misaka than ever before!"

You grin at this, before walking toward to her and ruffling her hair again.

Despite the fact that you'd just gone through another one of Pinky's heart-racing tantrums, Misaka still could make you smile like nothing happened. She's a special kid, you'll admit that.

"Midori-chan doesn't like Big Sister Murderface smoking either, you know." The brown-haired russian arms dealer resumes work on the AI core on her lap. "She says she plans to hide Big Sister Murderface's cigarettes in places where she cannot find them!"

...She said that, didn't she? Well. You'll have to see about that, then.

It seems that you can talk to Misaka for a bit, here. You can also rifle through the box Kharn gave you, which is stashed under the seat you left earlier.

What do you do?

[]Talk to Misaka.

You decide to leave Misaka to her work. She looks like she's well and preoccupied with Tiny Pete already - and while the sight of her in bandages and such isn't all that nice of a sight to begin with, she seems chipper enough. You give her another affectionate pat on the head, before walking back to your seat, intent on finding out just what kind of package Kharn gave you. You pull it out from under your seat, before placing it on your lap just as you sit down.

A nagging thought pricks at the back of your mind as you try to find a tape edge to worry with a fingernail. Pinky's warning, as cryptic as it was, couldn't have been more direct. Tomoe Mami would die unless this Prophet died. Which meant that you needed to kill someone to ensure the survival of someone important to you. That was simple enough, nothing you haven't done before.

But who? What kind of prophet? Did she mean a Magical Girl with...with precognition, perhaps? You've run into those sort of Magical Girls before. You faintly remember a Haruka, one with blonde hair, but that was a long time ago, and-- oh, for fuck's sake.

In frustration, you pull the combat knife from the sheath strapped to your ankle - and with the point, you carefully slice through the tape adhering the lid onto the box. Kharn must've used an entire fresh roll of the stuff on the damn thing!

After a few more moments, you finally get the lid off. You pull it away and peer into the box's contents, curious as to what needed so much taping up. The former Warmaster did say that it was the package that Malal said to keep for you - along with a few additions from Kharn herself.

Well. This is...a surprise.

There is what appears to be a disassembled skull inside the package. It doesn't look like a real skull - you're pretty sure the normal skull isn't supposed to have tabs and slots and such, the sort you find in a plastic kit. A skull also isn't supposed to have something resembling a cybernetic eye implant poking out from its sockets, or an antennae, or such. Or inner machinery. Or a slot for triple A batteries. Or a Made in china stamp at the bottom. And the word REMOV scrawled on its forehead with permanent black marker.

...Did Malal leave you with a skull servitor toy? This was all the rage back then, and you faintly remember Kharn having one for a while. ...On second thought, you also remember that she did in fact name her skull servitor toy Remov, and you've stumbled on her using it as some sort of vocal diary, so--

Before you could continue your train of thought here, you see a piece of paper folded and stuffed into one of the skull servitor's eye sockets. You pull it out - it's been folded that way for a long time, by the look of the creases - and you read the short message written there.

>You'll need this, someday.
>Fill in the missing blanks and all.
>Kharn's thoughts, along with my own.
>Have Yuma look at it and assemble it for you. It needs some fixing.
>Take care of yourself, and don't drink too much.
>Malal

The only other item from the box - at least, from what you can tell - is Kharn's old Warmaster Cap. The golden piping has a few parts where it's stained red with blood, but...it's the real deal, that much is obvious.

You take it out of the box and turn it over. There's a note folded inside it, too, and you unfold it to read. What you see is rather careful, if stilted handwriting - the kind of stiltedness that comes with writing with blade for hands, most probably.

Heh. Kharn.

...Well, that's handy. You could give that to Kyoko, Sayaka did ask you to get one for the red-haired Eversor, didn't she?

That seems to be everything inside the box, though. Unless you'd like to rummage around more?

[]Look inside the box for a bit more. Maybe there's something hidden in there? Malal's a tricky one.

[]Close the box and try the Warmaster cap on. Just...to see how it looks. See how it feels.

You rummage around the box for a bit, while being careful with the more delicate-looking pieces of the disassembled skull servitor toy. If you remember correctly, Malal has a penchant for...well, hiding stuff for you to find later, things that you may find handy at one point in the future. She had that kind of mind that would think about every eventuality, narrow them down to which has the highest probability of happening - as well as the lowest - and prepare for those. She was never caught unaware.

...well, except when she died, of course. You don't remember much of that, yourself, and Kharn was pretty mum about that. She didn't even spill it the night before you left, when you and her got horribly drunk. The both of you giggled and laughed and cried and cursed about everything, and nearly got into a fistfight, but just before the both of you staggered back to your quarters, she mumbled an apology about being such a horrible person - and you only reached up and gave her a pat on the head. Sure, you had to stand on your tiptoes to do so, and had her slouch a bit for you to reach, but there it was.

In any case, your further squirreling about the package reveals what looks like a small white envelope, unsealed. Inside is what looks to be a small wallet-sized picture of a girl with pink hair and crimson eyes, wearing a magical girl costume that was very, VERY familiar. It was obviously a self-taken photo, seeing as the girl was holding a smartphone up with one gloved hand - the other holding a sideways V sign with her fingers over her right eye. A forced smile on her lips.

>No one must know my secret.

>Kaneda Madoka

...Did you just get a photograph of Malal?

There's something else inside the envelope, too. Some kinda strip of fabric, folded carefully.

...It's a pink ribbon. Nearly red, in fact. The same ribbon that the girl is wearing in the picture.

Huh. There's a thing.

You place the ribbon and photograph back in the box. After a bit more searching, you come to the conclusion that there is nothing else hidden, and make to close the box.

Your eyes fall down to the Warmaster cap, the embroidered skull on its face grinning almost cheekily at you.

Well, why not? Just for a bit. You're not ratified yet, yes, but you're NEARLY the Warmaster. Surely there isn't anything wrong if you wore the thing for just a few minutes.

You lift the hat of authority carefully from the package, dusting it off, before placing it on top of your head. Pulling down on the sides gently. It's...well, it's a perfect fit. A disturbingly perfect fit. Yet another precaution of Malal's, perhaps?

You turn to glance at your own reflection on the nearly-reflective surface of your seat window.

. . .Not too bad, you decide. It clashes a bit with your costume, but...you could see yourself wearing it. Maybe with a greatcoat, like Kharn's. With the epaulettes and everything.

"You, get me something to drink." You growl at one, pointing at her. "You. Get Mami over here, have her make me pancakes. You. Fill Sayaka's locker with toothpaste." A grin bares your teeth. "You, take your clothes off--"

You stop at that last thought, before reaching up and ripping the hat from your head.

...You're tired. Yes. That wasn't Kharn's eccentricity bleeding out into the hat and influencing whoever wore it. You're tired, you need some sleep. Maybe you should get some rest.

You stuff the hat back in the box, jam the lid on the top and slide it back under your seat. Your motions making Midori squirm beside you, her arms seemingly curling around yours once more. You let her - she'd deserved that much - and you pull off your glasses and lean back, closing your eyes.

Sleep comes disturbingly easily, but it's...strange. As if it'd been waiting for you all along.

You open your eyes again, and...this time, you find yourself standing inside a bar. It looks like Charles' bar, but different. For one, the lighting's bad - it's faint, not illuminating so much as making the darkness dirty. It smells faintly of blood and death and stale whisky, and you've the slightly sinking feeling that there are bodies strewn around the floor or lying propped up in corners, with flies buzzing around them. Some of them are wearing Magical Girl uniforms, each one recognizable.

You take a step forward. The sticky crunch of broken glass drowned in blood crinkling a merry tune underfoot. At the noise, the bar's lone occupant turns to look at you. A young woman, probably your age, with tired eyes and brown hair that looks as if it'd been braided tightly before but had only been untied now, as if deciding that she's much too old for them. She's wearing a pink longsleeved sweatshirt with a checkered pattern at the chest - and what appears to be a horrendous amount of blood splashed on her front. Her skirt, a dark maroon, is torn and ripped, but she doesn't seem to mind.

"...Hey." She murmurs, her voice managing to sound much more...ravaged than yours, despite being quite clear and free of any damage sustained by drinking or smoking. "Wasn't expecting you this early. Can I buy you a drink?"

You glance at the bar. There doesn't seem to be anyone staffing it, but the bottle racks are full of Kong bottles. ...As for the girl, she seems to be drinking a tall glass of the stuff. Beside her glass is an ordinary-looking kitchen knife, the surface made dull through years of use in the kitchen. It doesn't even gleam, but it does look sharp.

You take a seat on the bar beside her. Sure, you reply, after getting yourself settled. Anyone can buy you a drink. But they should at least have the courtesy of telling you who the hell they are, and where you are right now at the moment.

"...Wendy." She replies, a small smile on her face. Her accent is...strange. Fluent Japanese, sure, but with the sort of hesitation that Americans had. "When they told me the new Warmaster of the Ninth had a mouth, I wasn't expecting this. Anyway, hold on." She turns towards one corner of the bar, where...a shadowy figure seems to be, where it wasn't a moment before. The girl whispers something to this shadow, and it disappears.

You blink at this, and it's then that you realize that you've been holding a glass full of Kong Whisky all along. ...You don't even remember picking it up from the counter, where its paper coaster is.

"Freaky. I know. Don't think too much about it. I don't." The girl murmurs, before knocking her own glass back, downing it like a champ. She exhales as she places the drained glass down. "You're in a dream. More specifically, you're in my head. Or...or maybe I'm in yours. I'm not clear on that either." She nods at you. "But this isn't the first time we met. I bet you don't even remember who introduced us, do you?"

...No, no you don't.

"...S'okay. Not your fault." She holds out her glass to you, as if asking for a toast - and you oblige her, your full glass and her empty one clinking together. You take a sip from yours, wincing at how it tasted like...like...well, whisky.

"Don't stress out over it. It doesn't matter, much." Wendy swirls the...what appears to be blood in her glass. "What's going to grind your gears later on are the questions that's been bouncing around in your head for the past few weeks. Which are...well, what I've been wondering about too."

Really? What questions are they?

"Oh, that's easy." She seems to smile a bit tiredly at this. "The first one - do you like hurting other people? The second - who's left all of those diary entries in that smartphone of yours?" She places her glass down on the counter, and picks up the knife. "...And finally, the third - why are we having this conversation?"

Silence, between the both of you.

And then--

The Golden Desert Eagle is in your hand even before she started moving. A flurry of movement, your glass ending up smashing on the floor into a thousand bits and pieces - and you feel the stinging kiss of a well-honed blade cutting a millimeter into the skin of your neck, just as you press the barrel mouth of your gun against her forehead.

". . .The Blessed Lady protect you, Kong," Is all you hear from her, right before she slices your throat open with one quick flick of her wrist. Her face disintegrates into a meaty hole a split second after that, the rest of her body flying back and smashing into the flicking jukebox in the corner.

You grasp at your throat, the Desert Eagle slipping from your blood-slickened fingers and thudding heavily onto the floor. You can't breathe no matter how hard you try, and the wound's just too big to try and clasp closed. ...She probably sliced you open near to the bone...

You collapse to the floor, choking all the while, trying to pull breath into your lungs with sickening futility.

The moment that you die is the moment you wake up, again. Back inside the plane, beside Midori.

A quick glance at your smartphone says that it hasn't even been ten minutes since you last checked it.

God dammit.

Really, 3 aides, isn't that a bit excessive? Usually a warmaster has just one, having 3 of them would just tell other offices and warmasters that our office lacks skilled magical girls.
People should think of ramifications of their choices instead of trying to build a harem everywhere.

Midori seems to have a lot of potential, given Malal's wholehearted endorsement and the whole Sibera arc stuff, but that's also a potential weakness for her: she's inexperienced. She doesn't seem to have a lot of experience in dealing with people, and will certainly be thrust far outside of her comfort zone if she formally becomes Warmaster's Aide. I don't doubt that she'll help Chiaki grow immensely both as a Warmaster and as a person, but she doesn't necessarily compensate for many of Chiaki's weaknesses. Not to mention the possible backlash from appointing her as an aide; I'm sure the rank-and-file may be OK with that given their infatuation with the Magical Midori series, but it may further inflame Jyubey and make irk a few other Officios. Not to mention that she's been part of the Officio for barely a week. If she gets appointed, she will need to learn quickly and accomplish much to prove that this was an unconventional but great idea.

Kyouko's probably the best choice, professionally speaking, but Sayaka needs to be placated or dealt with. If Malal's tenure was any indication of how an Aide will work, then Kyouko may as well be Chiaki's shadow. There was talk of creating another position for her that won't effectively demote her from Rank Leader while allowing her more time with Kyouko. Perhaps something along the lines of a Vice Warmaster? If she thinks that she can do a better job than Chiaki, then she'll get a chance to move up to a more influential position within the Officio and prove it.

As for Yuma, we don't know much about her other than that she's apparently good with machines and is a bit of an otaku.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Protoculture 03/31/13(Sun)07:58 No.23975171

You are a Magical Girl, and after spending two very eventful weeks in Siberia, you've finally returned to Mitakihara, Japan. Midori, the girl who saved your life by jumping into two overlapping Witch Barriers, woke up just as the plane touched down, and had immediately grabbed on to you, a panic-stricken look on her face as frantically asked if the both of you were out of the barrier already.

You reassured her that you are, and to prove it, you waved your copy of Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi in her face, allowing yourself a small smile when she immediately got flustered and told you to put it away.

She also went off to gently wake Misaka up for your disembarkation, as well as to help her put back the tools she used in tinkering with Tiny Pete's AI.

...You'd find this situation amusing - the way Midori chided and fussed carefully over Misaka reminded you of a mother with her child - if it weren't for the fact that you just had a nightmare where you got your throat cut open by a girl who called herself Wendy. A split second before you shot her in the face with the Golden Desert Eagle.

Not to mention Pinky's cryptic warning, delivered after one of her trademark tantrums. Something about Tomoe Mami dying, unless you killed someone called 'The Prophet'.

...You can't take it easy like this.

You disembark a few minutes later, with a loading truck and a company limousine parked just beside the plane's staircase itself. As you descend, you notice a familiar figure waiting for you, in her dark red Magical Girl costume - Kyoko, with her sword guard eyepatch and everything. She's wearing a rather fluffy-looking woolen blue scarf, and what could be an expression similar to a kid just raring to get at her wrapped Christmas presents.

. . .Kyoko can really be transparent, can't she?

Behind you, Midori is carrying the over-large piece of luggage that bore the golden weapons. She's having a hard time with it, but even when you volunteered to carry it yourself, she shook her head and valiantly pushed on. You've stashed Malal's package in your inventory, just to make sure it's in a safe place.

"O-oi, Murderface! Welcome back!" The red-haired Eversor greets you loudly and energetically as your heeled feet finally hit the tarmac. She holds out her hand to you, grinning all the while.

You look down at the hand, before reaching out and clasping her wrist, as she does yours. Typical salute between Eversors, but something that Kyoko always made whenever she met you. ...You remember Sayaka doing this, too, way back then.

"I'm the one driving you back to Headquarters -- whoa, what's with the new hair?! How'd it get so long so quickly?!" Her one eye nearly boggles at this. "Is this an image change? Did you break up with someone or what...?"

How do you respond?

By the way.

I guess the Siberia incident somewhat changed Chiaki, right?

I guess she still would be socially awkward but we did gained an ability to express ourselves in something else than deadpan and pokerface?

"Oh, classified information, huh? Well, fair's fair. I won't ask anymore, unless you really feel like talking." Kyoko nods in understanding. It's then that she looks over at your two companions.

"Ahaha, welcome back too, Misaka-chan, Midori-chan! Hopefully Murderface didn't give you too much trouble!...Wait, why do you have bandages...?"

"Big Sister Murderface didn't make trouble...!" Misaka lies in the sleepy yet cheerful way that kids always do when they're tired. "A-and, um, Misaka fell down some stairs! Was accident!"

"...Yeah, okay. Sure!" Kyoko seems to buy it, although her one eye focuses on you for a split second, before it gets closed again in her cheerful grin. Midori, on her part, is being wisely quiet about this - although you figure it's her straining with the luggage that's got her occupied.

"A-ah, let me get that for you," Kyoko hurries forward, taking the luggage from Midori. The Callidus looks over at you for a moment, as if to ask permission, and you nod. Kyoko would be fine just carrying it - Kharn did verify that it was safe to carry something that contained the golden weapons, so long as there was no direct contact with them in the first place.

"You'd better get in, then," The Eversor says as she places the luggage in the trunk, soundly locking it after shoving it shut. "Kyuubey wants to get your full report on what's happened back there. Mami-san's waiting for you, too, along with a few VIPs." You could almost hear the smirk in her voice. "Oh, and...blue roses? Well, er, there's a flower shop on the way, I guess we can get some there." She blinks at you once more. "Didn't peg you for a flower person, much, Murderface, but I guess people change."

...Yeah. They do.

With the rest of Tiny Pete offloaded into the truck and Misaka parting ways with you here - giving you and Midori one last hug goodbye - it's rather wearily that you and Midori pile into the back seat of the limo, while Kyoko herself gets in behind the wheel. Midori immediately falls asleep, clearly still exhausted, leaning her head on your shoulder.

It's...a bit strange, being physically close to someone like this all the time, but...it's not too bad, you gather.

The car rumbles smoothly into life, and you watch as familiar civilization whips past you. Cars. Buildings. Mitakihara's nightlights, lighting up the dark.

It's good to be back. Relatively speaking.

...You could really use a cigarette.

"So, how was Siberia, Murderface?" Kyoko says after a moment, seemingly intent on small talk. You catch her questing gaze in the rear view mirror, her one crimson eye twinkling. "You don't hafta talk about anythin' classified if you don't want to. Just give me some bits you could let go! Like, how was it trainin' with the Betrayer an' such?" The Eversor grins at this. "Ah, what I would've given if I got the chance to do something like that!"

Clearing your throat a couple of times, you give Kyoko the summarized version of events that happened in Siberia, redacting the details you're not quite sure you should be spreading around just yet (at least, not without Kyuubey being told first, as much as you dislike the furry little bastard). You do this in an uninterrupted stream of words muttered deadpan, and to her credit, the red-haired Eversor keeps quiet throughout the entire thing, her one eye focused on the road yet wide in wonder. It's at the last bit - where you tell her about getting her a furry hat - that you reach into your inventory, grab it from the box it was stored in, and toss it onto her lap. The black bear-fur ushanka making a rather heavy noise as it drops.

"A furry hat? O-oh, wow, I...I've always wanted this, I really wasn't expecting you to get one and WHAT THE HELL KHARN'S PREGNANT?!"

You wince at the shout, and nudge at the back of the driver's seat with the toe of your shoe. You grumble at her to keep it down, Midori's sleeping.

"S-sorry. I...really, thank you for this thing, it...it still smells like bears, hahaha! Oh, man, everyone's gonna be so jealous back at the Officio!" Kyoko guffaws, taking one hand off the wheel to hug the strange headgear to her, much like a child cherishing a stuffed animal. "Hehe, wait'll Sayaka-chan sees this!" There's a moment, before she narrows her one eye at you. "B-but, about Kharn, you're shitting me, right? About her being pregnant?"

...No. Maybe. Well, you're not too sure, but you have your suspicions.

"...Man. Who'd have thunk it. I mean, I'd have put my money on Mami-chan first, but Kharn..." Kyoko shakes her head slowly. "Whoever got her knocked up must've been SUPER hardcore."

An image of the reedy, white-haired young man scowling at you in a wrinkled lab coat comes up in your mind, and you smile slightly at this.

Heh. Super hardcore. Right.

You look out the car window as you try to describe Souji as charitably as you can without lying your ass off. You end up telling the red-haired Eversor the bare specifics about him - his white hair, how he wore a coat most of the time, and how good he was with his hands. Oh, and how he's on Kyuubey's payroll strictly because of how smart he supposedly is. In any case, you didn't spend a lot of time with him, so you can't really form a complete opinion about him just yet, nor explain the attraction between him and Kharn. But you trust the former Warmaster to be enough of a big girl to make her own decisions based on her tastes, despite her rather disappointing track record about making choices.

"Hah! Yeah. I don't know if you remember, but Kharn made some really bad choices, back when she was still new at this. Malal, that aide of hers, took care of everything after that, and things went over a lot more smoothly since then." Kyoko shrugs at this. "Not her fault, really, since Warmasterin's got two sides of the job - the side where you kill lots of important people, and the side where you talk and deal with important people without killin' em. Load of bull if you ask me."

Yeah. You're not exactly looking forward to that bit.

"Oh, hey, speakin' of which! Is that offer still on the table, and stuff? Like, you want me to be your aide and such?" Kyoko turns to look at you while the car's stationary at a stoplight. "Me an' Sayaka's talked it over. I want to, anyway, but she wants to talk to you personally first before I make a decision." A moment. "I-it's not that I don't want, ya know? But she wants to hash some things out with you personal-like, before anything." Another moment, this time much more awkward than the first. "Just...don't kill each other when you do meet up, alright?"

You'll...try your best not to. You only hope Sayaka would do the same.

Well, anyway. What's this about Mami being pregnant?

"Ohh, nah, that's just a pool that's gettin' tossed around the water cooler. Some girls gettin' boyfriends, doin' stupid stuff without protection, that kinda thing. Kyuubey had Mami talk to the entire Officio about that during the last all-hands meeting. Completely red in the face throughout the entire thing." Kyoko laughs at this. "But, uh, yeah, rumor has it she's got a boyfriend, some dude in college. But that ain't the only rumor, of course. Well, Sayaka's in line for Eversor Rank Leader, probably the best choice for the job now that Kirika is dead. If she has a problem with her girlfriend working directly with us, we should listen to her seriously. We're going to be running the whole Officio so we should at least keep a cordial, working relation with the girl in charge of our shock troops.

If that means telling Kyouko that we'll have to rethink our offer, then I think we should. Kyouko is mature enough to deal with it.

You tell Kyoko that the offer's still on the table, pending some modifications and approval by the mutant cat. And since she brought Sayaka up, yes, you'll be consulting her chromatic opposite about the matter - so long as Kyoko doesn't get angry at you just in case you need to shoot off Sayaka's legs just to make her listen.

Kyoko makes a face at this. "What, like you did to Midori? Aw, come on, Murderface. You know I hate seein' the both of you at each other's throats like that. Just...I don't know, shoot her on the shoulder or judo chop her into unconsciousness or somethin'." The stoplight turns green, and the limousine moves on again. "Not like you can't do those things, you've done them before. Didn't like it one bit when you did, I gotta tell ya, and I came close to guttin' you for it, but she was kinda baitin' you. So I couldn't exactly blame you. But still..." Her voice gets that pleading note that only Kyoko could pull off without sounding like a total git. "Just try to be civil for me, okay, Murderface? I'll count it as a personal favor if ya do."

You did say you'll try, didn't you? She should stop worrying too much, it doesn't suit her.

"Hah! Well, I made you promise, at least. That makes me breath easier." Kyoko beams.

...Anyway, does Kyoko have any details about the people Mami is supposedly seeing? The college dude and the gothic lolita with the American accent?

"Eh?" The Eversor blinks at you from the rear view mirror. "Oh, er. Not...not particularly? I can hunt around for you, though. Send it to your cellphone when I get 'em. Or you can ask Mami-san yourself if ya want, she's waiting for you back at the Officio anyway." She grins, again. "Hah, I shoulda taken a picture earlier. She spent her lunch hour grocery shopping for pancake supplies. In her OL outfit, at that. Never looked so much like a housewife." Kyoko cackles at this.

At this point in the conversation, you'd normally have shut up, unable to talk about anything else. It's not that you've ever been socially awkward - it's just that you've never really considered social stuff as...well, important. It wasn't a priority. And you avoided it whenever possible. Only Mami, and to a certain extent, Kyoko, could force it upon you and not expect more than a grumbled expletive and the cold shoulder as a rebuke. Anyone else, well, you glared into silence or simply did away with force.

But you find yourself...well, wanting to keep the conversation going. Making this probably the longest conversation you've ever shared with the red-haired Eversor. At least, without the influence of alcohol.

You ask her about...well, anything else she can tell you. How did Kyoko fare in the two weeks that you were gone?

Any other gossip she could share with you?

"...Well, aren't you chatty," Kyoko notes, displaying her tendency to be unexpectedly sharp every now and then. "Don't know what happened back there in siberia, but whatever it was, it kinda loosened your tongue a bit." She turns towards you momentarily, grinning. "Kinda like it, to be honest. Didn't really like talkin' to a wall and such."

She shrugs as she watches the road. "Eh, nothing much, to be honest. There was that one time when Sayaka was on recon and she disappeared for a couple of days. Said something about a library, or what. I was worried sick about her, but she came back okay, so...all's good there." Despite her conversational tone of voice, you couldn't help but see the usually-cheerful Eversor's expression darken for just a moment. "I didn't see any one of them Pleiades Saints that you warned me about. Made sure the other Eversors looked out, too, but not a hair of them popped up after you called."

Well, that's something. You make a mental note of this, before asking Kyoko about Yuma, the last Culexus. Does she know how to get in contact with her? It seems that Malal left Kharn a package for the succeeding Warmaster, and it needs to be put back together by a Culexus. That's according to her own instructions.

"Huh, well. That's weird. But I guess if it's from Malal..." The red-haired Eversor says, slowly, giving you the impression that she's picking her words with care. "I just...well, I don't know if she'll be up to talk to you, you know. It's not a personal thing, but...the kid never really got back the same way after..." Kyoko's voice trails off into silence as she frowns. "...Well. After her entire unit died."

...You don't blame her. No one really comes out intact after something like that.

"Anyway, sure, I'll try my best. She should be okay with you, at least, moreso if it's Malal who did the askin'. That kid really liked Malal." A moment. "And boy, did she ever hate Kharn's guts."

Not much of a surprise there. Kharn's an easy soul to like, but at the same time, very easy to hate, too.

"I could get that, yeah. But we Eversors? We adored Kharn. She still got her share of fangirls even after she got sent to Siberia." Kyoko grins, before suddenly easing the car into park, right beside what appears to be a flower shop. You glance out the window, and...see a familiar face. One in a maid costume.

Fabiola...? What's she doing out at this time of night?

"Right, here we are. Flower shop." Kyoko undoes her seat belt. "You want me to get your blue roses or you wanna do it yourself?"
